A concise and thoughtful letter, in which matters are so logically and reasonably discussed, as make it possible to form pertinent opinion as to comparatively a definite time, which the present manipulators will probably select, in which to unload their enormous holdings of stocks, held speculatively by them.

What Bankers Say

New York, Sept. 23.—The best men qualified to give an opinion as to money and the money situation, are the bank presidents of New York. They are dealers in money. That is their trade. Their opinions relative to movements of money are better and more to be considered than the opinions of other people. A number of bank officials were seen regarding the shrinking of reserve, and all said there was no cause for alarm in the situation. One prominent official said there is nothing in the situation to cause alarm. West and south have large sums of money in New York. Naturally they will withdraw much of these funds and will borrow to move grain and cotton. For these legitimate reasons the local banks are liable to lose about fifty million between this time and the middle of December. Money conditions are easy abroad, and gold can be obtained if desired. Grain and cotton will furnish large amounts of foreign exchange, thereby facilitating gold imports. Money will rule high for the balance of the year, but no harm will emanate from that fact. Dumont Clark, president of the American Exchange Bank, said all talk of alarm is utter nonsense. It does not matter if the reserves show a deficit so long as that deficit is the result of honest conditions. And feeling, resulting from Saturday's statement, must be altogether sentimental. President Simmons of the Fourth National Bank said facts speak for themselves. I cannot go into details, but there is no occasion for uneasiness. At the sub-treasury the opinion was expressed that the figures of the bank statement indicated that money was being hoarded for the purpose of inducing higher rates. It was also their opinion that before very long the banks would again be excess as to their reserves, and called attention to a like condition in 1899, at the time of the great industrial exploitation, when such were the results. Those who buy when the market is depressed will make money by so doing; those who sell at such time will regret it when they see higher quotations come for the property they have disposed of.

Our Popular Medical Health Officer

The Lindsay Post, a paper that usually knows what it is talking about, says: "It should be the duty of a Health Board or the executive officer thereof, from time to time to instruct the public concerning the treatment of contagious disease and the maintenance of healthy conditions in the home. Dr. Bingham, Medical Health Officer at Peterborough, appears to be a zealous officer who realizes the truth of the old adage that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and from time to time, through the columns of the press of that town, he imparts information of great value to the householder. We print below a letter that appeared the other day, in which he shows that the patent fumigator used by the Lindsay Board's sanitary inspector is of doubtful efficacy, and that a much simpler plan is followed in Toronto."

—The Gilmour Co. drives will not reach Trenton this fall. The leading drive has been tied up near Campbellford, and then other drives are stranded about 25 miles behind.

—A very unusual occurrence in the movements of migratory birds was lately witnessed in the return of swallows a number having been seen flying over the town on the 6th inst., and again on the 10th, the same as they do on their arrival in the springtime. As these birds take their flight southward about the 20th of August, it is unaccountable why they should make their appearance so late in the season.

MR. SHAUGNESSY CANED

By the Employees of the of the Big Cereal Company's Elevator

On Monday evening at the conclusion of the day's work the employees on the big Cereal Works elevator assembled and waylaid Mr. P. J. Shaughnessy, who has been superintending the work on behalf of the McDonald Engineering Company, of Chicago, and presented him with a gold headed cane.

The following address was ready by Mr. J. R. Sullivan, timekeeper:

Mr. P. J. Shaughnessy, Superintendent Macdonald Engineering Company, Peterborough, Ont —

Dear Sir,—Learning with deep regret of your intended removal from our midst in the near future, we cannot allow you to leave without expressing to you our high appreciation of your services, as superintendent of the work on the elevator.

Since you came amongst us a perfect stranger, some eight months ago, you have by your genial disposition and pleasant manner won the affection of all of us.

In asking you to accept this gold headed cane as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held, we trust that it will be many years before you will have occasion to use it.

We feel assured that wherever you may go you will be successful, as we believe you to be a master of your work.

In conclusion we hope that in your journey through life you will think of the elevator employees at Peterborough.

Signed on behalf of the employees,

J. R. SULLIVAN.
J. GRADY.
W. F. GREEN,
A. GOODFELLOW.

The presentation was made by Mr. W. F. Green, and was acknowledged by Mr. Shaughnessy in a well worded speech.

GOES TO GERMANY

Particular Travellers Demand the Importation of American Articles

"I had drank coffee since babyhood, and although I was very nervous and dyspeptic, I could not and would not believe that the coffee had anything to do with it," writes an American lady now living in Munich, Germany.

"My physician finally convinced me that coffee was at the bottom of all my troubles, and I tried many things to take its place, but nothing satisfied the craving for real coffee. At last, one day in a half-hearted, despairing mood, I bought from the grocer some Postum Coffee Food. My grown-up daughter, who by the way had inherited my taste for coffee and also my nervousness, laughed and said.—'Don't you know that nothing can take the place of well made coffee, half Java and half Mocha, with plenty of rich cream?'

'I firmly believe it,' I replied, but a drowning man will grasp at a straw, and I am getting more nervous every day, and can hardly eat anything at all, and Dr. S., like the rest of the physicians, tells me that it comes from coffee.'

So next morning I personally made a pot of Postum, followed closely the directions — and such a surprise! The color was a rich, dark, winey brown, and a pleasant aroma greeted the nostrils. But the taste—the crucial test! I confess I feared to put it to the test for fear of another disappointment.

But not so with my daughter, who eagerly made the trial and fairly shouted;—'Hurrah! Mamma, you have found it at last.' I tried it and that ended our coffee drinking for good. The flavor was full and rich and left nothing to be desired.

In a short time my dyspepsia disappeared and as for nerves,—my daughter and myself almost forgot that such things existed, until we came to Germany and I had to go back to coffee and we are again as nervous and dyspeptic as we used to be. But we don't intend to let it go on; I have written to America for a good supply of Postum and propose always have it in the future at any cost. Life is miserable to us without Postum.

When we used it, Postum proved the most gentle of comforters and loaded us with benefits in the way of strengthened health and quiet nerves." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Mainly About People.

In pronouncing sentence, a Scotch judge once added: "Ye did not only kill and murder the man, and thereby take away his valuable life, but ye did push, thrust or impel the lethal weapon through the bellyband of his regimental trousers, which were the property of His Majesty."

J. Pierpont Morgan was showing some friends through his kennels the other day, and one of them expressed great admiration for an imported setter. "Yes, he's a fine dog. His name is Russell Sage." "How did you come to give him that name?" "Well, he never loses a scent."

Curran said to Father O'Leary, the wittiest priest of his day, "I wish you were St. Peter." "Why?" asked O'Leary. "Because," said Curran, "you would have the keys of heaven and could let me in." "It would be better for you," said O'Leary, "that I had the keys of the other place." "Why?" asked Curran. "Well, then I could let you out."

Secretary Hay's poem, "Little Breeches," was frequently attributed to the late Bret Harte. A young lady once said to him: "I am highly pleased to meet you, Mr. Harte. I have read all your poems, but I have enjoyed 'Little Breeches' the most." "Pardon me, madam," Harte is said to have replied, "but you have put the 'Little Breeches' on the wrong man."

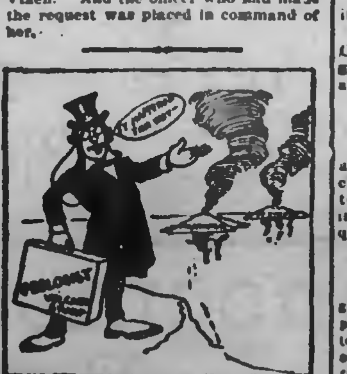
On one of his later birthday anniversaries, United States Senator Hoar wrote to William M. Evarts and congratulated him upon his length of years. In his reply, the aged lawyer said it brought to mind an old lady in New England, who had occasion to write to a friend about some matter of trifling importance, and when she had reached the end of the thirteenth page awakened to the fact that she had been rather diffuse, and added: "Please excuse my longevity."

Samuel Foote, the English actor, was one day invited for a few moments into a club where he was a stranger. Left alone a minute, he did not seem quite at ease. Lord Carmarthen, wishing to relieve his embarrassment, went up to speak to him, but became embarrassed himself and could only say: "Mr. Foote, your handkerchief is hanging out of your pocket." Whereupon Foote, looking around with playful suspicion, and hurriedly thrusting his handkerchief back into his pocket, replied: "Thank you, my lord, thank you; you know the company better than I do."

At one of the great London hospitals a cold storage chamber was being constructed in connection with the postmortem room, and the secretary of the hospital, on going to see how the work was getting on, found that the chamber was being fitted with double doors—and those of small size—instead of one large door. He made enquiries as to the reason for this deviation from the original plan, when the chief carpenter, who was superintending the work, replied: "Oh, sir, we are putting in double doors and a wooden partition in order to keep the sexes apart!"

Two gentlemen who were playing cards at a New York club were very much annoyed by other members who stood behind their chairs and interested themselves in the game. Finally one of the players asked one of the spectators to play the hand for him until he returned. The spectator took the cards, whereupon the first player left the room. Pretty soon the second player followed the example of the first. The two substitutes played for some time, when one of them asked the waiter where the two original players were. "They are playing cards in the next room," was the waiter's reply.

President Roosevelt possesses a characteristic sense of humor. It is vigorous and sometimes almost grotesque. When he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, during the preparation for the Spanish war, the Government was buying a number of yachts to be converted into torpedo-boats, despatch-boats, scouts, etc. Considerable intimacy existed between the family of President Roosevelt and that of one of the officers of the navy in the department. The wife of this officer got a fancy she would like to have one of these beautiful little boats bear her name. There is a prejudice in the navy against giving a woman's name to a war vessel of any type. It is believed to be unlucky. But the officer, who found it easier to face official prejudice than to resist the importunities of his better half, made the request of Mr. Roosevelt. The Assistant Secretary of the Navy hesitated. "It won't do," he said. "I would like to oblige your wife, but a woman's name won't do." Then a thought occurred to him, and he replied. "I will fix it," he said. "Tell your wife it will be all right." The next day the boat was named "The Vixen." And the officer who had made the request was placed in command of her.



Very wise after the event.—Brooklyn "Eagle."

A Difficult Question.

A story of a conversation between a traveler, visiting at a popular resort, and one of the permanent residents, is told by the "Ram's Horn:"

"I am a stranger here, sir; can you direct me to a first-rate church?"

"Oh, yes, right around the corner."

"What sort of a preacher have they?"

"A very good man."

"Interesting?"

"Intensely so."

"Eloquent?"

"Very."

"The best preaching in town, I suppose?"

"Unquestionably."

"What's his name?"

"Ah, my friend, that is a question which modesty forbids me to answer!"

—The opening of the night school at the rooms of the T.A.S. is announced to take place this evening. All members of the society interested in this department are requested to be present.

"Shut your eyes, open your mouth and see what luck will bring you."

The mother smiles at the childish game, and doesn't realise that it is a game she as a woman has perhaps played for a great many years.

Many a woman is weak and sick, nervous and discouraged. She suffers from headache, backache and other ills. She wants to be well, but all she does is to shut her eyes and open her mouth for medicine and trust to luck for results. She "doctors" month after month, often year after year, in this same blind, hap-hazard fashion, and receives no permanent benefit.

Women take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with their eyes open to the fact that it cures womanly ills. It cures irregularity. It dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. There is no trusting to luck by those who use "Favorite Prescription."

"My disease was displacement and ulceration of the uterus, and I was in a terrible condition with pain and weakness and had given up all hopes of ever being well again," writes Mrs. Harry A. Brown, of Orono, Penobscot Co., Me. "Had doctored with four different doctors within four months, and instead of getting better was growing weaker all the time. I decided to try your 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' as I had heard of the many cures resulting from their use. I bought five bottles and felt so much better after taking them that I kept on until I am as well as ever in my life, and to Dr. Pierce all the praise is due. I cannot say enough in favor of his medicines. Before I began taking your medicines I only weighed one hundred and twenty pounds. I now weigh one hundred and sixty pounds. I gained forty pounds in six months. I shall doctor no more with home doctors, as it is only waste of money. I am now in perfect health, thanks to Dr. Pierce."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the muddy complexion.

At the head of the table was a motto, "God Bless the Bride and Groom." The knot was tied securely by staff Capt. Creighton, of Toronto. GOVERNMENT DELAY INJURES TRANSVAAL

War Indemnity to be Levied from Boers Should be Determined

Snaps Finger at London Market—Statement of the Acting Treasurer of New Zealand—German Tariff Bill in Danger

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 24.—A Johannesburg correspondent says the events in the Transvaal every day testify to the folly of delay on the part of the Home Government in declaring its intentions regarding the amount of the war idemnity to be imposed upon the conquered Boers. Industrial development of the Transvaal is at a standstill. A large amount of capital waiting for the official establishment of peace, to be devoted to the development of the country is still locked up in the banks until the intentions of the Government are known. One company has work waiting which will necessitate an outlay of $10,00 a month, but the management hesitates to inaugurate operations at present, owing to the general feeling of mistrust prevailing. This is but one of many cases, showing to what extent the Boer country suffers from enforced activity.

TREASURER REFUSES INFORMATION.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 24—A Wellington despatch says the Acting-Treasurer of New Zealand refuses to inform Parliament how his Government is raising its new loan. The Treasurer has simply said New Zealand could afford to snap its finger at the Lon-don money market.

ANARCHY IN MACEDONIA.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 24—A Vienna correspondent quotes a despatch from Salonica, in which it is said that anarchy is rapidly spreading in Macedonia and the uneasiness of a peaceful portion of the population in general. The Bulgarian bands are directing their attention chiefly toward the Turkish gendarmes, many of whom have been killed. The state of the Balkan Peninsula will continue to grow worse, as never since the Berlin congress has been less prospect of understanding between the powers with a view to collective diplomatic military intervention in any part of the Sudtan's dominions.

GERMAN TARIFF BILL IN DANGER.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 24.—There is a general belief in Berlin, according to a Times correspondent, that, unless the Government can break down the agrarian opposition, or come to terms with it before the Reichstag resumes sessions, Oct 14, the tariff bill will have to be thrown overboard. It is pointed out that if the Government yields on this question now, after all the protestations of Von Bulow and Posadowsky, or if it is obliged to go so far as to abandon the bill, its position is deplorable, in view of certain consequences at next summer's general elections. The proceedings of the Social Democratic Congress at Munich, and particularly the speech of Bebel, show how eagerly Socialists would welcome an electoral campaign on the question of taxing "the food of the people." The Government would be unable to give benediction to agrarian Conservative candidates, whose exorbitant demands have wrecked the tariff scheme.

ETHIOPIAN DISTITINCTIONS.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 24.—The Cape Town correspondent of The Times says the Archbishop of Cape Town, speaking in a native college for the sons of chiefs, emphasised the distinction which, he said, existed between a legal body, called Ethiopian Order of the Anglican Church and the so-called Ethiopian movement engineered from America by educated negroes, which is regarded here with grave anxiety by all persons who are acquanited with native Africans. The American Methodist Episcopal Church authorities deny that their mission has any political significance, but their is strong evidence to the contrary.

CHOLERA EPIDEMIC RAGING.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 24—A correspondent in Alexandria gives alarming statistics of the cholera epidemic raging there. On Monday there were 728 fresh cases reported; the death list reached 618.

The reports of destitution among the Doukhobors are absoultely false, according to the statements of Mr. J. Obed Smith, Immigration Commissioner, who says:

"The Doukhobors are not destitute, and will not need help this winter. They never have obtained any food from the Government. They never have got any special privileges or assistance from the Government. That a few of them in certain villages have turned loose their cattle under the influence of a fanatic preacher is quite true, as it is also true that none of them eat meat, but they have a perfect right to be vegetarians if they wish, and also to quit using beasts of burden. That this diet is good enough to sustain them in the hardest work is shown by the fact that they are well liked as laborers.

"These very villages from which they have driven cattle are building three flour mills this year, and so far from being in want, they have two years' subsistence ahead of them. It is sensational reports that are doing the most harm to these people. They are all right if left alone, and are going on quietly homesteading and falling into the ways of the people."

Indianapolis, Ind. Sept. 24. —President Roosevelt's Western trip came to an untimely end in this city yesterday. He was found to be suffering from a swelling in the left leg between the knee and the ankle, which required immediate surgical attention, and, instead of being taken to the train to continue his journey to Fort Wayne and Milwaukee, he was conveyed to St. Vincent Hospital where he was operated on. After a short rest following the operation, the President was taken to the train on a stretcher and left for Washington.

The swelling of the President's leg was occasioned by a bruise he received at the time of the trolley car accident at Pittsfield, Mass., upon the inner part of the left leg, between the ankle and the knee.

After starting on the Western tour the President's physicians examined the bruise, to which no attention had been paid previously, and determined than an operation was necessary.

Another Story.

In well-informed political circles the failure of the President to complete his tour of the West is attributed to an entirely different source. When the President's campaigning tour was laid out, it was with the purpose that he shoul speak in those states where the Republican party feared defeat in the Congressional elections. After the President started on his tour, Speaker Henderson, the Republican party leader refused to again accept the nomination in his Iowa district for Congress, declaring that the people of his district favored a revision of the tariff, to which he was opposed. President Roosevelt's itinerary carried him through Iowa. He and his party leaders knew the President would never be permitted to speak in Henderson's State without mentioning the tariff difficulties, and as the Republican party's success is based on high tariff principles it was so clearly putting the President into an awkward position that he preferred the other horn of the dilemma, evidently, and abandoned the trip.

Last Thursday night, in a public hall at Brantford, at a spiritualistic seance given by Walter Dudley and Gladys Dudley, man and wife, the woman, while in an alleged hypnotic state, gave what purported to be a description of the murder of the Brantford hotelkeeper, Jas. Quirk, whose mysterious murder has puzzled the Crown authorities completely.

The medium pictured the tragedy with exaggerated detail, and even went so far as to describe the murderer, and said she could name the person if the authorities so desired.

When Mrs. Quirk, the widow of the murdered man, heard of the occurrence, she issued a writ, and went before County Judge Hardy, who granted her an interim injunction restraining Mr. and Mrs. Dudley from repeating their performance, and from making any further comment on the case. Mrs Quirk's application was based on the ground that the inquest is still pending.

The case will come up at Osgoode Hall today, when a motion will be made to continue the injunction.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 24 —If the view of the Yukon authorities were followed, it would cost Canada $100,000 to elect a representative for that district to Parliament at Ottawa. The enumeration of voters alone would run up a bill of more than $50,000.

The Secretary of State is in telegraphic communication with the returning officer, Sheriff Eilbeck, and with Judge Dugas, and has given strict and final orders that the expenses must be kept down to the lowest point. He insists that the enumeration must be made by forty men and within thirty days. The enumerators are to receive $10 a day for wages and living expenses.

A HAPPY BRIDEGROOM AT 102

The Bride is a Young Thing of Only Eighty Summers

Yorktown, Va., Sept. 24—What is probably the most peculiar marriage license ever issued by a state official was prepared by the County Clerk of Gloucester Saturday last. The peculiarity in this instance lies in the extreme age of the contracting parties, the man being 102 years of age and his intended wife 80.

The newly wedded pair are Solomon Lewis and his wife, both respectable colored people of this county. The ceremony was performed Sunday at New Mount Zion, in the upper part of the county, by the Rev. James Smith, a colored pastor. Solomon was a slave and belonged to the estate of Thomas Fauntleroy, of King and Queen county. His first wife married two years ago, after a married life of 70 years. His grandmother was born aboard a slave ship while crossing to this country from Africa, and lived to be 110 years old. His mother, who died in 1863, was 101. He has a brother now living in Piney Swamp at the great age of 107, whom he remembers as driving beef cattle to Gloucester Point for the American army during the war of 812.

Solomon claims to have been born in November, 1799, and thus was one month old at the death of George Washington. The old man is somewhat bent by age, but with the aid of a stick can walk and carry himself as erect as if he were only 21.

The marriage of the aged pair was a matter of great interest to the surrounding county, and was witnessed by a large concourse of white people, as well as a vast crowd of negroes.

THE C.P.R. TO TAP THE GREAT LAKES

Proposal to Build Line from Peterboro' to Midland

USE GRAND TRUNK ROAD BED

Laying of an Additional Track Favored by Mr. Charles M. Hayes

It is Understood That Sir Thomas Shaughnessy is Anxious That the Arrangement be Carried Through as Speedily as Possible

It is proposed that the Canadian Pacific Railway tap the great lakes by building a line between Peterborough and Midland, using the roadbed of the Grand Trunk. This will place Peterborough on the main highway of the great grain route between the west and the seaboard. Both railways will ship by this route, which is a natural one and which affords advantages over any other route.

This is the scheme foreshadowed by Mr. Tarte at Orillia a few days ago.

The Mail and Empire says that Mr. Charles M. Hayes, the second vice-president and general manager of the Grand Trunk, remarked yesterday that such a project as the Minister of Public Works had outlined was in every way preferable to the French River scheme, with the heavy expenditure of new canals and the deepening of river navigation.

How far the negotiations on the subject have gone Mr. Hays deemed it injudicious at the present juncture to explain, but he left no doubt whatever that the laying of an additional track on the Grand Trunk roadbed between Peterborough and Midland, (the lake port where they are, now building up an extensive grain traffic, if an additional track were found necessary) was a proposition that would be favored.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, of the C.P.R., is said to be anxious to make the connection, as it would be a great advantage to have a lake terminus at Midland.

AFFAIRS IN CAPE COLONY MORE HOPEFUL

The Colonists Deserve to Retain Their Autonomy and Hence are Loyal

Special to The Times

London, Sept. 25.—In Mr. Chamberlain's despatch declining to accede to the request of those members of the Progressive party in Cape Colony who, led by Dr. Smartt, antagonized Sir Gordon Sprigg and desired the suspension of Parliamentary government until the country had "settled down" after the war, the Colonial Secretary distinctly intimated that his refusal might be temporary and was based upon the belief that "the Cape Parliament will not fail in its evident duty, and will be prepared to take all the steps necessary for the security of the Colony, and for discouraging of racial and political controversy likely to interfere with the restoration of its prosperity."

So far, nothwithstanding the cabled reports of dissatisfaction among the ultra loyalists, there is no tangible evidence that the members of the Afrikander Bond, who form a majority of the present Parliament, will afford that "incontrovertible proof that the continuance of the existing Constitution is a positive danger to the peace of the Colony and to the interests of the Empire," which would be the signal for the Home Government to assume control. Martial law has been suspended, but suspended solely because the Cape Parliament has, despite some foolish talking, actually passed a Peace Preservation act which contains clauses forbidding the carrying of or importation of arms without license, and in other respects affords similar guarantees for good conduct through the operation of the ordinary law as were, in a more drastic form, enforced under martial law. The endeavor to suggest the idea that racial animosity in the Cape Parliament continues as marked as it was before the war, seems to be a deliberate attempt to prevent the healing process by that irreconcileable civilian element which either stayed at home or vanished to Europe during the throes of the late armed struggle.

Even if we accept as truthful all the alarmist reports which the opponents of Sir Gordon Sprigg are circulating it must be borne in mind that the Imperial Government retains a perfectly free hand and has emphatically expressed the intention to suspend the constitution if its hopes of reasonable counsels prevailing are frustrated.

The hopeful features of the situation lie in the facts that a large minority of those who originally took up arms are working loyally with a large majority of the old time loyalists to prevent the necessity of the colony reverting even temporarily, to the status of a Crown colony. The danger which made the war possible, even inevitable, lay in the circumstance that the voices of moderate men were stifled, and that party divisions were then on strictly racial lines. A party is now being formed which is recruited from the ranks of Dutch as well as British. To that party of moderates the Boer and Free State military leaders are evidently lending the weight of their support, notwithstanding the insidious attempts made by the moribund Leyds faction in Europe to induce them to give a merely grudging alliance to the new regime. It is the men who have risked little who now shout treason, but are careful to shelter themselves under the folds of a foreign flag, while they vaunt their patriotism to an audience which shows every sign of waning sympathy with their woes. Most men, even upon the continent of Europe, realize that as a result of the war a more complete personal liberty and a greater degree of comfort, are likely to accrue to the white man in South Africa, be he Dutch, British, native or foreign born.

MOB VIOLENCE IN THE STRIKE

Reign of Terror in the Wilkesbarre Pa. District

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 24—A reign of terror prevailed in this section of the strike region last night and early this morning. Sheriff Jacobs and his deputies were powerless to preserve order, although every attempt was made to do so. No sooner was one outbreak suppressed than another broke out.

At Nanticoke the street cars were boarded by the mob in search of non-union men coming from or going to work. A sheriff's posse and a crowd of strikers exchanged shots at Wanamie after the latter had derailed a train or coal cars. At Plymouth a number of non-union men, on their way home from No. 2 mine, were held up and beaten so badly that they were left on the roadway for dead.

Early this morning a demand for more deputies was received from no less than ten places in Luzerne County. Those applying for aid said if help was not sent at once, there would be loss of property and possible bloodshed. Sheriff Jacobs, after consultation with his attorney, decided to take no more chances, but to appeal to the Governor at once. Shortly before two o'clock this morning the sheriff telegraphed Governor Stone, telling him the situation in the Wyoming region was beyond his control, and that in order to protect life and property troops would have to be sent here immediately. The Governor's secretary replied that the matter would be laid before the former at once.

At Extert his morning a mob of 500 gathered in the vicinity of a washery and prevented the employes from going to work. A deputy sheriff named Burke was knocked down by stones and severely injured. Large crowds of men and boys are gathered around the washeries and mines in operation and the situation is very threatening.

HOUSES BURNED.

Wilkesbarre, Sept. 24—Mob violence is in full swing in many parts of the mining region. Yesterday, a crowd, a thousand strong, held the upper portion of this city for some time and attacked some carpenters who were leaving the D. & H. Company's Baltimore mine. A number of guards interfered and in the melee Joslip Rowlands, aged 17, was shot in the back, though not seriously wounded. In the morning attacks were made on the home of Fireboss Jones, of No. 2 colliery, Plymouth, and the windows and doors of a foreign non-union worker at Nanticoke were smashed. The deputies were stoned by the mob at Plymouth and at Nanticoke the guards at the No. 1 colliery were fired on. At Pittson the fish plates were removed from the Erie Railway tracks, and the work train which went over the road was wrecked, but no one was injured. Joseph Harrison a non-union worker, who lives at Plymouth, heard men about his house during the night, and on investigating, discovered two sticks of dynamite on his porch with a fuse attached. At Durringer the house of a union worker named John Sharman was burned to the ground, and a score or more of assaults in which some men were seriously injured were reported from Plymouth and the outskirts of this city. The strikers at Plymouth have taken to wearing masks, and several assaults were committed yesterday by men with their faces thus covered. The situation throughout Luzerne County was becoming more critical last night, and deputies were sent to the various centres of disturbance. General Gobin was ordered by Governor Stone to send the First Battalion of the 12th Regiment to Lebanon to assist the sheriff in preserving peace.

Harrisburg, Pa. Sept. 24.— Troops will be sent to Luzerne County before night if rioting in that locality does not cease. Governor Stone and Adjutant-General Stewart were in conference with Sheriff Jacobs at Wilkesbarre by telephone this morning. The Governor does not want to order out additional troops unless it is absolutely necessary, and before doing so he will investigate the situation in the localities where there is trouble.

Sheriff Jacobs telegraphed to the Governor early this morning that the conditions in Luzerne county were such that it was absolutely impossible for him to maintain order, protect life and property and suppress rioting and disorder.

Wheat Crop Will Soon Move

Port Arthur Elevators are Fast Filling With New Grain and the Eastward Movement Will Now Begin

Special to The Times.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—The new crop of Manitoba and the North-West has not yet begun to be moved east of Port Arthur. The elevators at that point are filling up and it is expected that boats will begin unloading there regularly within a few days. Thus far the grain carried by the Canadian railroads has come from Chicago, Milwaukee, and Duluth, the harvest south of the line being a few days earlier than in Canada. The Canada Atlantic will load their first boat of the season at Port Arthur on Saturday.

As to the arrangements for handling traffic, all the roads report themselves in much better shape than last year. The C. P. R. has a great many new cars, which are mostly employed in the west, the amount of rolling stock on the eastern sections of the road not having been materially increased. The Grand Trunk has about 2,000 more cars than last year. Both roads find that a great many of their cars are set free by the new per diem regulation, by which other roads are charged by the day for the use of cars, instead of by the mile hauled. The Grand Trunk alone reckons that the change is equivalent to giving them an additional 5,000 cars per annum. An improvement is also noted in the celerity with which cars are unloaded at stations. "The public are being gradually educated to see the necessity of unloading cars without delay," says Mr. Jno. Pullen, general freight agent of the Grand Trunk, "We have been able thus far to keep up with the demand for cars. It would hardly be reasonable to expect that we will get through the season without any complaints, but we are doing pretty well and the general situations is better than last year."

COAL SPECTRE FAMINE STILL TROUBLES CITIZENS

The McClellan Coal Company Still Supplying Their Customers

Wood Becoming Dear, but Soft Coal and Coke will be Plentiful—Toronto Dealers Buying Coal

The pressure for coal in Peterborough is probably not so great as in other places, on account of the fact that the McClelland Coal Company had a larger supply on hand in the early spring, before the strike began, than usual. Other dealers were also fairly well supplied. The McClelland Company is keeping their customers going but refuse to book any more orders.

We understand that Toronto dealers have purchased all the mill wood in sight in Peterborough and Lakefield and the Dickson Company is now taking no new orders for delivery Mr. Macdonald is busy delivering his mill wood as usual.

Yesterday Mr. Hicks informed The Times that he had plenty of dry hard wood at $6 per cord. This is only an advance of $1 over last year. When snow comes the price will probably drop 50c. or $1 per cord.

A dealer told The Times that there was any amount of soft coal and coke in the country besides wood and if the strike continues people will have to put up with this.

THE NEW WAR CLOUD ON EASTERN HORIZON

Trouble Between the United States and Turkey Getting Serious

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 25.—The demand of the United States for better treatment of the Jews in Roumania seems likely to be productive of trouble. The ground for interference is rather far-fetched, being based on the complaint that thousands of indigent Jews are being driven out of Roumania to seek an asylum in the United States. The real danger of the situation lies in the vagueness of this ostensible reason for the western republic interfering in what at first sight appears to be purely a matter for the European powers to deal with, and the probability that some deeper reason is at the bottom of such unprecedented action. So England is the only power that has signified her intention of supporting the American demand, and the latest reports are that Russia and Austria, the two powers more closely interested hav edeclared themselves as opposed to its interference. It has already been stated that in such an event France will side with Russia and Austria, Germany is undecided and Italy will support Great Britain and America. Canada is indirectly interested, because, as many of these indigent Roumanian Jews are being shipped to this country, Canada and Great Britain have the same cause of complaint as the United States.

Turkey, always a source of trouble, is mixed up in the affair in some obscure manner and has recently been evincing as much hostility to the United States as she dares. Whether the difficulty results in any serious trouble or not, the United States appears to be bent on demonstrating that it has to be counted on as a factor in European politics and it now has an army and fleet calculated to demand attention and respect.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY BY CABLE AND LETTER

Chicago, Sept. 24. — The combination of the great packing houses of the country which has been under consideration and in process of actual formation for the last six months, has been abandoned, at least for the present, says the Tribune. The decision not to complete the combination is due in a large degree to the attitude of the National Administration towards trusts, as outlined by President Roosevelt in his recent speeches, and to the possibility that in the event of a consolidation Congress might remove the tariff on cattle.

It was learned last night that a final meeting of the heads of the firms known as the big four packing houses in Chicago had been held, at which it was agreed to end all negotiations at once.

This was followed by an order issued from the office of Swift & Company that the firm's employes should immediately discontinue inventory of property and stock, which had been ordered and started for the purpose of tabulating a report of the financial condition of the company, which was to have been used for the basis of division of shares in the combine.

Fall River, Mass. Sept. 24.—The body of an unknown man with a bullet hole in his head has been found on a raft made of two pieces of board, fastened together with clouts, on the west side of Stafford Pond, two miles from this city. A heavy revolver was clenched in the right hand. The body was that of a man 25 or 30 years of age, 155 pounds, 5 feet, 5 inches in height, brown hair, with a sprinkling of grey, teeth badly decayed. The body was well dressed. Several English and Canadian coins were found in the clothing, a gold ring, set with four diamonds, three loaded cartridges and a pair of base cuff links. The money was in a chamois skin purse, with a brass plate bearing the name of "G. or Y. Brennan."

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 25, 1902.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN MARKET

The report of Mr. W. W. Moore upon the market which South Africa offers for Canadian goods is particularly timely now that the establishment of a direct steamship service between Canada and South Africa is to take place, and the paper embodying his report, now issued by the department of agriculture, will be of service to Canadian manufacturers and merchants who contemplate establishing commercial relations with Cape Colony, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony. Mr. Moore went to South Africa in 1900 in connection with the shipments of military supplies, and has, accordingly, been in an excellent position to study the South African market and the possibilities which it contains for Canadian exports. Mr. Moore advocates the installation of direct representatives in South Africa of Canadian firms. He has little faith in catalogues as a means of introducing Canadian goods, and considers that one good agent who possesses energy, ability and tact is worth a shipload of catalogues. The trade between South Africa and the United States has been rapidly increasing of late years, and this increase is attributed mainly to the direct steamship service between South Africa and the United States and to the ability of American commercial travellers possessing an accurate knowledge of the needs of the South African market. With a direct steamship service between Canada and South Africa and with equally good commercial representatives the trade of Canada might well show as favorable results as have been achieved by the United States. If Canadian houses are well represented and proper attention is given to price, quality and packing, Mr. Moore believes that there is no reason why Canadian products of any kind should not practically capture the South African market.

IT WAS JUST POKER LUCK

Story of a Steamship Game With a Curious Ending

There Were Six Men In It and Only Three Were Known to Each Other—If the Rest Had Happened to be Ordinary Travellers There Would Have Been Trouble

"The recent renewal of the effort to rid the ocean steamers of the professional short-card players reminds me of a poker incident that occurred on one of the big liners in the fall of '93," said a New Yorker who has done a good deal of transatlantic voyaging. "The passenger list, owing to the lateness of the season, was not over full, and on the first day out there were only a few small games in the card room, most of them, apparently, between men who knew each other quite well.

"Things began to liven up in the card room on the second day out, and the chaps who didn't appear to know anybody got together in four, five and six-handed games of poker. One of the six-handed games of draw was the storm of centre of the incident that I started to tell about.

"I was one of the players in that game. I was acquainted with two of the players, but the other three were strangers to me. One of them I know was a well-known New York politician and contractor, and another was a stock broker, with whom I'd been acquainted for years.

"One of the three strangers was a foreign-looking chap, with a bronzed skin, who spoke with a slight French accent. Another was a well-groomed Englishman, whose manners were fine, and who invariably spoke in a very low tone of voice.

"The third stranger was a young American, who wore a full beard and drank rather liberally of champagne during the play. He occasionally let fall the mark that he was a Californian and it was, of course, up to the three of us who knew each other to take his word for it.

"We went at the game a bit before luncheon on the third day out, and from the beginning of the seance the three strangers annexed the bulk of the money. None of them appeared to be particularly skilful in handling the cards.

"The man who spoke with a slight French accent seemed, indeed, to be a good deal of a novice at the game. The well-bred Englishman was rather awkward in his handling of the pasteboards, and made frequent misdeals, besides constantly dropping bunches of cards on the deck, while shuffling. The bearded young fellow, who sa'd he was from California, played just about a fairish sort of a game of draw.

"Nevertheless, the three of them got the money, and they got it so steadily that it looked a bit odd, to say the least. Every time one of the three of us, who knew each other, got a good hand, one of the three strangers would be dead certain to pick up or fill a better one, and this sort of thing went on so unintermittently during the entire day's play that it surely did look queer.

"I think the three of us, who had previous acquaintance with each other, became simultaneously suspicious, for, along toward the close of the sitting, when the three of us were all to the bad, and it seemed impossible for any of us to out-draw any of the three strangers, we found ourselves exchanging glances. I think, too, that the three of us noticed virtually at the same time that the three strangers got the biggest hands when one or the other of them was doing the dealing.

"When, shortly before midnight, we quit play, and the three of us got together and did a little talking among ourselves. We agreed that we had been up against a brace game, and each of us declared the belief that the three chaps with whom we had been playing were professional cheats.

"We got into the game again on the following forenoon, and from the outset the chaps whom we suspected got all of the money, and the fact became more obvious than ever that they were doing the bulk of their winning on their own deals.

"After we had played for a couple of hours, the well-bred Englishman, having the buck, dealt a jack. I was sitting on his left and passed out. The stock broker who was next to me, also threw up his hand.

"The New York politician and contractor, who was next, opened it for the limit, and the chap with the French accent and the bearded young fellow who said he was a Californian stayed long. The Englishman raised it before the draw, and the other three stood the raise.

"My friend the New York politician drew to his nines and deuces and caught another nine. Then the Frenchman and the Californian dropped out, and it was between the Englishman and the politician.

"They raised it back and forth between them until there was pretty nearly $1,000 in the middle of the table, when the politician, with a queer look in his eye, called. The Englishman showed up his ace full on queens and yanked down the pot.

"The politician slowly rose from the table.

"'There's fun in being a good thing, even for the novelty of it, for a little while,' said he, 'but it's expensive work, at that. There are two people in this game that I know, and I know that they're playing for amusement. I regret that I cannot say the same for the three in the game that I don't know.'

"The well-bred Englishman looked at the New York politician steadily. The man with the French accent paled slightly and regarded the politician with an equally steady stare. The bearded young man from California was also agape.

"But he broke the spell by smiling and reaching into his pocket for his card case. He extracted a card and threw it on the table before the politician. He was Charlie Fair, who met his tragic death with his wife in the automobile accident in France the other day.

"The Englishman, perceiving the humor of the situation, produced his card, too. He was H. Rider Haggard, the English novelist, who had not entered his name on the passenger list so as to avoid attracting attention.

"The Frenchman smiled sardonically and tossed his card upon the table. He was the Marquis de Mores, as game and square a little titled gentleman as ever busted an American broncho or fought African savages.

"The three gentlemen had simply been lucky, that's all. I will leave you to picture what asses we three who had suspected them felt. But they were all good fellows enought not to rub it in too hard on us."

meaning in the fierce light of later developments, was not forgotten.

It appeared not improbable that the man on the box-seat who had "looked like a prize-fighter in his best clothes," Winifred thought, had been in Lionel Macaire's pay, though precisely what his mission might have been she failed to see. Nowadays even actresses were not abducted by those who loved or hated them, or she and her mother, talking it over together, might have guessed that the cabman was to be bribed for something more than allowing the man to sit beside him on the box-seat.

At all events, Lionel Macaire was clearly at the bottom of every other misfortune which had befallen her; and he must have had his hands full in accomplishing all so quickly.

He had made it worth the actor-manager's while to discharge her; he had induced Mr. Anderson to make a mystery of her going before the assembled company, instead of keeping the volunteered promise that illness should account for it. He had written, or caused to be written, certain anonymous letters, increasing the difficulty of finding a new engagement, and sowing the seed of strange ideas regarding her in the minds of agents—perhaps also of managers. He had followed up these by inspiring an article in his paper stealthily reflecting upon her character without actually saying in so many words that Winifred Gray was the "young actress who had attempted an elopement."

The article made a denial impossible, lest the world should say, "If the cap did not fit, why did the girl allow herself to wear it?"

Having struck so devastating a blow in twenty-four hours, it was hardly reasonable to suppose that the hand of revenge would thereafter be held. Winifred was no longer afraid; anger dominated her too completely for fear to find room in mind or heart; but Mrs. Gray looked forward with shivering apprehensions to her daughter's future. What if she should by and by be left alone, without even the poor protection of her mother's weak arms?

"Somebody must be told this story," the elder woman said at last. "Somebody who is strong, and influential, and can stem the tide of scandal. Some man who will be able and willing to denounce this wicked wretch for the villain he is."

"What man do we know who would be able and willing?" asked Winifred. "Can you think of one among those we call our friends?"

"You don't realize, dear, what a power Mr. Macaire is in London," Winifred said, when her mother remained silent. "I don't believe there are many who really like him, but he is very lavish with his money, and people don't see why they shouldn't have the benefit of it. He gives the most gorgeous entertainments, they say, which have ever been seen in England. He thinks of the most wonderful surprises for his guests that seem like things out of fairy stories, and his houses are palaces, I've heard. That's the reason they've nick-named him 'Nero the Second'—because whatever he does or has is so extravagantly splendid, almost barbaric. Don't you remember I was invited to his house at Richmond last June with Mr. Anderson and Mrs. Peter Carlton, but I wouldn't go because Mrs. Peter didn't like me very much, and I thought I shouldn't enjoy it? How thankful I am now that I didn't touch anything of his!

"They all came back with marvelous stories of glass tables that rose out of the floor, and were lighted by different colors that seemed to run through the glass. And at dinner the ladies had diamond bracelets in their bouquets. Well, when men entertain like that, and have all sorts of pleasures to give their friends, and can tell them how to place their money on the Stock Exchange or in a horse race, or find positions for their sons and brothers on newspapers, they can do whatever they like, without being afraid. Nobody wants to speak against them; nobody wants to have them for enemies. What would people think if I went about telling them that Mr. Macaire had made love to me, and because I wouldn't listen he was trying to ruin my career?"

"I should think anyone who had ever seen him might believe anything of him!" exclaimed the little woman, who had always been the most charitable soul on earth, speaking evil of none, defending sinners for the one spark of good which she supposed still to be lurking in their hearts.

"If they did believe it they would say they didn't. They would probably think instead that I had angled for his attention, and, finding that he didn't notice me, I had maligned him out of sheer spite. Oh, Mr. Macaire's quite safe from anything you and I can do, mother; we might as well make up our minds to that."

"If only Dick were older, and—different!" sighed Mrs. Gray.

"He isn't, darling. I don't despair, though. I won't despair. We'll fight Lionel Macaire and his wickedness, and in the end I believe that we shall win."

But the silent battle had only just begun.

Within the next few days Winifred had seen, or tried to see, all the London managers. One or two were thinking of putting on new productions; but none of them had a part to offer her. The girl, who had met several of these important personages in the brief heyday of her success, and found them most agreeable men, fancied that their manner had changed. She felt that they looked at her differently, and there was a hollow ring in their regrets that she had not been able to come to them a few weeks earlier. Almost with one accord everybody said that.

After she had met with disappointment on all sides, Winifred troubled herself by the fear that she had seemed to expect too much, and wished that she had clearly specified that she was ready to accept a small part—a very, very small part. After the position she had held at the Duke of Clarence's and in public estimation, it would be a humiliation to appear as a mere "walking lady"—a humiliation which only an actor or actress can thoroughly appreciate—but the poor girl was ready to do anything honest for the sake of the money needed by her mother.

That need was not mentioned again now by the two women. Mrs. Gray would have given much if she had kept the doctor's verdict to herself, that Winnie's anxieties need not be increased for her sake; but it was too late for such a wish to be of avail, and News About Mo. Pacific.

New York, Sept. 24.—Sunday's New York Tribune contained some up to date news appertaining to Missouri Pacific; its triteness and bearing upon the stock leads us to publish it in our daily letter. The Mo. Pacific has completed or has in progress, a scheme of extensions and developments which it is claimed will make it in the near future as superior to any other system of roads in the west as the Lake Shore excels other roads in its territory. The Mo. Pacific has now succeeded in its territory; it has a water line from St. Louis to New Orleans, one from Kansas City to St. Louis, and one along the Arkansas River from Kansas to the Mississippi. It now occupies and will shortly complete one from Memphis to Kansas City, on the water grade along the White River, the only water course between the Missouri River and the Arkansas River. The ultimate result of these water grade lines and the economy of operations secured, and the economy in its construction, concentrates in the Missouri Pacific stock a future value impossible to measure, which owners feel should make the stock sell as high as St. Paul, Rock Island, or Northwest. There can be no doubt that the people interested in the Mo. Pacific are in it for keeps, and their interests are solely in its upbuilding. This they have been doing most persistently, and when the plans are given out as to what is in store for the Mo Pacific, which they will most likely very soon after the handing down of the decision in the case of the Northern Securities, it will be plain to the observing that the Mo. Pacific is a good thing to tie to and hold to for a considerable period of time. All things come to him who waits in Wall street, quite as much as in other walks of life. The Rockfeller-Gould party are patient and industrious. The enhancement in values of all their securities are results obtained by their work. They are not through yet, and the market for these various stocks plainly indicates further buying on their part rather than disposal.

Summary: To-day's market was most drastically hammered by the bearish contingent, and a steady stream of long stock during the market session was poured into the market by houses unwilling to carry customers save on exceptionally large margins. Money was close all day and bid up sharply. There was a cessation in the afternoon in the rush to sell, and inquiry improved. Bargain hunters with cash to invest were attracted by the low range of values, and bought freely, causing sharp rallies. The market will more than likely be extremely feverish for a few days. Those who can protect liberally should commence to make purchases now. Those who cannot do so should wait until the situation clears, though stocks will probably cost more then. No man can honestly say how, if any, further, the market may decline before the low prices are reached. Money closed 18 per cent. Sales 1,300,000.

Oldest Bicyclist in America

The honor of being the oldest bicyclist in America undoubtedly belongs to Dr. Gray, of town, who rode a wheel in the year 1869. At that time Dr. Gray was a medical student at Victoria College, Cobourg, and secured one of three wheels that were imported from England, being the first shipment to arrive. It was then known as a "velocipede," and was not any larger than the present bicycle. Ten or twelve years ago the high wheels came in, only to be laid aside for the present chain wheel. The Dr. is still an ardent wheelsman, using the machine in making his professional calls.

—D. J. Markham, of Lindsay, who was charged with being drunk and disorderly about a week ago and was remanded until witnesses were secured to prove the charge, came before the Magistrate yesterday and was discharged.

—Among the list of names of successful cadets who passed the entrance examination to the Royal Military College at Kingston, appears that of Mr. B. D. Hall, of Peterborough son of Mr. E. H. D. Hall, town solicitor.

—Mr. A. W. Creasman expects to have his fine new clothing store opened on Saturday of next week. He is having a large opening made between his dry goods and his new store. His stock has already arrived, and is of the newest and best.

—Brockville Times: The lectures given by Professor O'Brien are still the talk of the town. A very pleasing feature of the entertainments is the singing of Madame Bovini O'Brien, who has a sweet, powerful voice, and interpretes difficult selections with ease and taste. Every number she consents to give is rapturously applauded.

FOUND DEAD IN BED

Mr. Michael Gorman of Ennismore Expires Suddenly

On Tuesday morning last Mr. Michael Gorman was found dead in his bed on his farm in Ennismore. The deceased, who was 65 years of age, was in the best of health, and his unexpected demise is universally regretted.

Mr. Gorman was unmarried, and lived alone. He was sober and industrious, and was highly esteemed.

When he did not appear as usual on Tuesday morning, his brother, who lives close by, went over and on entering found the dead body, partly dressed, lying on the bed. He had evidently arisen and had got a portion of his clothes on when he was taken ill. Dr. Gray, coroner, was notified, but did not deem an inquest necessary.

Death of Michael Riley

The sad news was received in town yesterday morning announcing the demise of Mr. Michael Riley, who for so long a time was connected with the Lock works here. Mr. Riley passed away in Meriden, Conn., where he had gone a few weeks ago. He was about 50 years of age and came to Peterborough about seventeen years ago. An excellent workman and a man of genial disposition he was esteemed and trusted by his employers and the public. When he left Peterborough a few weeks ago he was tendered a most feeling farewell by the employes of the Lock Works with whom he had been so long associated and today his death is being deeply mourned by three former fellow employees. Mr. Riley leaves a widow and four children to mourn his demise. The daughters are Mrs. Jas. Kelly, of Atwood, and Mrs. Shadwick, of Brooklyn, N.Y. The two sons are George, now of New York, and Thomas, who lived at home. The remains will be brought here for interment, but the funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

SOUR BREAD

Answered the Doctor

If you get right down to the bottom of your stomach trouble it is wrong food, and the way to correct it is not by drugs but by using the right food.

A physician in Barron, Wis., writes an instructive letter on this point. He says, "I am a practicing physician, 46 years old, and about 6 feet in height. When I began using Grape-Nuts last Spring I weighed 140 lbs., was thin and poor, had a coating on my tongue and frequently belched wind or gas and small pieces of undigested bread or potatoes which were very sour, in short I had acid dyspepsia.

I consulted a brother physician who advised me to eat about four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts at the commencement of each meal and drink Postum Cereal Coffee. I had been in the habit of drinking coffee for breakfast and tea for dinner and supper. I followed the advice of my brother physician as to diet and experienced relief at once.

Ever since that time I have eaten Grape-Nuts with sweet milk or cream each morning for breakfast and I now weigh 165 lbs., and am no more troubled with sour stomach. I am very fond of Postum Food Coffee and attribute my relief as much to that as I do to Grape-Nuts.

Often when I am called out in the night to see a patient and on my return home I feel tired and hungry, I eat the usual quantity of Grape-Nuts before going to bed and then sleep soundly all night." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

PATATOES BACKWARD

Much Rain Keeps the Tubers From Coming Forward

In some parts of the province there are complaints of potatoes being high in price, owing to the scarcity of the tubers through rotting, brought about by the frequent heavy rains of the summer. Potatoes are somewhat scarce hereabouts, but not from rotting. Nothing special has been heard of that, but there are complaints of the backwardness of the later varieties because of too much rain. The potatoes are in the same position as many other vegetables this year.

The scarcity has, of course, sent up the price, but not to an unreasonable figure. Good potatoes could be bought on the market last week for 80c. and 90c. a bag, retail.

WEDDING BELLS

Nuptials of Miss Ila Vancise and Mr. Henry Haines

A very pretty but quiet wedding took place yesterday afternoon when Miss Ila Vancise, daughter of the late Mr. John Vancise, town, was united in marriage to Mr. Henry Haines, of Toronto. The Rev. E. A. Langfeldt tied the nuptial knot in the presence of a number of the friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk with trimmings of applique and chiffon, and wore a black velvet picture hat trimmed with american tips. The bride was attended by Miss Lottie Nicholls who wore a gown of venetian cloth, trimmed with white silk and applique, and also wore a black velvet picture hat.

The groom was supported by Mr. Will Abbott, brother of the bride. Mrs. A. Webber played the wedding march as the bridal party entered.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a sumptuous wedding dejeuner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Haines left upon the G.T.R. train for Toronto, whither the best wishes of friends here will accompany them. The wedding presents were a handsome tribute to the popularity of the young couple.

TIMES LETTER BOX.

BUSINESS SCIENCE

To the Editor of The Times.

Sir,—I learn from the newspapers that in Philadelphia the worshippers of Mother Eddy are not having things their own way. It appears that the First Church of Christ Scientist of Philadelphia applied for a charter. The Judge denied the application on the ground that on the face of the evidence the proposed church was a medical institution, the doctors or healers in which did not possess the qualifications necessary under the State laws. In the view of the law these so-called Christian Scientists were unlicensed and not licensable practitioners of medicine.

Then application was made to another Judge. On the evidence before him he refused to grant a charter because the Church of Christ Scientist is a concern for revenue only, a business carried on for profit.

According to Mr. Frederick W. Peabody of Boston, Mother Eddy's income from Christian Science is between $75,000 and $100,000 a year. The "mother church" in Boston brings in $21,000 a year or more, as every Christian Scientist gives a dollar a year to it. The sale of the Christian Science oracle and bible, Mother Eddy's "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," has been enormous; and it is the Mother's fiat that every Christian Scientist shall sell as many copies as possible or be liable to be driven from the fold. The profit on each copy is estimated at $2.50. Mother Eddy's college of metaphysical healing is said to have brought in $1,200,000 in seven years. This was before the fee for the course was raised from $200 to $400. Pew rents and collections bring in a pretty penny.

There is no doubt that Christian Science is one of the most lucrative businesses known. But the profit is not shared among the communicants generally. Their profit, if they get it, is mental or spiritual. The splendid churches built or now building show that the Christian Scientists are liberal and well-to-do people; willing to pay for the faith that is in them and the satisfaction it affords. The ruling of the Judge seems to lose sight of this disinterested majority and to seek to protect it from its own free-handedness or gullibility. The majority has the faith and is ready to pay for it. Mother Eddy and her favorites have an easy way of making the money. Mr. Peabody couldn't find those benefits in which Mother Eddy believes that she spends most of her income; but Mr. Peabody is cynical and the New England prophetess is not obliged to let her left hand know what he right doeth.

Fortunately the evil has not yet been so pronounced in Canada, but is growing daily. The people look to the press for guidance in dealing with this matter, and I hope it will be forthcoming.

Yours truly,
A. F. ROSE

A Huge Mistake

Long Branch, N.J., Sept. 25.—Mistaking another man's wife for his own got Lafayette Warren, a contractor, into a peck of trouble. Warren was out walking last night on Willow ave., near Broadway. The street at that point is dark.

Coming toward Broadway were Mr. and Mrs. George Cloughly. Mr. Cloughly is the son of James Cloughly a well known builder and Methodist exhorter. Mr. and Mrs. Cloughly were chatting together, Mr. Cloughly little dreaming that he was suspected of being with another man's wife.

Suddenly Warren, wild with anger, sprang upon him:

"You will walk with my wife, will you!" said Warren to Cloughly, at the same time grabbing him by the throat.

"Mrs. Cloughly cried for help.

"Don't hurt George," she said.

Warren, upon hearing the voice of Mrs. Cloughly, realized that he had made a mistake. He had Cloughly down and was choking him. He let up at once and offered an apology to his victim.

Mr. Cloughly was righteously indignant and called upon Warren, whom he did not know, to accompany him to the city lockup. Cloughly afterward went to Warren's house and learned that Mrs. Warren had been in bed for a couple of hours.

Cloughly was not much hurt, but he was considerably frightened. Charges will be preferred against Warren, probably to-morrow.

PATRIOTISM

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier, and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are promptly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It builds up the body with sound flesh and solid muscle.

"After I received the advice which you gave me in regard to my treatment," writes Geo. Dorner, Esq., of 1013 Pulaski Street, Baltimore, Maryland, "I used your 'Golden Medical Discovery' according to directions. After using four bottles I considered myself cured, as I have not felt any symptoms since. Had tried almost all remedies that I heard of that were good for dyspepsia, but without relief. Finally, I became discouraged, and wrote to you for advice, with the above result."

The dealer who offers a substitute for the "Discovery" is only seeking to make the little more profit realized on the sale of less meritorious preparations.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 50 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

BIG COAL BREAKERS ARE BEING STARTED 350 MEN AT MINES IN ONE DISTRICT

One Mine at Williamston, Penn., in Operation To-Day and Another will be at Work To-morrow Under Effecient Protection

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 25— The big breaker at Williamstown was operated yesterday, and over two hundred wagons of coal were handled. No interference was attempted by the strikers. The breakers at Lykens will be started to-morrow to run out the coal mined this week. Both buildings will by strongly guarded.

There are over 350 men at work in the mines in the Lykens region, which is in the lower end of the Schuylkill County.

SITUATION IN TORONTO.

"Phwat, $9 a kord for hardwood! To the —— wid ye! I'll chop down me fine furst."

And the speaker went out of the Elias Rogers Company's office in King street this morning in a huff.

"That's nothing," said the clerk who waited on him. "We have all kinds of people to deal with.

The city coal offices are being besieged. The class who read but little or remain much indoors are just commencing to realize the scarcity of the precious black diamonds.

The man who takes things philosophically and says, "Oh I'll buern hardwood," may be a philosopher without reason.

Mr. Elias Rogers is authority for the statement that there was just about an ordinary supply of wood taken out last winter, so that the dry wood that is available now is just sufficient to supply the ordinary requirements.

'We handle about 125,000 tons of coal for domestic purposes each year," said Mr. Rogers, "and 15,000 cords of wood. We have perhaps ten thousand cords of wood on hand, but some of this is in the woods, and cannot be got at till sleighing."

Many families, feeling that they cannot buy anthracite, are now buying hardwood.

"I'll take two cords of your best hardwood," said a lady, laying down her purse with a confidential air.

"We cant' sell you two cords, madam," replied the clerk.

"Why not?"

"Well, that is our rule. We can only supply half a cord to a person."

"That is outrageous. Let me see Mr.——"

Mr. —— was seen, but the interview was fruitless, and the lady drove away unable to leave more than $4.50 of her money for half a cord of hardwood.

"I would like it sent up as soon as possible," she said just before leaving the office

"I am sorry, madam, but we cannot promise it before next week," replied the gentleman who took the money.'

POLITICS IN THE STRIKE.

"I think they are playing politics in this coal strike business on the other side," said Manager McGuigan of the Grand Trunk Railway this morning.

"How will the strike affect your road it it lasts much longer?"

"Well, I don't think it can last much longer. As I said, I think politics have entered somewhat into the situation, in view of the Congressional elections which take place in November. The strike, of course, will make some difference to the earnings of the railroads, but the chief difficulty will be as to transportation facilities immediately after the mines resume operations. All the big dealers will be wanting their coal delivered at once"

"What about the so-called car famine?"

"According to the newspapers and the shippers there is always a car famine, particularly at this time of the year. I do not believe, however, that the shipping interests are going to be seriously affected by any real shortage of cars. Look at the situation a moment. Every farmer wants his wheat shipped at the same time. It would be unreasonable to suppose that that could be done under any possible circumstances even supposing there were cars available to ship every bushel. Yet the cry would go up just the same that there was a shortage of cars, or something to that effect. Then you must remember that the supposed actual shortage, according to our officers' statements, say a shortage of a thousand or more cars a day is very largely a fictitious number. For this reason—A shipper of apples wants to ship five or more cars of apples. He will, or the agent will for him, send in an order for double the number of cars really required, fully expecting that the order will be cut down to meet his immediate requirements."

Mr. McGuigan said the new regulations on the per diem penalty for retaining cars would relieve the situation a good deal, though that was but the commencement of a change which will yet be carried further, and which will really bring the roads back to the old mileage System, but with the penalties doubled.

STRIKE BREAKING UP.

New York, Sept. 25—The attention of President Underwood of the Erie was called to the published statement of Carroll D Wright that the strike might last three weeks or a month yet, but that the strikers would lose.

"The strike is breaking up," said Mr. Underwood, "and such a statement from Mr. Wright, will probably help matters along. There is a considerable improvement in the situation in the coal fields along our lines. But I will not attempt to predict when the strike will end.

TO SEE MORGAN.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 25—Bishop Samuel Fallows, of Chicago, who will shortly complete a tour of the strike district, says he is going to New York to see J. P. Morgan in the hope that he will be able to induce him to take some action toward ending the strike.

"I think Mr. Morgan will see me," said the Bishop. "If he is unwilling I shall insist on his seeing me. The miners should win. They are standing firmly together, and their cause is just. In all equity and fairness, their grievances should be arbitrated. The operators have too long defied public opinion."

HIGH FREIGHT ON COAL.

Chicago, Sept. 25—The News says:

That the ability of the anthracite coal interests to maintain high prices and monopolize the business is due in large measure to the control of the coal-carrying roads is well known. Reports made as to high freight rates for coal show the extent of the evil. Wheat, for instance, can be shipped from Chicago to New York for 3 1-2 mills a ton a mile and lumber for 5 mills a ton a mile. A shipment of anthracite coal from the mines to Buffalo is paid for at the rate of $2.20 a ton for the distance of 265 miles, or for about 8 1-3 mills a mile. Comparing these charges with the rates for merchandise shipments, their unreasonable character becomes simply grotesque.

High coal prices are in part traceable to the system which enables the coal roads to establish extortionate rates for transportation, and figure the cost in fixing the price to the consumer. This is only one of the more exasperating of the flagrant evils rising from the control of freight rates for the purposes of monopoly. Because of a similar misuse of railway privileges, by means of friendly agreements with railways, other trusts favored with low rates are able to undersell and destroy their competitors. In both cases the manipulation of freight priveleges is made to rebound to the benefit of the oppressive corporation and to the detriment of the public.

MESSIAH HAS TO HIDE

Dangerous For Him to Face Angry London Mobs

Crowds Gather Whenever It is Rumored That He is about—Police Find it Difficult to Handle Them—Pigott Declares He Has No Special Message for America

Special to The Times.

London, Sept 25.—The public excitement in London over the fanatic Pigott, who styles himself the Messiah, furnishes a curious study in sociology. It has been proved this week that the mere mention of his name is sufficient for the assemblage of a mob of many thousands, all anxious to do bodily harm to this impostor. The common people refuse to treat with indifference or as a joke the sublime effrontery of this peculiar individual, who may be regarded as a monomaniac instead of a mountebank.

It is a strange commentary on the supposed phlegmaticism of the world's metropolis that it is necessary to assemble several hundred policemen for his protection whenever it is known that this pastor of a small parish is going from his house to the church to conduct a service.

The offender has never criticised or attacked the interests of the populace. He has done nothing of any public concern except to announce the other day to the members of his little sect that he was the reincarnated Christ. He made no fuss about it. He did not manifest the slightest desire for temporal power or even recognition outside his own small circle of followers. His declaration got into the papers, and forthwith the populace rallied and threatened all sorts of things. They threatened to tear him to pieces.

This strange popular craze seems to be more characteristic of English resentment against his amazing egotism than a plain desire to punish blasphemy. The feeling is so bitter and widespread that the authorities are almost at their wits' end.

There was an astonishing example of this last night. A coachman stopped in front of the North London station and remarked jokingly to a bystander that he was waiting for Pigott. This rumor spread like magic and within a few minutes the crowd grew to a mob of many thousands. The station and the converging streets were packed. The railway authorities telephoned to Scotland Yard and the reserves hastened from all the nearest police stations. It was two hours before they succeeded in controlling the mob and traffic was resumed.

The people showed a very hot temper. The cry was constantly raised of "Here he comes!" This was followed by shouts of "Down with the impostor; let's get at him!"

Meantime the putative Messiah seems to have been rather cowed by the storm he has raised. It is said by his lieutenants that he will remain in retirement for the present. He has no material ambitions. He lives almost in luxury with his wife, who has considerable money. Their relations, it is explained, like those of all others of the sect, who do not believe in ordinary marriage, are purely platonic.

A Sun reporter endeavored to induce Mr. Pigott to send a special message to American sinners, suggesting that, perhaps it would not be received with the same hostility in the United States as in London. Pigott's reply was:

"The message that has been sent forth is complete, and there is nothing to add to it. No message will be sent to any particular nation. Furthermore, we cannot move from our position of not touching or communicating with the press in any way."

Journalism, therefore, must be content to rest under the unregenerated ban.

IN LOVE WITH A KING

A Brazilian Girl Said to Be Enamored of Alphonso

Special to The Times.

Madrid, Sept. 26.—A despatch from San Sebastian says that Miss Anna Caampbell, a very rich and beautiful Buenos Ayres girl, has fallen in love with King Alfonso and attends every function where the king appears. Alfonso, the despatch says, has shown an inclination to reciprocate, the the queen-mother has asked the firl's father to keep her away from the king.

ENTIRELY JUST

How American Papers Regard the Boer War Charges

Milwaukee, Sept. 25.—The Milwaukee Tribune says: It is entirely just that the British colonies in South Africa should assume at least half of the debt growing out of the Boer war. It seems a hardship that the former Boer republic should pay for the war in which they lost their liberties; but these republics have now become British colonies and the colonial governments must bear the burden. That will naturally fall less on the Boer farmers than on the great mining and other industries revived and introduced by the British. Before the war most of the taxes were paid by the mines on the Rand and industries connected with them. Probably this will be the case now. These mining companies had most to do in bringing on the war; it is just that they should pay for it.

WILL SELL THE CATTLE

Government Steps in and Will Protect the Doukhobors

Winnipeg, Sept. 25.—The Winnipeg Telegram says - On another page is reproduced a poster announcing an auction sale of 265 head of cattle (more or less) of all ages, 120 horses (more or less) and 95 sheep (more or less.) The party advertising the sale is the Dominion Government, through J. Obed Smith, Commissioner of Immigration. How comes it that the Dominion Government is going into the live-stock business? How comes it that it has on its hand so many head of live stock (more or less)? The only explanation given in the public notice is a reference to the owners having no further use ofr the goods and chattels hereinafter mentioned, namely the stated number of cattle, horses and sheep (more or less). And who are these owners who, in this country, have no further use for cattle, horses and sheep? It is astonishing that such "goods and chattels" cannot be put to some use in Western Canada. Who are these owners? Why, the Doukhobors. They have no use for cattle, horses and sheep. And why does the government undertake to auction them off? Because they are running around loose. And what will the government do with the money realized?

Will the C.P.R. Go to Midland?

There is Every Reason Why It Will Build a Line from Peterborough

That the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will build a line from Peterborough to Midland, on the Georgian Bay, seems probable. At present this railway does not touch the Georgian Bay. It has a charter to build a line from Sudbury on its main road to Kilenburg on its Toronto and Owen Sound line. This would take in Midland, but could not greatly benefit it as a port of through traffic, owing to the direction of the line being north and south. But, as the Mail and Empire puts it, a C.P.R. line running from Midland to Peterborough could not fail to increase very greatly the shipping trade of the former town. An enormous business is done by the section of the Grand Trunk that joins these two places. Thanks to the enterprising management of the Grand Trunk system, Midland has been made the gateway of a large volume of through traffic. The port's own natural advantages, of course, have made such a development possible. Dredging, and no great amount of that, is all that is necessary for putting it in condition to accomodate the biggest freighters on the upper lakes. Some of the largest grain cargoes ever carried on the lakes have been trans-shipped at Midland, where a large modern elevator was built a few years ago. Most of the grain hitherto shipped via Midland to the sea came from the Western States. Were it made a doorway of the Canadian Pacific system, Midland would be certain to receive a considerable share of the grain sent from the Canadian West to tidewater. At present the C.P.R. parts with the grain at Fort William, whence the lake fleets carry it on mainly to Buffalo, where it goes on by rail or canal to the ocean at New York. Why should not the C.P.R. carry it onward from the ports on this side of the lakes as well as the Grand Trunk or the American railways converging in Buffalo? It is but natural and business-like that its eastern lines, like other eastern lines, should participate in the traffic originated on the western lines. From Mr. Tarte we gather that the company has been considering such a departure for some time. That it was ready to take up the grain again in its route he implied when he represented that the opening of the French River and the making a lake port of North Bay would make a great grain highway across Ontario to the St. Lawrence.

If the C.P.R. puts itself into connection with the grain traffic at Midland it would probably establish a fleet of grain carriers on the upper lakes, and quote through rates over its system from the primary point of shipment to the ocean at Montreal or Quebec. With a fleet of great freighters it could add to its earnings by carrying the grain all the way, which it cannot profitably do now by an all-rail haul owing to the competition of the waterway. The opening of a Midland outlet, or inlet rather, for the Ontario division of the C.P.R. should in this way conduce to the further diverting of the Western traffic to Canadian ocean ports.

FOR DESTITUTE BOERS TRAITOR SENTENCED

A German Subject who Carried Important Messages was Promised $5,000

London, Sept. 24—A despatch from Cape Town to the Central News says that Ernest Henschel, a German subject has been convicted of treachery and sentenced by a military court at Pretoria to ten years' imprisonment with hard labor. The evidence in the case showed that last march, after having taken the oath of neutrality, Henschel started for Germany, carrying with him a number of Kaffir curiosities, among which were found, when the curiosities were examined at the fronteir, certain documents addressed by Commandant Byers to former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, the Boer representative in Europe. The prisoner pleaded ignorance as to the contents of the documents, but admitted that he had been promised $5,000 for delivering them.

London, Sept. 24—A despatch from The Hague today confirms the report that the donor of the $100,000 sent to Gen. Botha for the relief of destitute Boers was Henry Phipps, an American, and not "Arthur White" as announced by the General in Rotterdam on Monday. The money was sent through Mr. Arnold White. Henry Phipps of New York, is a director of the Carnegie Steel Company and of other concerns.

In notifying Gen. Botha of the gift Mr. Phipps wrote from Beaufort Castle, Scotland, Sept. 20:—"Now that the war is over, it is a privilege and I believe it a duty to do something to relieve the suffering caused by the war. I feel that the best service I could render would be to provide $100,000 for the relief of the Boer widows and young orphans fund to be distributed by you and two others. My desire is that the temporary misery of the women and children should be relieved, and at the same time I trust nothing will be done which shall be justly described as unfriendly to Great Britain."

Gen. Botha, in his reply dated from Brussels, September 21, acknowledging this "most generous and unexpected gift," adds:—"Have not the slightest hesitation in giving you assurance that the money will be used solely and entirely philanthropically, and that it will in no way be applied to anything which could justly be described as unfriendly to Great Britain. Having laid down our arms and carried out loyally, as our late enemies admit, the terms to which we subscribed at Pretoria, we have made peace in the fullest sense of the word, and my only object now is to try and alleviate as much as in my power the misery my countrymen find themselves in, after a war that has entirely ruined them and made thousands of widows and orphans who have no means of livelihood, so that my people may be restored to happiness and contentment in the countries which are their and my only home."

Gen. Botha suggests that, besides himself and General Delarey, whom whom Mr. Phipps appoints to disburse the fund, a third trustee should be chosen from J. Rosses Innes, Attorney-General of the Transvaal Colony, Sir Richard Solomon, legal adviser of the Transvaal Administration, and Major Sir Hamilton Gould-Adams, Lieutenant-Governor of the Orange River Colony.

Amsterdam, Sept. 22—An appeal to the civilized world issued yesterday by Generals Botha Dewet and Delarey, after saying that they had failed to induce Britain to grant further assistance, proceeds:

"The small Boer nation can never froget the help it received in its dark hours of suffering. Our people are completely ruined. It has been impossible to make a complete inventory, but we are convinced that at least 30,000 houses on Boer farms and many villages were burned or destroyed by the British during the war. Everything was destroyed, and the country was completely laid waste. The war demanded many victims and the land was bathed in tears and our orphans and widows were abandoned. We are appealing to the world for contributions to assist the destitute and help in the education of the children."

The Generals repudiate all desire to inflame the minds of the people, and declare:—"The sword is now sheathed and all differences are silent in the presence of such great misery."

At St. John the trial of Fred. Higgins, charged with the murder of Willie Doherty, resulted in a verdict of guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy.

COOL RECEPTION FOR BOER APPEAL.

Special to The Times

London, Sept. 25—A Berlin despatch says the reception accorded the Boer generals' manifesto is, on the whole, characterised by coolness and caution. Those journals which during the war profited most by sensational misrepresentations and appeals to misguided popular sentiment are foremost in the attempt to depict the present condition of the Boer population as utterly forlorn, and the attitude of the British Government as merciless and inhuman.

London, Sept. 25.—It is expected the remaining 15,000 Boer prisoners will return to South Africa before the end of the present year. The total number of persons who have so far returned to their farms is 23,944 and 29,000 remain in camp.

CLOSING OF SCHOOLS INJURED BUSINESS.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 25—A Paris despatch says a petition to the Government is being circulated for signature by shopmen, seamstresses, commercial travellers and others suffering from the closing of religious institutions, which closing, it is declared, has resulted in a considerable falling off in their business, and has caused many to lose their employment. The petition urges that all authorizations applied for under the Association's law be granted so as to save the petitioners from poverty.

INCREASE IN WHITE MINERS.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept., 25—The latest mining statistics, says a Johannesburg correspondent, include a return, showing a steady increase in the number of white men employed in the mines. In 1898, the last completed year in which the mines were worked, the annual report stated that 9,476 white men were employed, and 5,785 stamps were working. In August of this year 9,122 white men were at work and only 2,458 stamps were in operation. In July and August the increase in the number of white workers in mines was 1,988. The increase in native workers for so was sunk in August to a record the same period was 1,330. One mi depth for the Rand entirely by white labor, and the cost was little above the average. The experiment was so satisfactory that it is understood it will be repeated in other mines.

Volcano on St. Vincent Island Resumed Eruption on Sunday

Special to The Times.

Castries, St. Lucia, Sept. 26. — There was a severe eruption of La Soufriere, on the island of St. Vincent on Sunday evening. It came without any warning. The cable repair steamship Newington, which was working about five miles from shore, was forced to steam away at full speed. She was followed by a dense mass of debris and had a narrow escape. The repairing operations on cable have been suspended indefinitely. The broken cable which was picked up shows signs of submarine volcanic disturbance or severe injuries caused by the debris from the Walliboo River.

How About Treatment of Negroes Here and Filipino Prisoners?

"Supposing that Europe accepts Mr. Hay's interference and consents to act in behalf of the Roumanian Jews, what will Mr. Hay say if Roumania should ask the Powers to intervene and stop the persecution of negroes in the United States and demand explanations in regard to the treatment of Filipino prisoners?"

Germany's Real Strength

London, Sept. 24—Recent calculations have shown that Germany contains more than eight million adults, who have passed through the ranks — a number compared with which the hosts of Napoleon sink into insignificance, and including even the masses of men flung together in the Franco-German War to a state of comparative moderation. Without this force and safeguard the Empire, which has made sweeping strides in every sphere of modern effort under the Kaiser's reign could never have been created, and could never have been

A LOOK IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

Time will show the wisdom of the Dominion Government' in setting apart fifty square miles of the coal lands of the North-West as Government property. The coal can lie there for the present. It is not needed, and will not be for a long time to come; but it is there, it belongs to the State, and some day it can be mined by the people and for the people, if need be.

The Crow's Nest Coal Company and the Canadian Pacific Railway have larger coal areas, but they have not better coal than that preserved under Hon. Clifford Sifton's policy to remain the property of the State. The Socialists argue that all the coal should have been held in behalf of the people, and mined by the Government; but, practically speaking, this is not yet possible, and will not be until the advocates of public ownership of all the utilities and necessities are in a voting majority in Canada. Half of those who follow the cause fall weak at the heart when the time comes to actually lay hold on something that may be owned and operated.

But the publicly owned coal fields of the West will always serve in a measure as a check upon the company-owned mines, and one day they will be worked by the State, for people grow too wise to part with further property of that kind once its value is within popular knowledge. When the West is filled with people the retention by the State of control over the coal supply will be seen to be one of the best pieces of practical statesmanship in Canadian history.

The following refreshing piece is from the Canadian American, published in the heart of Chicago:

"The British riflemen can shoot—they carried off the Palma trophy against America's best shots; the British oarsmen can row—they defeated everything at Henley; the British pololsts can defy competition; the British army can fight; the British navy has no near competitor, and we should guess that if it comes to the pinch the British business man and manufacturer can keep up to the best pace set him by his rivals of whatever country, notwithstanding all recent clamor. At any rate he has done it in the past, and if he can't do it now then the louder he is shouted at the better it will be for him and his countrymen."

The old man is getting shouted at in trade matters. In few other respects does he need much awakening.

TAXING THE TRANSVAAL MINERS

The statement that the mining industry in the Transvaal will be more heavily taxed to cover the cost of the late war, than it was under ex-President Kruger to fill the Boer arsenal, will possibly quiet certain people who have all along claimed that the rich miners made the war in order to escape taxation. If it was "a capitalists' war," then a curious thing has happened—i.e. the capitalists who were strong enough to compel the British Government to shoulder the terrible responsibility of making the war, are not now strong enough to compel the same Government to lighten their taxation after the war, or even leave it as it was. That is, the the mighty capitalists used the Government as a "cat's paw" to get their chestnuts out of the fire; and then the cat ran off with the chestnuts! It is plainly time for someone to rewrite our nursery tales, if they are to be absurd enough to fill the credulity of certain [illegible].

That the Transvaal mines should pay a good share of the cost of the war, is plain justice. They may or may not think that they are getting full value received for the expenditure—though security against the vagaries of Kruger rule ought to be some compensation for increased taxation—but whatever part of the cost they do not bear, will be paid by the British tax-payer at home who will as a rule get even less in the form of financial return. As a cash investment, it is hardly likely that the British people will profit much by the war; though they would doubtless be willing to pay the [illegible] several times over to keep the Empire intact and its prestige secure.

But the man who will gain most, directly and promptly, will be such British subjects as live and work in the Transvaal. They will obtain at once home rule municipally, which is worth a great deal, sentimentally, sanitary, and in self-respect. They will have British courts and British law to deal with, and British security of tenure. Their taxes will no longer go into a hostile fund, to be returned to them, if at all, in the shape of bullets. They may be spent for bullets already shot away, but shot away in defence of the rights of these very men.

Certainly if there is any reason why the farmers of Kent and the mechanics of Birmingham should help pay the cost of the war, there is ten times as much reason why the miners of the Rand should bear a hand.

A HAPPY BRIDEGROOM AT 102

The Bride is a Young Thing of Only Eighty Summers

Yorktown, Va., Sept. 24—What is probably the most peculiar marriage license ever issued by a state official was prepared by the County Clerk of Gloucester Saturday last. The peculiarity in this instance lies in the extreme age of the contracting parties, the man being 102 years of age and his intended wife 80.

The newly wedded pair are Solomon Lewis and his wife, both respectable colored people of this county. The ceremony was performed Sunday at New Mount Zion, in the upper part of the county, by the Rev. James Smith, a colored pastor. Solomon was a slave and belonged to the estate of Thomas Fauntleroy, of King and Queen county. His first wife married two years ago, after a married life of 70 years. His grandmother was born aboard a slave ship while crossing to this country from Africa, and lived to be 110 years old. His mother, who died in 1863, was 101. He has a brother now living in Piney Swamp at the great age of 107, whom he remembers as driving beef cattle to Gloucester Point for the American army during the war of 812.

Solomon claims to have been born in November, 1799, and thus was one month old at the death of George Washington. The old man is somewhat bent by age, but with the aid of a stick can walk and carry himself as erect as if he were only 21.

The marriage of the aged pair was a matter of great interest to the surrounding county, and was witnessed by a large concourse of white people, as well as a vast crowd of negroes.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers, Fortune's Sport, Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

she could only hope, since Winnie said nothing more on the subject, that other troubles had for the time being crowded that one out of the girl's mind. She would have thought differently, however, could she have seen how her daughter's wide open eyes gazed into the darkness every night, as the clock ticked out the small hours.

Winifred no longer went to bed to sleep, but to lie turning over plan after plan.

If it had not been for the sum put into the Irish paper—and lost—the crisis might have been tided over, but as it was, there was scarcely any available money, and a thousand calls for it. Rent to be paid; servants and household bills to be paid. And presently Dick would be at home again—a delightful fellow whom everyone liked, but boyishly selfish and destitute of that indescribable quality which enables a man to get on in the world. He would be a hindrance, instead of a help, pleasant as his society was; for he liked nice things, and would be unable to earn them. He was only another to be provided for, and though he would cheerfully try to find something to do, Winifred was almost as certain as of her own existence that he would fail, as he had failed dozens of times before.

She wrote to her old manager, with whom she had toured the provinces; but he had been vexed with her for leaving him, prophesying evil things, and his letter in answer to her was a mild "I told you so." His company was full. There was no hope from him.

Then she tried other provincial managers—everyone whose name she knew. She visited the agents again and again, and at last she was reduced to answering advertisements in the theatrical papers. But in one or two cases she was too late, and in others the salary was not to exceed a guinea a week, the actress to play six leading parts in a repertoire, and provide all her own dresses.

Meanwhile, Dick came home looking adorably handsome, and bemoaning his own misfortunes, which, in his eyes, loomed larger than his sister's, and were irritatingly increased by hers. He wandered about, seeking sub-editorships on the strength of his Irish experience, or stayed at home and wrote stories which nobody would have.

There was no money save a quarterly instalment of Mrs. Gray's tiny pension and the remains of Winifred's savings, so that affairs grew desperate and the future loomed dark, with no ray of hope shining through its clouds.

CHAPTER XII.

Winifred's Luck.

One morning Mrs. Gray, aching in heart and soul at the thought of her own helplessness and the sight of Winifred's face growing whiter every day, impulsively reproached Dick for only trying to get the sort of work he liked, not striving for what he might really obtain, no matter if it were irksome. The burden thrown upon Winnie was too great; he must shoulder his part of it.

Without a word Dick took up the smart silk hat he had been playing with, and walked out of the room with such a look on his beautifully chiseled face—wonderfully like his handsome, improvident father's—that the mother's heart smote her.

That afternoon, while Winifred was out wearily interviewing the agents who had always the same answer, a note in Dick's handwriting was brought to Mrs. Gray by a messenger.

"Dear Mother—I have done what you wished, and shouldered my half the burden," it curtly ran. "As you truly said, I ought not to mind whether it is irksome or not, and as there seemed to be only one door open to me, I've gone in by it. I suppose you won't scorn my father's profession for me, even though I begin at the bottom. This means that I've taken the King's shilling—or would, if they'd bothered giving it me. And I'm now Private Richard Gray, First Battalion Northamptonshire Regiment, but still your son, who—I hope you'll think—has done the best he could."

"P.S.—(Dick had not been able to resist this last reproachful little stab.) "As I thought it would be better not to shame you and Win by calling on you in the uniform of a private soldier, I have enlisted in a regiment quartered at a distance. This, to save you pain; and so good-bye."

A week later followed a letter imploring his mother, for Heaven's sake, to get money somehow, no matter how, and buy him out. The life was awful. A gentleman couldn't stand it. If he weren't saved from it he would not answer for himself. He would be tempted to commit suicide, for existence as a "ranker" was worse than death.

Supposing he did take his own life? the mother and daughter asked each other. He was rash enough to do anything, and his present mood seemed a desperate one. Yet they could not help.

It was while Mrs. Gray still held Dick's passionate appeal in her hand, just read, that the bell rang sharply. Winifred herself went to the door, as Jameson and the cook had both been paid and sent away. A district messenger-boy had come with a letter for her. "I was to wait for an answer, miss," he said.

The letter was from FitzJohn Doulton, the agent whom Winifred had called upon in vain on the first day of her trouble. Since then she had seen him not once, but several times; yet he had never any hope to hold out. Now he wrote in haste, asking her to come down at once, as there was a chance which might suit her.

Winifred was too young and healthy a girl not to be sanguine. In the past weeks of suspense and disappointment she thought that she had learnt not to hope for anything until it should be a certainty, but now her heart leaped up with a bound. She had lost a certain superficial radiance of her prettiness lately through sleepless nights and weary days, which had drained her face of color, robbed her eyes of brightness, and her cheeks of their childlike contour; but as she ran in to Mrs. Gray with the letter from Mr. Doulton all her bloom and sparkle had come back.

"We'll wire poor old Dick to keep up his courage, and that we'll do our best for him," she cried. "And for you, dearest—oh, it shall be all right for you soon—soon. You didn't think I'd forgotten. It does really seem as if there were something in this. Mr. Doulton wouldn't have troubled to send up in such a hurry otherwise. And I've sent the boy back to say that I'll

STOCK MARKETS

Public Scare Causing Bargain Offerings.

New Yrk, Sept. 26—A scare has certainly taken possession of the public who led the stocks. The exhorbitant demands on unusual dimensions by many houses, and the newness in the business of many firms which have embarked in the past two years, have accentuated the trouble. As was the case on May 9th, 1901, the timidity and inexperience of many stock exchange members caused undue and indiscriminate slaughter. These new houses, who have never been through dark days on the street, have become frightened and unwilling to carry their customers, save on enormous margins, however forced indiscriminate selling, which the experienced bears have naturally taken advantage of, aggravating the situation by heavy offerings of phantom securities. It has brought stocks down to the bargain counter. Those who can buy, and put up liberal margins if necessary, will make the money after the timid have disposed of their holdings. Under the existing conditions it is not possible to state how low stocks may go. It is a market necessity and not of values; values are consequently slaughtered.

To buy and protect adequately is advisable. To buy and be only able to margin 6 points, with inability to protect beyond the amount if necessary, would be injudicious. To such as can protect their holdings we advise purchases upon a scale. To those who cannot protect liberally we advise waiting until the market has settled and the storm is over. It will be infinitely better for such to purchase at higher prices after the frightened longs have gone ashore. Before October comes around many people will wonder why they did not take advantage of the lower prices. Not one bushel less of grain will be carried and sold owing to the present market scare. Just as much freight will be offering as before, and earnings will not be decreased one dollar. Stocks are cheaper and on the bargain counter—that is the only reason of the case. The time to exercise good common sense is here. Purchase only what you can protect for even 10 to 15 points if necessary, and hang on to it until the storm is over.

Money was more easily obtainable to-day than yesterday, and didn't loan as high. Stocks were very feverish but much stronger, and fair gains recorded. Liquidation diminished greatly while inquiry increased. Unless money is bid up materially higher than heretofore it is probable that the lowest prices have been recorded. Stocks are selling at bargain prices at the present time, and if purchased now with liberal margins behind them, should not only be wise to do but profitable as well. The short interest has increased largely, that the lowest prices have been recent. Sales, 820,800.

Wickenburg, Ariz., Arizona's Great Gold Mine

Over 300,000 tons of ore blocked out. Conservative mining men place value of ore in sight at $3,000,000.00. For the purpose of equipping the mine with a large plant, a block of stock is offered at par value, $10.00 per share. Stock is non-assessable.

Before offering a share of stock to the public, the incorporators of this Company spent over $150,000 in extensive development work, and now have in sight over 300,000 tons of high grade free milling ore, which represents a value of more than three times the capital stock of the Company, and will at a conservative estimate return a net profit to the shareholders of about $4,000,000.

Particular attention is drawn to the fact that moneys subscribed for stock are applied entirely to the work of developing and equipping the mine and that no commissions have to be paid to brokers, fiscal agents, etc. and extent.

Fullest investigation invited, both as to the company and the property, which has been termed "The Great Arizona Gold Mine," because of its exceptional richness and extent.

Subscriptions should be sent in at once, as only enough stock will be sold to pay for equipment. Address, Oro Grande Mines Co., [illegible] Park Row Bldg., New York.

The Servant Girl Question

And now farmers are said to be suffering from inability to solve the servant girl problem, as well as their city neighbors. They can't get hired girls for love or money. Ordinarily the farmer's wife and daughters pitch in and do the work, but the crops are now so abundant that bigger forces of male help are required, and the housework has increased beyond the capacity of the feminine members of the household to provide for it without overwork. Prosperity even on the farm has its drawbacks.

Good Figuring

The following was handed The Times for publication, and is given as an actual occurrence in one of the junior forms of the Peterborough schools:

"Now, my little man," said a teacher to her bright looking little pupil, "What do five and two make?"

The little one remained silent.

"Well, suppose, now, I were to give you five rabbits today and two more to-morrow, how many rabbits would you have then?"

"Eight," promptly answered the juvenile.

"Eight! Why how do you make that out?"

"'Cause I've got one to home already."

Mr. T. G. Choate Worse

Word was received in town last night conveying the sad intelligence that Mr. T. G. Choate, who is confined to Grace Hospital, Toronto, had been stricken with acute appendicitis and was rapidly sinking. There was no hope whatever of his recovery. This information will be received with a shock by hundreds of our readers, who are acquainted with Mr Choate and who knew him only to admire and esteem him for his many fine qualities. While there is life there is hope, and we will still hope that a turn for the better may take place.

A Remarkable Fish

In the show window of Capt. R. M. Roy's photograph studio is exhibited a remarkable picture. It shows a party standing on the wharf at Jubilee Point with the trim little yacht Roy Roy in the back ground. In the centre of the party stands Mr. Stuart, of the Cereal Company, holding a rod and line with a muskinonge dangling at the end of the line. The peculiar part of the thing is the size of the fish. It is larger than Mr. Stuart by several inches, and would measure six feet. It is an old saying that seeing is believing, and those who doubt the genuineness of the above can go and see the picture for themselves And it wasn't a good day for fishing, either.

THE IRON WORK BEGUN

The Steel Superstructure for the Lift Lock Now Arriving

Several car loads of superstructure for the lift lock have arrived from the Dominion Bridge Company's Works, Montreal. The work of putting these immense steel fittings together will be a job of gigantic proportions, and will take many months to complete, no one knows how long. The operations will, it is said, be continued through the cold weather.

The work already done will look small when the steel portion is in place. The construction of the lift lock is an engineering feat second to none of the new century.

ST. JOHN'S HARVEST FESTIVAL

Eloquent and Impressive Sermon by Rev. Canon Welsh

The annual harvest festival in connection with St. John's church was held last night. Rev. Canon Welsh, of Toronto, preached an eloquent and impressive sermon. The large congregation joined in the service of thanks for the bountiful harvest.

The decorations were profuse, and the beautiful edifice was made still more beautiful and attractive with the arrangement of flowers and fruits. Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rev. A. E. Langfeldt, Rev. W. L. Armitage and others assisted in the service.

THE NATURAL ROUTE

For Grain is by Way of Midland and Peterborough

Midland is going to be a place of importance if the scheme for double-tracking the railway to Peterborough goes through, and it is reported that General Manager Hays, of the Grand Trunk favors it. The water in Midland harbor is deep, so that vessels of heavy draft can unload there. From Peterborough to Montreal, both the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk have lines of railway. By double-tracking the intervening section, and arranging for its use by both companies, a splendid grain route will be provided, and just as soon as the Canadian shipbuilders catch up to the railways, the story of Manitoba grain reaching the ocean via Buffalo and New York will be ended. The Midland project is better, and far cheaper than that of the French River canal.

OBITUARY

Death of Mrs. F. M. Kridler Formerly of Apsley in Minnesota

The News, Graceville, Minn., contains the particulars of the death of Mrs. F. M. Kridler, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Billings, Kilborn, Chandos, who was born in Chandos, Peterboro County, April 1st, 1871, and married a June 23rd, 1899. The following is from the News:

The residence of this community were shocked Monday morning upon receipt of the sad news of the sudden death of Mrs. F. M. Kridler, formerly of this city, which occurred at the home of her sister, Mrs. Robt. Knox, in Medina, last Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, after a brief illness of about 14 hours, the immediate cause of her death being kidney trouble and convulsions before labor. Mrs. Mae E. Kridler, nee Kilborn, was born at Peterborough, Canada, in 1871, was married to F. M. Kridler on June 23, 1899, and they have since made their residence in Chokio. Mrs. Kridler was a kind and loving wife, an estimable lady, and her many good traits and character won for her the esteem and friendship of all who knew her. Deceased leaves a husband, an aged mother, three sisters and a brother to mourn her sad demise, to whom the sympathy of the entire community is extended in this their hour of sorrow and affliction. The funeral took place Tuesday morning from the residence of Robert Knox, and services were conducted at the Congregational church and grave by Rev. Squire, and the remains were interred in the Lakeview cemetery at Graceville. Messrs. Bart, Benson, Miller, Larson, Regan and Slade were pall-bearers. Chas. Leaman being funeral director.

NORWOOD.

A fire destroyed the residence of Mr. E. Seger, Spring street, Norwood, about 5 o'clock this morning. The blaze started to the rear of the house and was making rapid headway when noticed. Most of the contents were saved. The house was valued at about $800 on which there was $600 insurance.

HARD ON CHILDREN

When Teacher Has Coffee Habit

"Best is best, and best will ever live." When a person feels this way about Postum Food Coffee, they are glad to give testimony for the benefit of others.

Miss Evelyn Purvis, of Free Run, Miss. says:—"I have been a coffee drinker since my childhood, and the last few years it has injured me seriously. One cup of coffee taken at breakfast would cause me to become so nervous that I could scarcely go through with the day's duties, and this nervousness was often accompanied by deep depression of spirits and heart palpitation.

I am a teacher by profession," and when under the influence of coffee, have to struggle against crossness when in the school room. When talking this over with my physician, Doctor Johnson, of Enon, Miss., he suggested that I try Postum Coffee, so I purchased a package and made it carefully according to directions; found it excellent of flavor, and nourishing. In a short time I noticed very gratifying effects; I was not irritated by my pupils, life seemed full of sunshine, and my heart troubled me no longer. I attribute my change in health and spirits to Postum alone."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and Social nature, either by phone or in writing.—[Ed Times]

A Responsive Chord

(By our Junior Reporter.)

The junior reporter of this great family journal has got 'em again. The spasm came on last night, when he worked off the following, which was found on the "copy" hook in our news room this morning:

Into each life
Rain must fall
So we do not think we Get it all.
Though you are prone
To so declare,
We don't. And yet
We get our share.

Now and then in Peterborough, Pete,
The water ever
Flows the street
The rain pit falls a
Solid week
Upon the country
Wet and bleak.

But yet, O tell me,
Why complain,
About the day of,
Drizzling rain.
Why not be glad when
It is done
To greet again a
Smiling sun?

When this g.f.j. has time to get his muse dried out and warmed, it will write another poem on "Poets vile and poets raw, Ashburnham, Ashburnham, hehaw! he-haw!" We merely mention this so that our millions of readers, scattered over Europe, Asia, Africa and America, may be prepared for the worst.

SLOPEVILLE—DOURO

—Threshing is the order of the day. The low, distant murmur of the unis can be heard from eve.y to at.

—The farming industry of Douro has attained a high degree. J. M. Walsh has purchased the O'Toole property at a neat sum. Mr. J. Carr has also purchased Mr. C. O'Brien's farm.

—Mr. Willie O'Brien has sold his farm and intends going into the grocery business with his affable son-in-law, Mr. P. G. Towns. No doubt the firm will carry on a successful business, as Mr. Towns has always made a special effort to please his customers with good tea. Mr. Willie Crow has been engaged as advance advertising agent, and is already at work with his paste and posters putting up bills. We wish the firm success in their new undertaking. In addition to this the firm intends putting in a printing press to publish a daily paper, which will be known as the "Morning Glory." No doubt the paper will have a large circulation, as Mr. O'Brien, the senior member of the firm, will edit the paper himself.

—Mr. Bart Leahy rides a new wheel, purchased of McPherson & Young, Peterborough.

—Quite an excitement arose in our village last week over the appearance of a government official, as information had been laid that Mr. Maurice O'Brien was operating a "still" on his farm, but on investigation it was found to be simply a contrivance for making paste for Messrs. O'Brien & Towns to advertise their celebrated teas.

—The T.A.S. enrolled fifty-two new members Sunday. No doubt the membership will increase rapidly, as Mr. Wm. Moher, who is a strong temperance advocate, has been elected president.

MERRY WEDDING BELLS

Mr. Thos. E. Cunningham of Town, is Married to Miss Katie M. Hooper

A very interesting and pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. Thos Hooper, North Monaghan, on Wednesday at 11 a.m., when his daughter Miss Katie M., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Thos. E. Cunningham, of the staff of Mr. George Carton, town.

An elegant and becoming costume of brown Venetian cloth, trimmed with rose applique of the same color, and brown velvet picture hat to match, was worn by the bride.

Miss Lottie Kindred, of town, performed the duties of bridesmaid, while Mr. Percy Dunnigan, of Wentworth, cousin of the groom, acted as best man.

A profusion of autumn leaves of varied tints formed the tasteful decorations, underneath an arch of which Rev. C. L. Thompson, performed the ceremony. An elaborate wedding breakfast, served by Mr. Thomas Hooper, town, was partaken of by the guests who numbered about fifty at the conclusion of the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham left per 12 o'clock G.T.R. train for their honeymoon trip. Their many friends in Peterborough and vicinity wish them the fullest measure of joy and happiness this world can bestow.

VIEWS ON COALITION

The Toronto World Says the Times Started the Discussion

The Toronto World says: A chronological survey of the rumors of coalition forms interesting reading, and The World gives extracts from several papers that have, since early in July, when The Peterboro Times first sprung the idea, expressed their views. The Peterboro Times said, in a despatch from its Toronto correspondent, that coalition was in the air. For a period of a week or more politicians on both sides were given an opportunity to deny the rumor, and newspapers devoted much space to a discussion of its probability.

'Tis now the gladsome bachelor
Skims over his bank roll
And gladly says unto himself;
"This does not go for coal."

Sleeplessness

Is akin to insanity. Many a woman realizes this as she lies awake hour by hour, peopling the darkness with phantoms, starting at the creaking of the bed or the rustle of the bedclothes. Such symptoms in general point to disease of the delicate womanly organs, and a constant drain of the vital and nervous forces. This condition cannot be overcome by sleeping powders. The diseased condition must be cured before the consequences of disease are removed. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the womanly diseases which cause nervousness and sleeplessness. It is the best of tonics and invigorants, nourishing the nerves, encouraging the appetite and inducing refreshing sleep. Irregularity, weakening drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness are perfectly cured by "Favorite Prescription."

"My wife was sick for over eight years," writes Albert H. Fultz, Esq., of Altamont, Grundy Co., Tenn. "She had uterine disease and was treated by two physicians and got no relief. At last I read about Dr. Pierce's medicines and we decided to try his 'Favorite Prescription.' I sent to the drug store and got one bottle and the first dose gave ease and sleep. She had not slept any for three nights. Being sure that it would cure her I sent for five more bottles and when she had taken the sixth bottle she was sound and well."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a laxative is required.

—The city papers have been in the habit of poking fun at the country editors who receive cordwood on subscription account. But things have changed. The country editor who has his back yard full of subscription wood has the dead wood on the would-be funny city editor, who would like to even see some of that wood.

—It is stated that by the end of the year the Grand Trunk Railway will have 775 miles of double track. The double tracking between Montreal and Niagara Falls will be completed by the end of November. The general manager has also stated that grades on the Chicago section have been so reduced that he believes the train loads can be materially increased.

Direct Communication Between Manchuria and Principal Russian Cities

Isnard Failed to Interest Schwab — French Statesman Wishes to Establish New Trans-Atlantic Line

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 26.—The Manchurian Railway Company, says a St. Petersburg correspondent, has arranged to secure the co-operation of Russian railroad and steamship companies in the establishment of direct communication between Manchuria and the principal Russian cities. Representatives of the various companies appointed to consider the question have decided to co-operate with the Manchurian company under the same conditions as those regulating the direct Anglo-Russian passenger traffic. Through communication will be established, uniting the principal stations of Manchuria with the chief places on the Siberian railway and a number of cities of Russia. Through tickets will be issued between St. Petersburg, Moscow and Warsaw, and Shanghai and Nagasaki. Provision will be made for the through transportation of goods from Odessa to places on the Manchurian line by sea to Port Arthur, and thence by rail.

INTERVIEW WITH CHARLES M. SCHWAB.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 26—A special from Aix Les Bains says: "M. Isnard Deputy for Brest, and Secretary Chamber of Deputies, last night had a long interview with Charles M. Schwab. Isnard has been working for more than ten years on a project to establish a trans-Atlantic line between Brest and New York. He wished to have Schwab's support in the enterprise, and said that by saving ten hours in crossing, the new line would do away with all others leaving from Havre, Cherbourg, etc. Mr. Schwab, although much interested in Isnard's plans, refused to have anything to do with them for good reasons, the first and most important being that, belonging to the steamship trust, he would be running in competition with his own interests. He also said Americans in general object to French steamship lines, on account of the French trains, which rarely connect with incoming or outgoing steamers, and they would object much more to eight hours from Paris to Brest than to ten hours more at sea."

CHINESE EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 26— Published reports, says a Tokio correspondent, show that the new Chinese educational system is modelled closely on Japanese lines, but a leading Japanese journal strongly condemns the Chinese Government's failure to secularize education, thereby perpetuating old prejudices.

SALE OF CHATEAU GRIGNAN.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 26—A Paris correspondent says Chateau Grignan, closely associated with Mme. De Sevigne, or, rather, what the revolution left of it, is to be sold by auction.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY BY CABLE AND LETTER

London, Sept. 26—It is not expected here that Mr. Henry Phipps, of Pittsburg, who has given $100,000 to the Boer Generals fund, will have many imitators.

Reading, Pa., Sept. 22— Two long trains of newly mined anthracite coal passed through this city for tidewater points today, the first solid trains of hard coal since the miners strike began. They consisted of sixty-nine cars It was such a novelty that thousands stopped to read the chalked inscriptions on the cars, such as "This is the genuine article, "This coal was mined by Americans." "This car contains scab coal," &c.

The coal was mined in the Reading company's collieries in the end of Schulykill county, principally at Brookside and Good Spring by licensed miners. Railroad men say tonight that there are 385 more loaded cars in the yards to be shipped to Philadelphia and New York before morning.

Reading company officials expect largely increased shipments next week.

Chippewa, Ont., Sept. 25 —Mrs. Farnks, a widow about 50 years old, who lived alone, was found dead in her house this morning. Blood was spattered against the walls and there was a bad wound on her head. She was evidently murdered sometime during the night.

SHOT WITH BUCKSHOT.

Forest, Ont., Sept. 25—Last evening ex-Chief James Johnson, of Sauble Indian Reserve, Township of Bosanquet, while in the woods near Port Frank, received a charge of buckshot in the back, the neck, and back of the head. Thirty-six shots have been removed. Dr. Scott, of Forest, is in attendance on the wounded man, and hopes for his recovery. It is not yet explained who did the shooting, or how it came about.

Berkeley, Cala., Sept. 25—As a result of a riotous diversion by students of the University of California, one of their number, Winfield Reed, of Santa Barbara, Calif, is in jail, on a charge of felony, and others are likely to be incarcerated. During a big rally to the football team, about [illegible] students took possession of a local train, put out the lights, turned on the hand-brakes, and demolished the entire furnishings.

Reed was detected in the act of putting on the air-brakes, and was arrested. The students rushed to his rescue, and a fight ensued, but Reed finally was placed in jail. The students tried to storm the place but were repulsed.

President Wheeler, of the university, said that he saw no reason why the law should not take its course in Reed's case, as his offence was serious. Other arrests are probable.

Ottawa, September 26.—The building and property occupied by the late James Leslie, as a jewellery store on Sparks street, Ottawa, main thoroughfare, was sold by auction to R. J. Devlin, the furrier, for $50,000.25. The property is assessed at $31,000. There was a spirited competition in the bidding.

Ottawa, September 26.—His Excellency the Governor-General, accompanied by Lady Minto, the Ladies Elliot, Capt. Bell, Capt. Hughes and Mr. Guise, left yesterday for Qu'Appelle for some weeks, during which His Excellency expects to enjoy some moose hunting.

New York, Sept. 24—A rig that appeared on Fifth avenue yesterday afternoon attracted no end of notice because the cart was before the horse literally. The vehicle was designed for pleasure driving and contained a man and a woman. The horse was a handsome cob.

The carriage was shaped like a hansom, but the shafts between which the horse was hitched stuck out behind. Those who saw the rig go by couldn't make out just how the horse was guided. The carriage had in front a lever not unlike that by which an automobile is guided and was fitted with a brake.

The vehicle was driven up Fifth avenue and disappeared in Central Park.

Edward Highlander, a stationery traveller, who has just returned from a trip to the coast, tells of an experience at one of his stops. At Yorkton, the people are of so many nationalities that no less than 23 languages are spoken in a small town, of about 1,400 inhabitants. A party to whom he was talking, speaking of the Galicians, remarked what large men they were. Pointing to two big husky farmers he said, there are two, they are getting quite like Canadians, go and talk to them. The traveller went up to the pair, and asked, what part of Galicia are you from? and was dumfounded to receive the reply,—Galicia be —— we're from Bruce. It is now a bye-word in Yorkton.

A Prominent Clergyman Says:

"Paine's Celery Compound Purifies the Blood and Revives the System."

No Other Medicine in the World Has Ever Achieved Such Wonderful Victories Over Disease and Suffering

Paine's Celery Compound has wrought marvellous cures for suffering men and women in every section of the Dominion. It has the indorsation of the best men and women in Canada, because they have found the great remedy to be exactly what was claimed for it. Scores of prominent clergymen have gratefully written in its praise, and recommend it when they have opportunity. Rev. J. D. Leishman, of Angus, Ont., gives his own personal experience as follows:

"I have always found Paine's Celery Compound an excellent nerve tonic, and have frequently recommended it to persons suffering from nervous debility and sleeplessness. I believe it to be a most powerful medicine. It also purifies the blood and revives the system. Give it a fair trial and it will in these cases be found helpful."

AMERICAN GAVE $100,000

Arthur White's Gift Announced by Gen Botha at Rotterdam

Special to The Times.

Rotterdam, Sept. 26.—Gens. Botha and Delarey made speeches in a concert hall here last night. They said in substance that they desired, first, to obtain compensation for private property destroyed by the British during the war, which Mr. Chamberlain, the British Colonial Secretary, had refused to grant, and secondly, to help the poor in the two former republics. Twenty thousand women and children had died during the war, 4,000 men had been killed and 16,000 wounded. Most of the wounded were incapable of working now, and for these they sought assistance.

Gen. Botha announced that on Saturday he had received $100,000 from an American named Arthur White, and he asked others to follow this example.

Gen. DeWet, who is tired out, has gone to The Hague to rest.

TRANSVAAL TRADE

Industrial Development is at a Standstill Until the Government's Intentions are Known

Special to The Times.

London, September 27. -- The Times' Johannesburg correspondent says that events in the Transvaal every day testify to the unwisdom of delay on the politics go to Jericho; let them look at its intentions regarding the amount of war indemnity to be imposed on the conquered Boers. Industrial development in the Transvaal is at a stand-still. A large amount of capital waiting for the official establishment of peace is to be devoted to the development of the country, is still locked up in the banks until the intentions of the Government are known. One company has work waiting which will necessitate an outlay of £10,000 a month, but the management hesitates to inaugurate operations at present, owing to the general feeling of mistrust prevailing. This is but one of many instances that could be mentioned, says the correspondent, showing to what extent the Boer country suffers from its enforced activity.

Unique Suit Against a "Medium"

Special to The Times.

Toronto, September 26.—A Brantford medium, Mrs. Gladys Dudley, in a recent spiritualistic seance there, made the tragic death of hotel keeper Jas. Quirk, a subject of special reference upon which she claimed special knowledge far exceeding that possessed by the crown. Now the widow of James Quirk has been granted by Judge Hardy there an injunction to prevent the medium making any further reference to the manner in which her husband met his death or to the whereabouts or identity of his supposed slayer. To-morrow the court here will be asked to continue that injunction until the trial of Mrs. Quirk's unique suit, perhaps the first of its kind in Canada. Mrs. Quirk may seek damages for the injury done by the medium.

A Moose Visits Campbellford

Campbellford Herald:—On Wednesday of last week, several residents of Seymour west were surprised to see a moose, one of those antlered monarchs of the forest that are rarely seen except in the deep forests of the far north. The strange visitor was first seen by Mr. Robert Curle on his farm about three miles northwest of Campbellford and was quietly feeding among his herd of cows. Mr. Curle hastened to the house to acquaint his wife and a number of ladies who were there at the time, and on going out they saw the stately animal walk along near the orchard and enter the cornfield. Mr. Curle says it was as large as the largest horse, and stood high above the cows. The animal was also seen by Robert Stillman as it was moving westward. It did not confine its visit to the country for the preceding day it came to Campbellford and was seen by several citizens on the "Ogilvie" hill. It is doubtless one that has escaped from captivity, as it appeared to show little fear when Mr. Curle approached it.

THE NEW AIRSHIP A GREAT SUCCESS

Spencer Says His Machine is Perfect in a High Wind

HIS JOURNEY OVER LONDON

Highest Altitude He Reached was 1,500 Feet—Balloon so Constructed that it Acts as a Parachute if it is Torn

London, Sept. 26.—Stanley Spencer, the aeronaut, who sailed his self-constructed airship a distance of thirty miles, has received many congratulations. He was not disposed to exaggerate his achievement in steering an air- anything approaching perfect control. his machine is absolutely perfect in a gentle wind. He had intended to cross St. Paul's cathedral and headed that way. He found it was too foggy, however, and turned toward the West End where it was clearer. In an interview to-day he said:

"In a strong wind I would require a stronger balloon. The steering was absolutely perfect. She answered her helm beautifully, and never made more than a four-foot pitch."

This is not the impression conveyed to the casual observer, to whom it appeared that the machine was not under went very low and the balloon pointed At times it whirled apparently in an eccentric manner, but for considerable stretches it behaved wonderfully well in the wind.

The all-important question is whether Spencer would be able to exercise control over its direction in a wind. This question has not yet been settled. Mr. Spencer made no announcement beforehand as to the exact route he could make the machine cover. When he started his intention was to go over London in some direction. He says the highest altitude he reached was 1,500 feet.

The only exciting moment during the trip was over Chelsea, when the airship went very low and the balloon pointed toward the earth. It came down with great rapidity.

"When I was about 500 feet from the ground and 500 yards from a church spire," said Spencer, "the people thought I was in danger and yelled frantically, thinking I would be smashed against the spire. The yells sounded blood-curdling and made me turn cold. I altered the rudder and swept beautifully around the church and glided away on my course.

"I began the ascent at 4.30 o'clock in the afternoon, and descended at the end of the journey at 6 o'clock. I calculated that the entire distance covered was about thirty miles. Before crossing the Thames I made two circular evolutions, and circumvented the big wheel at the Earl's Court Exposition. The people looked like ants. They could see and hear the propeller working. I thought of alighting at Harrow, but there were too many houses, so I proceeded to Eastcote, where I descended in perfect safety without any assistance.

"A few minutes after I got down an old farmer came along. He was too frightened to come very near. Perhaps he took me for the first arrival from Mars. He came to my assistance, however, and between us we managed to disinflate the balloon. Others came and assisted me, so that two hours after alighting the whole airship was packed for London."

The skeleton framework of the airship is a frail-looking affair about 75 feet long, with a cradle for the aeronaut a few feet from the back end. The tractor, which is made of pine, is placed in the fore part of the framework and draws the ship after it. Mr. Spencer believes that the bluntness of the front makes for steadiness, rigidity and progression. The gasbag, which is 70 feet long, is capable of holding 20,000 cubic feet of hydrogen. It is so constructed that, if in the event of a mischance it is torn, it acts as a parachute, bringing the aeronaut safely to the earth. It can descend rapidly. The gas can be replaced by air in a very short time.

The motor is the most interesting part of the mechanism. A slender platform of bamboo and rope suspended from the balloon acts as a car and carries the engine. It also provides a footing for three or four persons. The petrol motor, which has a capacity of 30-horse power, is placed as far as possible from the gas valve.

A COAL MIXE UP

With a Few Local Touches Thrown in to Flavor

The following was handed to The Times for publication, evidently being the result of many hours of serious brain twisting -

I'm very unhappy, I'll tell you why: look at the price of coal; wherever I go, the high and the low, the fast and the slow, the rich and the poor, they don't know what's to be done,$10 or $12 a ton. It makes us weep, when will it be cheap? Oh look at the price of coal. I should have been married six months ago—But look at the price of coal! I asked a young lady herself, you know, but she said to my [illegible], "you must go." I went and I asked her sweet ma-ma; I went and I asked her sweet pa-pa, but they shook their heads and both of them said: "Oh look at the price of coal."

I was walking down George street one day—look at the price of coal. Two men were fighting and caused a crowd, so for Chas. McGinty I shouted loud, and when the active officer came, he says: "I plainly see their game—they mean no harm—it's to keep themselves warm, for look at the price of coal.

McClellan and Miller are both clever men, look at the price of coal. They talk and discuss and make a great fuss which doesn't seem much to benefit us. It would be much better if they, both of them would poll one way, let part of Home Government in, declaring the price of coal B

DIED IN TORONTO

A Lady who Once Lived in Peterborough—Funeral on Thursday

The funeral occurred on Wednesday last of Mrs. N. M. Burns, wife of Rev. W. Burns, Toronto. There were present, Rev. W. Burns, husband of deceased lady; Dr. Burns, of Caledonia, one of her sons, and two daughters, Mrs. (Dr.) E. E. Culbert and Mrs. Fred Spencer, of Toronto. The Rev. Robert Burns, of Brampton, another son, being away in British Columbia, was unable to be present, but two of his children, and a deputation from the church, attended. A large number of ministers were present to sustain, by their presence and sympathy, their brother in his bereavement. The service opened with prayer, and the singing, with touching appropriateness, of the hymn "Safe in the arms of Jesus." Dr. Duval, pastor of Wesley church, Dundas street, where the deceased lady attended, led the services, assisted by Dr. Chowen, at one time pastor of Wesley, now of Broadway Tabernacle. Dr. Chalmers, who was pastor of Wesley when Rev. W. Burns located in this vicinity, gave the address. He spoke with much feeling of occasions wherein his brother in the ministry had performed the sweet and services for him and his which he to-day was called upon to do. The deceased lady was in her 79th year, and had only kept her bed a few days before her death. She was a sweet and gracious lady and a never tiring church worker.

The Rev. W. Burns is well and widely known all over the Ottawa Valley, and was at one time located in Peterborough. The sympathy of the Church is extended to him, in this his time of sorrow and bereavement.

ENTIRELY JUST

How American Papers Regard the Boer War Charges

Milwaukee, Sept. 26.—The Milwaukee Tribune says: It is entirely just that the British colonies in South Africa should assume at least half of the debt growing out of the Boer war. It seems a hardship that the former Boer republic should pay for the war in which they lost their liberties; but these republics have now become British colonies and the colonial governments must bear the burden. That will naturally fall less on the Boer farmers than on the great mining and other industries revived and introduced by the British. Before the war most of the taxes were paid by the mines on the Rand and industries connected with them. Probably this will be the case now. These mining companies had much to do in bringing on the war; it is just that they should pay for it.

THE QUESTION OF SECURING NEW INDUSTRIES

Discussed at Length at a Meeting of the Board of Trade Last Night

The Board Endorses the Councils' Previous Action in This Direction And Offers Its Hearty Co-Operation

The Board of Trade met in the Council Chamber last night for the purpose of taking up the question, "Franchises and Bonuses; How far can Peterborough assist manufacturers?"

There were present D.W. Dumble, Esq., in the chair, and Messrs. Morrow, J. H. Burnham, Ald. Rogers, Morrison, Batten, Clinkscale, John Nugent, Wm. Ferguson, W. H. Meldrum, T. A. S. Hay, Al Davis, J E. Belcher, Ald. J. J. Turner, F. H. Dobbin, Rev. J. C. Davidson, and about a dozen other citizens.

A lengthy discussion of the question at issue resulted in the following resolution being adopted unanimously:

COUNCIL ENDORSED

Mr. W. H. Meldrum moved, seconded by Mr. John Nugent, That the Board of Trade appreciate the efforts of the Town Council towards securing manufacturing establishments for Peterborough, and urging them not to relax their efforts, assuring them of their hearty co-operation in case of any establishment offering sufficient promise to warrant the town of Peterborough to encourage them to locate here.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL

Mr. T. E. Bradburn moved, seconded by Mr. W. G. Ferguson, That the establishment of manufacturing industries in Peterborough and the promise of more make it of the greatest consequence that the Trent Valley Canal should speedily be opened from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario, and this Board respectfully suggest to the Dominion government that the delay in the completion of the work is very embarrassing, as manufacturers count much upon it as a mode of carriage for grain and raw material, as well as for their finished products, and this Board respectfully asks for more energetic prosecution of the entire work.—Carried.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The meeting opened with but half a dozen members present. Secretary Quartermaine read the following communication:

From Chas. Tiff, Secretary of the Hamilton Board of Trade, asking for a copy of the Peterborough Board of Trades' printed by-law.—Granted.

From Geo. Hadrill, Secretary Montreal Board of Trade as follows: This Board has under consideration the desirability of endeavoring to secure the holding in this City of the next Congress of Chamber of Commerce of the Empire, which will probably take place in September next year, and interviews with the Dominion Ministers and the Provincial Premiers have encouraged the Council in that idea; moreover the President of this Board when recently in the Mother Country, visited the leading trade centres there and sought to enlist the co-operation of the several Chambers of Commerce in the project and received sufficient encouragement to warrant the Council in continuing its efforts in the matter.

The Council is now about to issue a formal invitation to the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire to hold their next Congress in this city; and would like to be authorised to do so in the name of the Boards of Trade of the whole Dominion, and I am therefore to ask that you will advise me at the earliest possible date whether your Board will for itself give such authorization for that invitation to be issued, it being distinctly understood that its doing so will not involve any pecuniary responsibility on its part.

Mr. J. H. Burnham moved, seconded by Mr. W. H. Meldrum, that the Board heartily approve of the above action of the Board of Trade of Montreal as set forth in the above communication.—Carried.

The following telegram was received from Mr. J. Alex Culverwell: "Detained by business. Linen and marble factories assured if the town does its part. Hope meeting take strenuous action regarding capturing manufacturers. This is Peterborough's chance of a life time to corral American branches. Am taking extensive American trip shortly to secure several manufacturers now preparing for removal. Hope for co-operation of board.—Received.

MR. DUMBLE'S OPINION.

In inviting discussion on the question for which the meeting was called, the President said that one of the industries seeking location here was asking a grant of two acres of land, exemption of taxes, free water, power at $10 per horse power, and $4,000 in cash. Now in such circumstances it is desirable that the council should have some means of ascertaining the views of the citizens; some clearly defined policy adopted which will govern all such propositions. The Board of Trade is composed of representative business men capable giving the Town Council some idea of what property owners will sanction in the way of inducement to manufacturers. He had therefore sent circulars to each member notifying them of this meeting and felt awfully sorry that judging by this attendance (at this time there were but eight people in the hall, the others meandering in later) Peterborough's citizens were no longer interested in their own town; by their absence they show an absolute indifference not at all creditable to the town. "I don't wish to force my views on anyone, but I have an interest in Peterborough which must in the future rely on its industries for further growth. We cannot get them but by wise and prudent effort, and, if we don't come to the front, we must contentedly sit in the rear of the march of progress."

The whole question is one of dollars and cents and not of morality, continued the president. He takes the ground that while the system of bonusing is unsound, still we cannot afford to take an independent stand when other places adopt that principle. The situation in Peterborough is not naturally a desirable one, being exceedingly hilly. This is a factor to be taken into consideration. The town should have at its disposal suitable sites for manufacturing purposes; yet recently 20 acres of land in the south were sold for $2,000, and we had not sufficient foresight to buy and reserve it for desirable sites. We haven't one single industry here now which is not the outcome of a great deal of skillful effort and energy. We wouldn't get the Canadian General today had they to choose a site. Our $4,000 bonus would be laughed at; This company brings to Peterborough at least $40,000 a year. A combination of circumstances secured their location here. The Cereal Co's. establishment is the result of the skillful effort of one man, while the Cordage Co. is due to the patriotism of a few local men.

Some establishments we gave the cold shoulder have located in other places and are now mammoth concerns.

He believes in exemption of taxes. The water company must pay its way and will make fair arrangements with any company. The power companies will in their own interests make fair terms for power, but he thought the matter of giving money will stick in the crops of the people. He himself did not feel very enthusiastic as to giving cash bonuses, but thought exemption of taxes and a free site none too much to offer any desirable concern. He did not think $4,000 a large enough sum to influence any prosperous concern either one way or another. It is desirable that we should come to a clear understanding as to how far the council will be backed up by the citizens in securing industries. The council ought to have some general policy so as to be in a position when the question arises to give a ready answer.

ALD. ROGERS

Said that this town only controls two acres of property at the south end of the town available for manufacturing sites.

MR. JAMES STEVENSON

Remarked that public opinion, so far as he could learn, was against further bonusing.

MR. A. L. DAVIS

Thought it necessary that the Town should act promptly. The most important thing is the securing of sites approximate to the railway. He did not approve of giving any more bonuses. Peterborough has sufficient natural advantages to induce the location of manufacturers. The question is one of power and freight rates and facilities. It is important to be in a position to locate manufacturers handy to railway transportation. From the fact of the Cereal Co., the Edison Co., and the Cordage Co. locating here, the freight rates must be reasonable. We have cheap power and freight rates, and with these advantages a company's having to pay for a site will not deter them from coming here. In Toronto they have to pay $35 a horse power, while here it costs but from $12 to $15. If these advantages won't bring manufacturers here, he didn't think bonusing would secure any but undesirable ones of no financial standing.

MR. W. H. MELDRUM.

In reply asked Mr. A. L. Davis to point o one industry we had secured without bonusing. The Canadian General got as good as $40,000; the Cereal Co. in exemption from increased assessment receive at least $300,000. The had an opportunity of getting the Deering Co. here, but they went to Hamilton, as also did others, because they secured greater inducements here than offered at Peterborough. If Peterborough is going to stand on its dignity in the matter of bonusing, she is going to get left, for we have no more advantages to offer in the way of freight rates and power, etc., than many other towns and cities.

ALD. ROGERS

Said the fact of five aldermen being present indicated that the Council are exceedingly anxious to represent the people truly in this matter. They recognize that Peterborough's future lies in manufacturers, and also that other towns are securing them by offering bigger inducements. We have had many applicants this year but as yet have not secured one. Last year Council gave a proposed shovel factory a free site and exemption for 10 years under certain conditions. This policy they have adhered to ever since. How much further the people will go is what the Council would like to know. Every effort should be made towards improving transportation and power facilities, and the town must be made as attractive as possible to employees. He regretted that Lakefield had secured one of the dams he had hoped Peterborough would get. Then our citi-

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 27, 1902.

THE NEW YORK "400"

Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, has created a sensation in the United States by a violent attack upon the New York "400." Mr. Watterson calls these fine old patricians a "flock of unclean birds," and other uncomplimentary names, and more than hints that they do not constitute the best society, a position awarded them by the late lamented Ward McAllister, of blessed and sycophantic memory.

Hear Mr. Watterson thunder:

The term "Smart Set" was adopted by a bad society in Europe to save itself from a more odious description. The distinguishing trait of the smart set is its moral abandonment. It makes a business of defying and over-leaping convention restraints upon its pleasures and amusements. Being titled as a rule and either rich in fact or getting money how it may, it sets itself above the law, both human and divine. Its women are equally depraved with its men. They know all the dirt the men know. They talk freely with the men of things forbidden the decent and the virtuous—that passing freely which was once excluded as unclean by gentlemen from the smoking room. They read the worst French fiction. They see the worst French plays. The very question of sex becomes interchangeable and sometimes it is the sissy earl and always the horsey girl who kick out of the traces and drag the set through the mire.

The women of this smart set no longer pretend to recognize the virtue even as a feminine accomplishment. Innocence is a badge of delinquency, a sign of the crude and raw, and a deformity which, if tolerated at all, must carry some promise of amendment. For among these titled cyprinans and only thing needed is to know it all.

In London and in Paris—at Monte Carlo in the winter, at Trouville and Aix in the summer—they make life one unending debauch; their only literary purveyor, when the read at all, the screeds of D'Annunizo and Bourget; their Mecca the roulette table and the race-course; their heaven the modern yacht with its luxury and isolation. The ocean tells no tales, and as the smart set knows no law when in extremis it can go to the sea.

The "400" in America take their cue from the smart set in Europe. Behold them at the horse show in New York. Regard them at the swell resorts after the show. Their talk—that is, what can be heard—stocks and bonds, puts and calls, horses, scandal and dogs. They the best society—good Lord!

Truly, we have come to a beautiful pass if the simpering Johnnies and the tough girls that make Sherry's and Delmonico's "hum"; that irritate the corridors of the Waldorf-Astoria with the exhalations of their unclean lives and thoughts, emulating the demi-mondaines of the Third Empire, are to be accepted, even by inference, as the "best society," while the good and virtuous of the land, even though quite able to pay their way at home and abroad, must be relegated to the "middle class" and dismissed as simple "bourgeoise."

ROOSEVELT'S DANGER

American papers are agitated over the danger into which President Roosevelt is being daily thrown. They are afraid that some day he will meet such a fate as President McKinley met. Republican papers are pointing out that the president's death at the present time would prove a very serious national loss. They are consequently advocating that the president refrain from all but absolutely necessary travelling and speechmaking and keep as much as possible to the White House. All great men are shining marks for the crank and the anarchist; Roosevelt owing to his peculiar temperament, his strenuousness, is particularly so. Yet the United States Cabinet will find it a more than ordinarily difficult task to keep the president from exposing himself to danger. In the first place he would never submit to being tied down to the routine work of the White House; in the second place he is absolutely fearless.

However, chances are very much in favor of the president coming through his term with a whole skin. His whole record has been one of such lucky escapes and good fortune as to almost make one believe he moves under a lucky star. One thing is certain, the danger of death by assassination will not deter him from moving freely around as he feels disposed.

Oldest Bicyclist in America

The honor of being the oldest bicyclist in America undoubtedly belongs to Dr. Gray, of Iowa, who rode a wheel in the year 1868. At that time Dr. Gray was a medical student at Victoria College, Cobourg, and secured one of three wheels that were imported from England, being the first shipment to arrive. It was then known as a "velocipede," and was not any larger than the present bicycle. Ten or twelve years ago the high wheels came in, only to be laid aside for the present chain wheel. The Dr. is still an ardent wheelman, using the machine in making his professional calls.

ENTIRELY JUST

How American Papers Regard the Boer War Charges

Milwaukee, Sept. 26.—The Milwaukee Tribune says: It is entirely just that the British colonies in South Africa should assume at least half of the debt growing out of the Boer war. It seems a hardship that the former Boer republic should pay for the war in which they lost their liberties; but these republics have now become British colonies and the colonial governments must bear the burden. That will naturally fall less on the Boer farmers than on the great mining and other industries revived and introduced by the British. Before the war most of the taxes were paid by the mines on the Rand and industries connected with them. Probably this will be the case now. These mining companies had most to do in bringing on the war; it is just that they should pay for it.

be at the office almost as soon as he will."

The two kissed each other, with a kiss that meant much; all they had suffered together in the past, and all they dared to hope for in the future, was in the close touch of the fading lips and the young, red mouth. Then Winifred hurried off to her room to put on her prettiest frock, that—thin and slightly worn as it already was—she might favorably impress the manager, who was presumably waiting to interview her.

For once, though others were assembled in the outer office, she had not to wait. Mr. Doulton was expecting Miss Gray, and had given orders that she was to go to him as soon as she arrived.

"Well, my dear, your chance has come at last!" were his first words, as she was shown in.

A few weeks ago he would not have ventured to call her "my dear," though it was his habit, in common with a certain type of stage-manager, to address young ladies applying to him for engagements in such familiar terms. But now Miss Winifred Gray was only a girl among other girls, "out of a shop," and dying to get one; and today was not a day when she would dare to resent a small familiarity, which, after all, meant nothing to the ears of a professional.

She only blushed, and tightened her lips a little at the agent's greeting, murmuring nervously that she had come down as quickly as she could to hear his news.

"Well, so far as I can see, you're in for a 'soft snap,' as our neighbors across the big pond say," went on Doulton. "Leading part, good salary, and immediate engagement. The only difficulty is——"

"Oh, there is a difficulty?" echoed Winifred, when he paused.

"That's for you to judge. You might or might not think it one. Anyhow, at this season of the year leading parts with twenty guineas a week screw don't grow on blackberry bushes, even for the picking of such charming young actresses as yourself."

"Twenty guineas a week!" exclaimed the girl, with a wiry beating of the blood in her temples. "Are—are you sure I can get the engagement?"

Doulton grinned at her childlike betrayal of eagerness. "It's for you to take or leave, it appears," he answered her. "Marmaduke Wantage, a man very well known all over England some years ago, is going to revive an old play, which was once very celebrated, and intends to make a great production of it. In his opinion you are exactly what he wants for the principal part, and as it's a big one he makes a big offer."

"What is the play?" asked Winifred.

"The play's 'Mazeppa.'" As Fitz-John Doulton spoke he slyly watched the girl's face from under lowered lids. But it only showed surprise.

"'Mazeppa,'" she repeated, slowly, as if the name conveyed no particular meaning to her mind, or as if she hunted vainly for an elusive recollection.

"Yes. Have you ever read Byron's famous poem?"

"No," Winifred answered, quite ashamed of the necessity for a negative. "I've read very little of Byron. I've heard of 'Mazeppa,' of course, but I don't even know what it's about. Wasn't it played a long time ago?"

"Long before your day, or even mine. But Wantage thinks its old success can be repeated, with a lot of scenic effect, and a good company. The way of it is a panto's fallen through, and he's got hold of the theater. He's going to try this instead, to open on Boxing Day. So you see there's just time to do it, with rehearsals beginning on the 15th; that's the day after to-morrow. It's sudden, but he only just got the date, and must do the best he can. I don't say that you'll like the part, though a very handsome creature, Ada Isaacs Menken, made a tremendous hit in it forty or fifty years ago. You can sign the contract to-day if you like, and get not only your railway ticket (you'll be expected to stop in Brighton for rehearsals, and not to travel to and fro between there and town), but full salary during the five weeks of rehearsals."

"Why, it's unheard of!" exclaimed Winifred, who knew enough of the stage to understand how quixotically generous such an offer was.

"Good, isn't it? But a rich amateur, who has an enormous fancy for Byron in general and 'Mazeppa' in particular, is the 'angel,' it seems, and there was some fear that it would be difficult to get just the right woman for the part. I suppose this is a sort of hook to catch the fish."

"And I am really the fish they want!" ejaculated the girl. "Surely I must be second or third choice."

"Well, Wantage did intimate that he'd suggested making overtures to Miss Neilson before applying to me at all for any of his people. But she's under contract for January, so it was no use. And there aren't many of the right sort free just now. He'll be lucky to get you, and he's evidently keen on you. Why, look here, my dear, if you'd like to get something out of this chap I'll give you a tip. You might make it a point that you get a few weeks' screw in advance—say you've got to have it before you can leave town, or anything you like. I believe he'd plump it down like a bird rather than lose you—for, you see, he's up a tree, as if the thing's to be ready by Boxing Day he must have all his arrangements in working order at once."

Winifred's head swam in a giddiness of sheer joy, in the intensity of sudden relief after long-continued strain. "Could I really do that?" she asked, her breath coming and going quickly.

"Of course you could. I'll see to that. It's all the better for me, you know," and the dramatic agent laughed. "As for Wantage and his angel, they'll be glad to put salt on the bird's tail. You're valuable to them, and once you've handled their money you're doubly bound to keep your contract; no fine lady whimsies such as some sweet maids in our profession indulge in, and matrons, too."

Winifred thought within herself there was little enough danger that she would try to escape from the contract. Why, it seemed too good to be true that so wonderful an opportunity had come to her at last! Twenty pounds a week—and for rehearsals, too—when she had reached a pass to have been thankful for three or four. She was sure that the hand of Providence was in it; and she was glad that the matter was to be arranged so quickly, for if her enemy had heard of her great luck he might have found some way of preventing it.

STOCK MARKETS

Hardheaded Common Sense

New York, Sept. 26. — Don't become panic stricken if interested in the market, be conservative at the present time and do not over-trade. It is just at present a dangerous thing to over-trade. It is not at present, as we have said before, a market based on values, but a market based on peoples' necessities. Stocks are on the bargain counter and cheap beyond question; they may be cheaper owing to the inability of many holders to hang on, as they may have more stocks than they can care for; if there be many of this class still in the market then prices will go for a time lower; if this class be pretty well closed out, then prices are scraping upon bottom. For the man who can buy and who is able to hold should stocks go lower for the above reasons, there is no doubt as to the profitable results; for such as would pay upon small margins, with inability beyond extent of same to additionally protect, loss might be his portion. We advise buying with the understanding that 15 per cent. can be placed on the account if necessary; so low in fact that many margins have been impaired

Summary: St. Paul was the feature of today's market, keeping remarkably strong all day. Louis and Nas. sold up six points from yesterday's closing, and lost some of it before the close. The high priced stocks were all in special demand and very firm, all recording advances. Lead Car Foundry and P. R. S. were largely traded in the latter, and Lead selling higher than the last recorded prices. We believe that low prices have ben made and that stocks are a purchase on every concession. Money closed at 12 per cent. Sales 767,500.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—The new crop of Manitoba and the North-West has not yet begun to be moved east of Port Arthur. The elevators at that point are filling up and it is expected that boats will begin unloading there regularly within a few days. Thus far the grain carried by the Canadian railroads has come from Chicago, Milwaukee, and Duluth, the harvest south of the line being a few days earlier than in Canada. The Canada Atlantic will load their first boat of the season at Port Arthur on Saturday.

Returns His Thanks

Mr. James Conlon, of Douro, who suffered severely on August 21st last when his three barns and contents including crops and machinery, were destroyed by fire, desires through the Times to return his sincere thanks to the London Mutual Fire Insurance Company, for their prompt settlement of the insurance. Mr. T. J. Dram, of Norwood, made the settlement, which was most satisfactory.

From Peterborough to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and the South, is via Grand Trunk and Lehigh Valley Railroad. Bunton's Ticket Office, Peterborough for Tickets, Pullman's and further particulars.

A Profitable Route

The steamer Argyle, whose advertisement appeared in The Times during the summer, carried between Cobourg and Toronto 26,000 passengers, and nobody hurt, while $20 would pay for all breakages and losses. It has cleared between $8,000 and $10,000. Next season it is in consideration to put on a boat fast enough to leave Cobourg 9 a.m. five days of the week, calling at all the ports and reach Toronto at 12 noon and devote the sixth day wholly to Oshawa excursions. This only demonstrates that it always pays to advertise, especially in the columns of this great family journal.

Typewriting Machines for Sale

We have two typewriting machines for sale at the Times Bookstore, as follows:—A Caligraph, cost $110 price $15; a Crandall, cost $75, price, $15. To any one wanting good, serviceable machines, this is a snap.

THE COAL SITUATION

Prices Advanced Yesterday from $12 to $13.50 per Ton.

Yesterday prices in Peterborough for coal advanced from $12 to $13.50 per ton. The prices will probably stand at that figure for a time, and unless the strike ends it will take another jump. Citizens are skirmishing through the country in search of wood, and many, for a time at least, will go back to a more primitive way of heating their homes.

There is no need, however, to worry. There is plenty of soft coal, and what is better still, wood will also be brought into town in large quantities Many farmers are already cutting wood and will haul it in at once, in order to take advantage of the high prices prevailing.

The Times is of the opinion that the strike is on its last legs and will be over in a few days. This is the opinion of nearly everybody who is familiar with the trouble. Once the trouble is settled, mining will be pushed with vigor, night and day, and the famine will soon end.

Mr. Stuart's Big 'Lunge

The Times is in receipt of a letter regarding the big fish on exhibition at Mr. Roy's studio, Hunter street. Our correspondent wants us to print the weight of the piscatorial curiosity. We do not know its specific gravity, but would judge from the picture that it might tip the scales at from 75 to 125 pounds. Remember, we only judge from appearances. In the matter of fish this great family journal is mighty particular to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and therefore is unwilling to commit itself in this case. That Mr. Stuart could have the strength to handle a fish of this size is probably accounted for from the fact that he eats the product of Quaker oats, which is wonderfully strengthening.

—We have just received a large quantity of up to date stationery which will be sold at unusually low prices. See the very latest "Just Out" which is a handsome box containing 25 envelopes and paper to match for 25 cents. Times Bookstore.

TO BE RE-ORGANIZED

Efforts Being Made to Put the Central Exhibition in Good Shape

A number of gentlemen met last night to informally discuss the re-organization of the Central Exhibition Society, with a view to putting in first class shape. It is thought that Peterborough should be able to put up one of the best exhibitions of any town in Canada. All that is needed is a unanimity of sentiment amongst the people, and energetic and careful management. No one doubts that the present officers have done their best, but they were badly handicapped on account of not getting public support.

The meeting took place in the parlour above the Palace Hotel, and was attended by Mr. J. M. Brooks, President of the Peterborough Turf Club; F. H. Dobbin, President of the Agricultural Society; A. Rountree, Secretary Turf Club; A. Elliott, Ald. Turner, T. E. Bradburn, R. Jackson, R. J. Munro and others.

After an informal discussion it was decided to ask the Mayor to call a general meeting of business men some evening next week, in order to take definite action.

KNEW HOW

To Stay at Post While Others Got Sick

How a trained nurse keeps up strength on properly selected food is worth knowing. The experience of Mrs. Charlotte Frank, of Covington, Ky., is probably familiar to many. She says,—

"I am a professional nurse and most of my time is spent in the sick room. Last Spring I attended a very serious case and after ten weeks close application I was in such a condition that I could neither eat or sleep, being too much worn out. After tossing in bed one night for three hours without being able to sleep I happened to think of Grape-Nuts and the good it had done a number of my patients.

I got up and ate about 1-2 cup of the food with about that much milk and returned to bed and slept five hours, and when I awoke I felt fresh and strong again. The continued use of Grape-Nuts enabled me to stay at my post while others got sick.

I have a son eighteen years old, he is six feet and one inch tall. He was so thin that the doctors and myself thought he had consumption; I commenced giving him Grape-Nuts every day and he gained rapidly in weight and now is healthy and strong.

A family in Cincinnati on my advice gave Grape-Nuts to a sick child whom no doctor could help. The girl is now well and strong. Another father had the same experience with his youngest child and he is loud in the praise of Grape-Nuts.

One of my former patients who went to England, had a little child that suffered four years with stomach trouble. Last May the mother and child came back home, both sick. I advised them what I thought best. The child, now five years old, ate Grape-Nuts three times a day and the mother once a day. When they went back to England in September they were in the best of health and took with them upon the steamer fourteen boxes of Grape-Nuts, their only fear was that they might not be able to get it in England, the mother wrote me afterward that she has not been so seasick time as was the case before."

sens should take a hand in the matter. One concern looking here for location here is going to Port Hope, not because of that Council, but on account of the stand taken by certain citizens who issued bonds for $25,000 in the company's interest, $18,000 to be spent in land and buildings, the town taking all risks. This is to be repaid at the rate of $2,500 a year.

MR. T. E. BRADBURN

Was not aware of any of our ratepayers being asked for bonds for a like purpose.

ALD. MORRISON

In enumerating the different concerns Peterborough had lost, remarked that Hamilton secured the Deering Co. owing to its seaboard facilities for transporting iron and coal at cheap rates; the same consideration secured the Otis people, while the Force concern wanted a building already built which we haven't got, so they went to the ambitious city. What we want to do is to get the Trent Valley Canal opened up to the lake. When this is done we shall be in a better position than Hamilton, being nearer the centre as it were. Then the street railway, which he hoped would be opened up shortly, will be quite an advantage in connecting industries with any point. The question of lots is a main one; we have them all around us, and on getting the railway in operation the siding question will be practically settled

ALD. J. J. TURNER.

Agreed with Ald. Morrison that the opening of the Trent Valley Canal is of vital importance, as it would cheapen freight rates during navigation.

ALD. MORRISON

Remarked that on the whole line of canal there is only one representative supporting the government. Representatives should be elected who pledge themselves to support the Trent Valley Canal.

MR. DUMBLE

Mr. Dumble thought that if we had a member from Peterborough as energetic at Ottawa regarding the canal as our member at Toronto is for local interests we might have got the canal finished long ago.

MR. W. H. MELDRUM

Remarked that when Mr. Tarte was in Peterborough he recognized the canal as a national highway, and in consequence said it must be built.

ALD. MORRISON

Replied that if the Ontario ministers could be interested in the canal they would use their influence at Ottawa.

ALD. ROGER

Opined that it would be well to bring the Montreal Board of Trade here, show them over the canal, and secure their co-operation.

The meeting then adjourned.

—"It is an ill wind that blows no good, is a saying that is often heard and the high price of coal this year may not be entirely an ill wind to the town, for we hear that several parties living in the suburbs of the town intend removing old fences that are in front of their properties and an eyesore to the appearance of the different places, which had it not been for the value attached to them as fuel this year might have remained for several years yet.

Physicians are calling attention to the fact that influenza or grip has come to stay. In the larger cities there has been a marked increase in diseases affecting the organs of respiration, which increase is attributed to the prevalence of influenza. Persons who are recovering from grip or influenza are in a weak condition and peculiarly liable to pulmonary disease.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures coughs, bronchitis, lung "trouble" and other diseases of the organs of respiration. It is the best tonic medicine for those whose strength and vitality have been exhausted by an attack of grip.

It purifies the blood, cleansing it of the poisonous accumulations which breed and feed disease. It gives increased activity to the blood-making glands, and so increases the supply of pure blood, rich with the red corpuscles of health.

"A word for your 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. E. A. Bender, of Keene, Coshocton Co., Ohio. "We have been using it as a family medicine for more than four years. As a cough remedy and blood-purifier there is nothing better, and after having the grip Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is just the right medicine for a complete bracing up."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood, and lungs.

The sluggish liver is made active by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Mrs. Morrow's Concert

Toronto Globe) The entertainment of the Tampa Cadets at the Grand Opera House last night attracted an audience that packed the theatre to the top gallery. CANADA A NATION OF GREAT SHARPSHOOTERS

The Buffalo Express Tells Its Readert What Might Happen If War Should Come

IT MIGHT BE UGLY FOR UNCLE SAM

Canada Has Half a Million of Million of Men Bearing Arms, and Who Know How to Shoot

Special to The Times.

Buffalo, Sept. 28.—The Buffalo Express prints the following, which is from a Toronto correspondent:

Canada is rapidly becoming a nation of sharp-shooters. This is one of the results of the Boer War. If the other colonies of Great Britain have learned this lesson the next campaign in which England is engaged will be a bloody affair. Canada sent sever thousand young men to South Africa, and they have profited from their contact with the Boer sharp-shooters. Today the most extraordinary enthusiasm prevails all over Canada on this subject. The Government is encouraging the development marksmanship to an extraordinary degree. The result is most surprising. Every village in Canada sports a rifle range, and every province is a school for sharpshooters. It is not a fad, but it has seized upon the Canadians with a firmness that promises to leave an indelible stamp upon the people for a generation.

Of Canada's 6,000,000 of people, there are more than 50,000 capable of bearing arms. This vast army is developing into a fighting machine of colossal proportions. Here is an aspect of the case that may interest in a degree the people of America. In this art of hitting the bull's-eye at from 1,000 to 2,000 yards, unknown distances, continues with the singular unanimity that now prevails, a conflict in which the people of the states must reckon with Canada as a hostile force would mean a serious thing. The lessons of the South African veldt indicated with frightful force just what a body of sharpshooters can do when opposed to armies trained in the old schools of war. Imagine an army of 500,000 Canadians, every man of which is capable of doing the execution that Cronje and his Boer warriors wrought along the Modder River, Colenso, and the other death traps of South Africa! That is what the Canadian riflemen will be capable of doing if this enthusiasm continues for another year.

The annual competition on the Ontario rifle range has just been finished. It was indulged in by 200 men from every part of Canada. They shot for three days. The result of the thousands of shots fired during that time forms an interesting study for any people, and more especially the Americans. More bull's-eye shots were made than any other, and the extraordinary record was made of not a single shot that would not have struck the vitals of a man had the target they were shooting at been a human being. This is an illustration of the superb work these men are capable of doing with a rifle. The Canadians have not only copied largely in this respect from the sturdy warriors who so long defied Old England's sons, but these marksmen are copying the style of fighting they were taught was so effective by the Boers. In truth, the fighting force of Canada today, with the extraordinary proficiency with the rifle, is a formidable thing, regardless of any support it might receive from the mother country. England can draw sharpshooters enough from Canada within a year alone to overwhelm any ordinary European army. They will be composed almost wholly of men, who, when in the field will conduct themselves as the Boers did. They will not shoot under the direction of their officers, though, as a matter of fact, the Canadian officers are acquiring the same dexterity with the rifle that the rank and file finds so fascinating. From now on the Canadian contingent will be fighting men, not as a bulk, firing in platoons, but cool, careful, deadly sharpshooters, pushing their way slowly forward on their bellies, firing whenever a human figure is exposed, and invariably hitting the mark, using guns that can be relied on from one to two miles and carrying a sufficient supply of ammunition to decimate an army if they utilize their force.

This is the figure the Canadian riflemen today present to the military world. They are not doing any boasting about it either. In addition to the Lee-Metford service rifle these Canadians are becoming equally expert with the six-shooter—that weapon that has proved so deadly in the hands of expert marksmen of the cavalry forces of the states on the border. The writer has seen Uncle Sam's Western fighters use their big six-shooters, knows what remarkable proficiency Colonel Guy V. Henry's rough riders of the Seventh Cavalry used to display among the Sioux of South Dakota, and yet he has seen in the last few days a large number of men, many of them civilians, who could shoot with equal proficiency afoot or horseback. It is no secret in Canada and the North-West police, a force of 2,000 expert horsemen, are the chief reliance for fast work with the pistol in the event of an emergency call for fighting men in the Dominion. These are men who know the use of a six-shooter and can hit a head at 50 yards every shot. The Government is now furnishing these fine riders all the ammunition they can shoot away in the hope of making them the best horseback marksmen in the world with revolvers and Lee-Metfords.

Here is a force of men of military discipline who can be mobilized in a surprisingly short time. Each man carried with him at all times blank orders on the Canadian Pacific Railroad for transportation for self and horse. If England should suddenly become involved with the United States, these fast riders and fast shouters would menace a given point in the states in less than a week, and they would form the nucleus for the other cavalry forces of Canada, no mean adversaries by any means. With the 10,000 cavalry of sharpshooters, backed by several hundred thousand infantry sharpshooters, Canada would throw across the line into the states, some keen fighting worthy on race would be witnessed in a very short time.

The writer has seen Uncle Sam's Buffalo soldiers, the splendid Rough Riders of Grigsby, Roosevelt and Terry, and the Long Knives of the Western prairie, those fine cavalry soldiers whom the Indians gave that name because of the sabers they formerly carried, and the Walk 'em Fasts, the foot soldiers of the prairies, also named because of their superior qualities as foot soldiers and he knows the prowess of these brave and hardy fighters of the glorious Stars and Stripes would have to meet, would produce such a sanguinary result as would make the bloody battlefields of South Africa veritable playgrounds. The Canadians do not regard lightly the fighting ability of Uncle Sam's men. Probably, the Canadians think more accurately of the fighting capacity of the Americans than the Americans do of the Canadians, but an observer of the present tactics on both sides of the lines is readily of the opinion that these cool, freckled face and red-headed men who owe allegiance in a sort of a way to the British Empire are fighting men who know how to shoot, even though they know how to die.

LORD KITCHENER'S FUTURE ARMY THAT AWAITS HIM

Leaves for India in November to Assume Command of Army, Fighting Men Number 250,000.

Simla, Sept. 27— There is a flutter in military headquarters at Simla over the approaching arrival of Lord Kitchener to assume command of the army of India.

For many years this army has been growing in strength and efficiency. Factory after factory has been established in India for its supply. Vast trains of well-organized transport have come into existence. Regiment has been added to regiment, battery to battery, squadron to squadron. The whole has been tried in the fire of hard and continually recurring frontier fighting, until the command of its quarter of a million soldiers—Sikhs, Gurkhas, Jats, Pathans, Rajputs, and Englishmen—is recognized as a bigger thing than anything short of the headship of the home forces.

India had no difficulty in pouring 10,000 British troops into Natal at the beginning of the South African war, and in supplementing them afterwards, so that, in all, she sent 22,000 men, including followers, to take part in the struggle with the Boers. She also furnished 37,000 native troops and followers and 1,200 British officers and men for the China expedition, besides five native regiments for colonial garrison duty. Her total contribution for the service of the Empire, while the South African war was in progress, thus amounted to 64,000. She also sent to South Africa and China 26,000 horses and baggage animals, 21 million rounds of ammunition, 14,000 projectiles and shells, 200,000 pairs of boots, 315,000 helmets, 946,000 greatcoats and other garments, 169,000 blankets, 42,000 tons of fodder and rations, 11,000 tents, and 11,000 sets of saddelry.

MAKING OF ARTILLERY.

The whole makes a respectable total, but it could have been multiplied by five had Great Britain consented to the employment of native troops against the Boers. How native troops would have acquitted themselves, had they been given the opportunity, is sufficiently shown by what they accomplished in China, where regiments, largely from Bombay and Madras, and by no means the pick of the Indian army, were the first inside the legation walls at the relief of Pekin.

The manufacture of Lee-Metford rifles and of cordite will shortly commence in India. Large gun-carriage works are nearly complete. Shells and small-arm ammunition are already being turned out in enormous quantities. The making of artillery has only to be decided upon by the Government of India, and sanctioned by the Secretary of State, and it could be rapidly undertaken, excellent ore, suitable coal, and extraordinarily cheap labor being all available in India.

All this is being accomplished without contribution from the British taxpayer. Indian revenues pay for everything connected with the Indian army including not only the pay and upkeep, but even the cost of recruiting the British regiments employed. The rearmament of the entire force with modern rifles, now nearly complete, has been carried through without borrowing or skimpin on the part of the Indian Treasury.

Everything is well up-to-date. It was India which set the example to the world in clothing its forces in khaki. It is India which is today founding mounted infantry schools and devising modern manoeuvres, in which 40,000 troops will be engaged next December about Delhi practising the lessons of South Africa.

It is at this point that Lord Kitchener takes over the Commander-in-Chiefship of the Indian army. It is safe to prophesy that in his able hands this fine fighting force will increase still further in efficiency and strength, and in its ability to supply itself, without calling upon any other country, with warlike stores, including arms and ammunition.

A quarter of a million fighting men, kept up continuously for the defence for the British Empire, without costing the Motherland a penny, claim the very highest military talent that England can produce to lead and direct them. The sending of Lord Kitchener for the purpose is a recognition of the justice of this claim, and is welcomed in Calcutta, and in Simla, around Sikh camp-fires and in Gurkha outposts as an indication that the efforts which India has made are appreciated, and that Indian subjects of the Empire will not again be denied, as they were denied in South Africa, the privilege of taking equal shares with the home army whenever there is hard fighting to be done.

Lord Kitchener has booked his passage to India by the P. and O. steamer Egypt, which leaves London on November 7.

The general is due to reach Bombay on November 28, whither he will proceed at once to Delhi to conduct the manoeuvres.

MARINES GUARD THE ISTHMUS

Rebels are Reported to Have Abandoned the Proposed Attack on Panama

Colon, Colombia, Sept. 28.—Companies A, C and D of the United States Marine Corps are encamped at Panama and Company B at Colon.

The vigorous action taken by the United States seems to have a deterrent effect on the rebel forces, who are reported to have retired in the direction of Chorrera through they had declared their intention to attack Panama within ten days.

The Colombian gunboat Bogota, formerly the American steamer Jessie Banning, is expected to arrive shortly at La Libertad, where another captain will replace Captain Marmaduke. He is bringing the vessel from San Francisco, where she was bought by the Colombian Government.

DEFEAT FOR THE BOXERS

Battle With the Imperial Chinese Forces Near Chengtu

Pekin, Sept. 28.—A report has reached here that the Boxers, or Lantern Society, opposed the new Viceroy Tseng, of the province of Szechuen, and about 800 imperial troops who had accompanied him from the province of Shansi, outside of Chengtu, the capital of the former province. The Boxers were defeated. This it is believed will have a salutary effect on the country, but Chengtu is in an unsettled condition. Tseng, who was formerly the viceroy of Shansi, is an able man, and is respected by all foreigners.

The Board of Foreign Affairs makes light of the troubles. It admits that Tseng is detained at Mienchou, but says the imperial troops are operating around Chengtu.

SAYS PRINCESS BEAT HER

Titled American Woman in Rome Accused By Maid

Rome, Sept. 28.—Princess San Faustina, nee Jane Campbell, a charming and cultured American lady whose husband is one of the leading members of the most exclusive Roman aristocracy, has been accused by her maid, Lucida da Muccia, of grossly maltreating her.

The maid alleges, according to a police report published here, that while staying recently at Vallombrosa, in the Hotel du Lace with the Princess, the latter in a fit of temper knocked her down and beat and otherwise injured her so severely that it will take her a fortnight to recover. The police say the maid is covered with bruises, especially her arms and shoulders.

If the girl's story is substantiated the Princess will be liable to three months' imprisonment and a fine.

The occurrence has created an extraordinary sensation in Rome society.

The Princess San Faustino is a daughter of the late George Campbell, of New York, and cousin of Mrs. T. Oakley Rhinelander. She was married to the Prince at Geneva on June 8, 1897. The Prince is a direct descendant of Henry IV. of France.

COERCION THE ONLY CRIME IN IRELAND

Landlords Tiring of Their Own Measures Seek a Compromise

A CONFERENCE PROPOSED

Leaders of the Irish Land League, Despite the Opinion of the People Willing to Try It

The Work of the League Being Hit Hard by the Government and the Lawmakers

Dublin, Sept. 28.—Ireland now presents a unique spectacle in the matter of government. The official criminal statistics just issued show a large and continued decrease in every kind of crime. The Prison Commissioners, indeed, find it necessary to state that such a high proportion of the offenses are trivial, involving the lightest sentences, that it is impossible to organize any considerable system of prison labor.

Ireland, in fact, is still the most crimeless country in Europe, yet the constitutional right of trial by jury is now suspended throughout the whole country, except Ulster and including Dublin, and sentences of from one to six months' imprisonment are daily inflicted by tribunals specially appointed to punish the Nationalists, who tell the tenants they would no longer pay excessive rents. Several members of Parliament have been imprisoned for the same offense. Many others are in process of being convicted, and the newspaper editors who publish speeches to which exception is taken by the Government are also being sent to prison. There is, in fact, no crime in the country except what is manufactured by the magistrates, who virtually hold their offices on condition that they convict all the Nationalists brought before them. Recently two of these magistrated in County Clare, having had to acknowledge that there was no evidence whatever against a batch of Nationalists charged with intimidation, acquitted them; but, determined not to let them off, by resorting to a statute 700 years old, they held them to bail for their good behaviour, with the option of going to prison. The Nationalists refused to give bail and are now in jail. The Government has defended and justified that magisterial proceeding.

The agitation under these incentives is growing more resolute and widespread; but despite the tremenduous provocation, there is no agrarian crime. The landlords who forced Chief Secretary Wyndham against his own judgment to place this crimeless country under rigorous coercion for political objects are now appealing for the Nationalist leaders to join in a conference at arrive at a settlement of the land question. The spirit of the people is opposed to any conference until coercion is withdrawn, but the leaders, unwilling to sacrifice any opportunity of getting justice for the tenants, are disposed to try what a conference can do.

CHINESE LEPER CURED

Patient Quarantined in St. Louis May Be Discharged

St. Louis, Mo., Sept 28—Dong Gong the Chinese leper patient at the St. Louis Quarantine Hospital, is recommended for discharge as cured by Dr. M. C. Woodruff, superintendent of the hospital.

Dong Gong was sent to quarantine on Nov. 6, 1901, with a clearly defined case of leprosy. He was sequestered in a building built for his use. Dr. Woodruff took charge of the patient and began a method of treatment which a few months ago caused the patient to show such improvement that the physician said he believed the leper would be permanently cured.

In a communication to the Health Commissioner today, he recommends the discharge of Dong Gong. A commission of medical experts has been summoned to examine the patient and if its report sustains that of Dr. Woodruff Dong Gong will be released.

RUSSIA FORESTALS ENGLAND

Restores Newchwang Railway Before the Date Agreed Upon

Pekin, Sept. 28.—It is authoritively stated that one section of the Shanhaikwan-Newchwang Railway was secretly restored by the Russians to the Chinese on Sept. 28. Yung Lu, First Grand Secretary, understands that the entire line was handed over to the Chinese, but M. Lessar, the Russian Minister, says that one section yet remains to be restored and that it will be handed over shortly.

Viceroy Yuan Shih Kai, left Tientsin for Shanhaikwan today to complete the transfer, which is made contrary to the understanding with the British, who expected the simultaneous restoration of the Shanhaikwan-Newchwang and the Pekin-Shanhaikwan lines on Oct. 8.

The present action is similar to Russian's premature evacuation of Pekin in 1900 and her withdrawal from the provisional government of Tientsin, by which she gained much credit with the Chinese.

The British recently refused to restore the Pekin-Shanhaikwan line before Russia restored the Shanhaikwan-Newchwang line. Sir Ernest Satow, the British Minister, will go to Tientsin tomorrow to consult with Gen. Creagh, commanding the British contingent in China.

Royal Commission on Martial Law in South Africa Out of Work

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 27—A Pretoria despatch says the work of the Royal Commission on martial law is practically finished, as there are very few case a for inquiry in Natal, owing to the absence of disloyalty there on any large scale.

IMPROVING CONDITIONS OF PRISONS.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 27—A correspondent at Fez says the Sultan of Morocco is carrying out his promise to improve prisons and the conditions of prisoners. At Fez the prisons have been cleaned and drainage systems and perpetual supply of fresh running water introduced. Food is being supplied to prisoners by the Moroccan Government. Inquiries are being made regarding the incarcerated and a large number of persons have been released. Officials have been instructed to institute similar reforms everywhere else in the country. The regular list of prisoners and charge sheets are to be kept. Reforms are due in a considerable degree to the Howard Association.

REMOVED BAD IMPRESSIONS.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 27—Lord Milner's letter to the Political Association and utterances of responsible English papers have, says a Johannesburg correspondent, removed some bad impressions evoked by ill advised rumors of impending excessive taxation. The correspondent says, however, that in the present state of the public mind most things would be believed of the Home Government.

MAY PLUNDER AND MASSACRE.

Special to The Times.

Vienna, Sept. 17—"Informations," says a Constantinople correspondent says a state of seige continues in Mush and Sassun, Armenia. Sassun is surrounded by Turkish regulars. Kurds, it is declared, are only waiting the signal from Yildiz Kiosk to beggin plunder and massacre. In all Armenian villages in Mush Valley the Turkish troops are treating men and women in ruthless fashion. Armenians are unable to get from one village to another. Young men are vgilently watched or thrown into prison as suspects.

HUNGARIANS AT MINES THIRSTING FOR BLOOD

Presence of Troops in Coal Districts Awes Strikers and Decreases Acts of Violence

President Mitchell Declares Reports of Disorders Are Greatly Exaggerated—Shipments of Coal in Small Quantitise

Philadelphia, Sept 28—While there was considerable disorder and many acts of violence in portions of the hard coal regions today, the lawlessness was not so general as it was earlier in the week. The presence of additional troops and a drenching rainstorm assisted greatly in the preservation of peace.

The most serious outbreak occurred near Olyphant, almost under the noses of the soldiers of the 13th Regiment. A non-union miner named Winston was clubbed to death by a band of Hungarians, and his son-in-law was badly beaten. Near Wilkesbarre a coal and iron policeman was almost clubbed to death.

Reports from other parts of the region show that petty cases of violence continue to occur. The lower anthracite region is comparatively quiet, most of the lawlessness occurring in the vicinity of Scranton and Wilkes-Barre. Brig.-Gen. Gobin is keeping many of his soldiers on the move, either shifting their camps or sending out companies to scatter crowds. President Mitchell says the troops will help to keep the men firmer in their determination to stand out against the operators. The coal companies claim they are daily placing more men at work, and the shipment of coal continues in small quantities.

HUNGARIANS TASTE BLOOD.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 25—James Winston, aged 48 years, was killed, and his son-in-law, I. J. Lewis, was severely injured by a gang of Hungarian strikers who waylaid them on their way to work at Grassy Island colliery of the Delaware & Hudson Co, today. The affair took place half a mile from and almost within sight of the camp of the 13th Regiment at Olyphant. Lewis got away, but Winston had his skull crushed with a club and fell unconscious. While he lay prostrate and dying, the crowd jumped on him, kicked him in the face and beat him with clubs, after dancing about their victim, clapping their hands and singing the crowd left him. Winston was carried home by William Doyle, a non-union man, and Mrs. Doyle who witnessed the murder. Harry Simrock, Thomas Priston and Harry Shubeb, the three men who are alleged to have committed the actual crime, have fled.

WOMAN USES A SHOT GUN.

Mrs. George Marshall, colored, wife of the proprietor of a hotel at Jessup, armed with a shot gun, safely escorted a hunted non-union man through a crowd of 150 strikers, from the hotel to the Sterrick Creek colliery stockade, late last night. When the crowd began to avenge itself by bombarding the hotel, Mrs. Marshall fired on the nearest group and peppered a dozen men with bird shot. This scattered the mob.

A company from the 13th Regiment was called this morning to disperse a crowd which was tearing up tracks at the Pan-Coast colliery in Throop. This evening a crowd of strikers threw stones at non-union men who were being escorted to their homes from work in Forest City. The soldiers loaded their guns, and the commander said he would have given the word to fire if another stone was thrown.

OPERATORS ANARCHISTS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 28—Speaking before the National Convention of Employers and Employes, Prof. Zeublin, of Chicago, said: "The impudence of the blasphemous and inefficient representative of the anthracite trust who proclaims himself the chosen of God, would receive effective rebuke if it were not that the natural resources of America prevent a proper appreciation of the attitude of the Anarchists who have been granted by society the privilege of owning the anthracite coal beds."

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 17—Governor Stone was asked today if he would declare martial law in the coal region. He said:

"Without discussing the power of the government to declare martial law it will by wholly unnecessary to resort to that remedy. The fifty-first section oft he Act of Assembly, approved April 28, 1899, provides that 'when a tumult, riot, or mob shall exist the commander-in-chief shall call upon the National Guard, and he may at his discretion order any number of men enrolled in the militia to be drafted, and may detail or commission officers to organize the forces.'

"The National Guard have been sent into the coal regions to suppress tumults, riots, and mobs where the civil authorities are unable to suppress them. They will not interfere with the civil authorities, but are there to aid and assist them in preserving order. There is now a large surplus in the treasury, and the state is prepared to maintain a large army in the field for an indefinite time. I have no hesitation in expressing my disapproval of all acts of violence, and my determination to suppress them and preserve order regardless of consequences, and regardless of cost."

ARMED WHILE WORKING.

Lebanon, Pa., Sept. 27—There was some stray firing in the vicinity of the American Iron and Steel Company's plant tonight but no one was injured. Pickets are stationed about the plant. The colored puddlers are still at work, but some are so badly scared that they declare they will leave town if the soldiers are withdrawn. They live in temporary buildings inside a stockade on the company's property, and nearly all are armed with revolvers and shot guns.

Indianapolis, Ind. Sept. 27— President John Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers' of America, in a long distance telephone message to the News, today, from Wilkes-Barre, said:

"The press reports of lawlessness in the strike regions are greatly exaggerated. There has been no serious outbreak.

"There have been individual acts of lawlessness, but nothing that has approached concerted moves on the part of the strikers.

"There is no reign of terror and the miners are conducting themselves as peaceably as when the strike started.

"It is not for me to criticise the state authorities in sending troops to the strike region, but I do not see any more need for troops now than there was the day the strike began.

"The miners are standing firm and I can see no evidence of weakening on their part. Every day non-union miners are quitting the mines and joining forces with us."

COAL BEING MINED.

Reading, Pa., Sept. 27—From yesterday morning until this evening the Philadelphia & Reading Co.'s reports show that it has brought down 160 carloads or 4000 tons of coal. About half of this, it is claimed, was mined anthracite, and the remainder washery coal. All of it was sent to tide water points. The company is accumulating the coal now being produced in the Western Schuylkill region, and about 6,000 tons of washery and mined coal lie promised by the end of the week.

UNION LABEL

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 29, 1902.

THE CZAR SHOULD REMEMBER NAPOLEON

M. Pobiedonostzeff, who is popularly supposed to be the evil genius of the Russian court, will not redeem his international reputation by the intention ascribed to him in our despatches, of divorcing the Czarina so that the Czar may remarry in the hope of having a son.

There is no legal divorce under the to obtain one, the Czarina's rights as rules of the Russian church. In order a wife and mother must be assailed. Though of blood royal, she must be placed in the position of one unlawfully married, and neither wife nor widow.

There was once in Europe an Emperor who was also a great man, which the Czar is not. That Emperor divorced his wife that he might have a son. The son was indeed born, but he never reigned. Men call his story—the story of the "Aiglet"—the most pathetic in modern history.

It is almost a hundred years since Napoleon divorced Josephine, but Europe has not forgotten what happened afterward.

RIDICULOUS ATTITUDE

One of the most remarkable strikes on record is that of the constituents of the Board of Building Trades in New York. The trouble is between two rival organizations of painters. One union is the Brotherhood of Painters, the other the Amalgamated Association of Painters. Instead of getting along peaceably because of their mutual devotion to the principle of unionism, the two bodies of painters are in open conflict. The Amalgamated Association is connected with the Board of Building Trades; the Brotherhood is a separate organization. In order to accomplish the discharge of the Brotherhood men from a big job on the Union Club, the Amalgamated painters went on strike and the Board of Building Trades called out the other trades in sympathy. Work on the building is therefore hindered, the pay of many men who might otherwise be employed is stopped and the ever-present possibility of riot is increased. And all to what purpose? That a certain part of the work accomplished should be done over by the rival union!

Could anything be more ridiculous? In the absence of a common enemy, the rival unions must worry each other. Of course, it is possible that the men are not wholly in sympathy with the strike and that the proceedings are the will principally of the leaders. However, the innocent bystander catches the consequences, as usual in a quarrel, and in this particular instance he is not to blame even for being at hand. He was compelled by circumstances to stay around in the danger zone, and, knowing how the quarrel must affect him, the unions ought to have settled their differences in some other way.

Arbitration might have been utilized, but for the black-and-white decision it would have placed on record. As long as a fight is the method of settlement the closer can claim to have won something in the form of concessions or prestige, but in a dispute submitted to arbitration the findings could not with propriety be criticised by the loser, nor could false claims of victory be made to save one's honor. So the fight goes on and the bystander continues to take his punishment, that the participants in the struggle may vindicate their claims to the job which neither is doing now.

A case quite similar came up lately for settlement at the Hotel Savoy in New York. Certain strikers were about to return to work when it was discovered that marble which already had been set up had been polished by a firm employing some non-union men. Demand was made that the stone be roughened and then polished over by union. The hotel was wanted promptly so the childish demands of the strikers were granted at once. Where is the skillful polemic who can point out what obligation the management was under to have satisfactory work undone in order that other workmen might do it?

Alas for the innocent bystander!

MONEY AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir.—To those who are spending their lives in the work of Christian Science the implication contained in Mr. Rose's letter in The Times that they "have an easy way of making money" comes as a surprise. If any one imagines that Mrs. Eddy's life-long struggle to establish the pure teaching of Christian healing is "an easy way of making money" he should try to follow her footsteps and make the experiment for himself. Just so far as anyone is actuated by mercenary motives, or is unwilling to sacrifice all mere personal interests, just so far must he or she pervert and abandon the teaching and practise of Christian Science. That God takes care of those who devote themselves to His work, according to their best understanding of His will, is shown by the history of all Christian denominations, and does not expose the clergy anywhere to the charge of being mercenary.

The figures quoted in your editorial, upon which the implication of mercenary motives is doubtless made, are derived from hearsay and not from actual bookkeeping. Mrs. Eddy's personal income is totally distinct from that of the Christian Science Church. She receives no salary as pastor emeritus of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, nor as recognized leader of the Christian Science movement all over the world. Her sole and sufficient income is derived from the sale of books, and the list other constant gifts is generally known only to those who receive them, or whose business it is to know them.

Lest the public be deceived by unfounded deductions, the following facts should be known;

Mrs. Eddy lives on the outskirts of Concord, N.H., which, as those who are familiar with that city know, is one of the most unpretentious State capitals. Her house is a frame structure, similar to thousands of others scattered all over the land. She denies herself the pleasures of the world, so-called, unless a daily drive through the streets of Concord can be so designated. Her labors in behalf of the cause dear to her heart are virtually incessant. At various times during her life she has abandoned activities which were being handsomely paid, in order to take up apparently remunerative work at the call of duty. This was notably the case when she left her position as pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle in Boston in order to face the world in obedience to her highest concept of what was right. Again, when some years after, she closed her college at the very height of prosperity, in order to devote herself to the work of revising the Christian Science text book. To-day she is constantly refusing offers to write articles for our best periodicals, offers which are usually accompanied by the request that she name her own price for the articles. These are only a few of the considerations which serious men and women should weigh in estimating Mrs. Eddy's life motives. It is a grotesque and fantastical concept which would impute mercenary motives to her, as all are well aware who know her personally and who do not rely on gossip for their information.

As for the business affairs of the Christian science churches, they do not differ from those of churches in other denominations except that there are no fairs, bazaars or entertainments given for raising revenue. Voluntary donations erect the churches and pay their running expenses.

Moreover, every Christian Science church maintains a free reading room, where visitors can read the Bible and Christian Science literature free of charge. These reading rooms are often situated in buildings which command high rentals, and this accomodation for the public at large should not be overlooked.

Let me say that I am not one of those who think that "Christian Science has been buffeted, persecuted" by the Pennsylvania courts. From what I have read in the press it merely seems to have been misunderstood. Every one knows that it is not "a medical institution," for Christian Scientists do not use medicine themselves and do not administer it to others, but, on the other hand, send all those who desire medical treatment to the physicians who are trained to administer medicine by years of study.

Christian Scientists are glad to read this estimate of them as "liberal" and "willing to pay for the faith that is in them and the satisfaction it affords." There is really no price adequate to pay for the mental, moral and physical regeneration brought about by Christian Science, and no one pretends to pay for it; but, as the invalid pays the man who wheels his chair into the sun and air, so he who feels the warm ray and and the pure breath of God's benediction, desires to express his gratitude to the one who has put him in the way of receiving these benefits.

A Profitable Route

The steamer Argyle, whose advertisement appeared in The Times during the summer, carried between Cobourg and Toronto 26,000 passengers and nobody hurt, while $20 would pay for all breakages and losses. It has cleared between $8,000 and $10,000. Next season it is in consideration to put on a boat fast enough to leave Cobourg 9 a.m. five days of the week, calling at all the ports and reach Toronto at 12 noon and devote the sixth day wholly to Oshawa excursions. This only demonstrates that it always pays to advertise, especially in the columns of this great family journal.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers, Fortune's Spor., Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

judicing this Mr. Marmaduke Wantage and his rich backer against her.

Mr. Doulton committed himself to a virtual promise that, if she chose to ask, through him, for salary in advance, three or four weeks' money would in all probability be ready for her taking when the contract was signed next day.

That night there was much rejoicing in the little flat near Bryanston Square. The reaction from suffering to joy was almost too keen, and Winifred and her mother cried in each other's arms.

Next morning, Mr. Doulton's prophecy was proved true. She did not see Mr. Wantage, who was attending to important business in Brighton, it appeared, but the contract was ready for her signature, and a cheque for a hundred guineas. In this regard, the agent informed her, she was especially favored. No one else among the people engaged for the forthcoming production would have got an advance if they had asked for it, but her part, whether she liked it or not, was considered that of a "star." Besides, Mr. Doulton added confidentially, he had fancied she might be a "bit hard up" owing to the sudden severance of her connection with the Duke of Clarence's, and he had made a special point of the accommodation with Mr. Wantage.

So the agent got his commission, and Winifred had still a goodly amount left.

She knew that her mother would not have one peaceful moment until Dick was brought out of his present predicament, for he had threatened suicide, and he was just the sort of rash, impulsive boy to keep the threat in some dark moment of desperation. At least, Winifred believed that he might do this, and if so terrible a thing should happen her mother would die, and her own life be blighted for ever.

To save Dick from the situation his own foolishness had created would take what appeared to Winifred now a large sum, but there would still be a goodly amount left towards the expenses of the surgical operation which Sir Digby Field had declared absolutely necessary for the preservation of Mrs. Gray's life.

Without speaking to her mother of the intention in her mind, the girl went straight to the famous surgeon, and, being lucky enough to find him disengaged for the moment, frankly asked if he, and the authorities at the nursing home where the dear patient must lie for a few weeks, would wait for part of the payment. Unconsciously, her looks rather than her words betrayed the deep anxiety of her heart. Sir Digby Field was a kind old man, and was at once interested. He remembered Mrs. Gray's case very well, and recalled the verdict that he had given when he had seen her last. He had said then that she ought to be operated upon within two months, and already six weeks had gone by since that day. There was no time to be lost.

Sir Digby had seen Winifred act, and tactfully intimated to her that his fees were less to "professionals," or the immediate family of professionals. He would do his part for half the usual fee, and as the nursing home was under his direction he could promise that Mrs. Gray would be taken for something less than the ordinary charge. Altogether, Winifred was made to understand at last that she actually had enough in hand to prevent any further delay. What was lacking could easily be paid out of the next few weeks' salary, when she received it.

When all this had been carefully calculated, the girl flew home to her mother and broke the news that Sir Digby Field had named the day for the ordeal. The operation would be performed by him on the next Saturday, and Winifred was almost certain that, though she was compelled to go to Brighton at once, and was not supposed to travel to and fro, she would be allowed to come to town for so good and sufficient a reason.

Arrangements were made for Dick's release from bondage; and then Winifred placed the rest of the money, all but five pounds (upon which she resolved to live during the weeks of rehearsal) in their old bank to Mrs. Gray's credit. So it would be safe when it was needed, and presently she would tell her mother what had been done, assuring her that she had kept plenty for herself.

It was bitterly hard to say good-bye, with a thought in the hearts of both of the trial that was coming—the danger which Sir Digby Field made light of, yet could not wholly deny. Still, the tide of fortune seemed to have turned, and the little frail woman and the girl were hopeful, each one striving to appear far more cheerful than she really was. Mrs. Gray went to the station to see Winifred off, grieving that she should go third-class and without a maid, and making the girl promise that she would take comfortable lodgings and write immediately. Dick would be at home before Saturday, and Winifred must not fret.

By the same train went several of the actors and actresses engaged for Mr. Marmaduke Wantage's production, and Winifred recognized them from portraits which she had seen in Fitz-John Doulton's office. He had pointed the photographs out to her the day before, saying that the originals would be of her "party." It struck the girl that they were all somewhat common in their appearance—"cheap people," as they would have been slightingly called in their own profession, and she could not see one among the number whom she thought that she should care to know.

"I do hope there will be others who are nicer," she found herself wishing, then remembered how little difference it would make to her after all.

Whether they had motives for economy equal to her own, or whether their salaries for rehearsal were not to be on the same scale of generosity as hers, at all events, the five or six other members of the new company traveled third-class, and a gaudily-dressed young woman with very yellow hair came into Winifred's compartment.

She was a witness to the farewells between the girl and her mother; and when the train had left Victoria Station she spoke to Winifred, who happened to be the only other occupant of the compartment.

"I beg your pardon," said the lady of yellow hair, "but are you Miss Winifred Gray?"

Winifred smiled—a little sadly, for tears were on her lashes still from the parting with her best loved one—and admitted her claim to that name.

"I thought I must be right," went on the other. "I never saw you act, but I've seen your photograph—only you're

Situation Clearing

New York, Sept. 27.—Things marketwise are looking better. It looks now as if the storm were over. Shaw has again come to the aid of the money market by offering to anticipate interest up to June next upon Government Bonds. The heavily loaded upon comparatively slender margins have been compelled to liquidate, and owing to the indisposition of the Stock Exchange houses to make any purchases save for cash, or at the best upon colossal margins. Stocks have naturally drifted into the hands of powerful holders, people who are capable and will hang on to them until such time as they may be marketed at good profits. The steady and persistent liquidation throughout the weeks must have worked wonders in relieving the banks through reduction of loans. The Bank statement of today will probably show this point strongly. As to the future; the whole unfortunate business was brought about, not through fear or timidity, but through the poor method of Government finance, which permits enormous sums collected and held by the treasury without power to place it in the arteries of trade; and business, which through its very activities has use for lots of money, good times and prosperous times created a natural demand for cash to carry same on, we as it were, being the temporary victims of the very prosperity we are enjoying. Look at St. Paul after its enormous advance again up to practically its previous high prices. Many reliveries are large. It will be perfectly natural for the market to be more or less feverish and erratic for a while. The sea is always more or less turbulent after a storm; it will consequently probably be advisable to take profits for the time on bulges. After purchasing on the dips, margin your account well and do not over-trade. The low range of prices at present are certainly attractive, and should be taken advantage of. Those who have lost money in the flurry, if they will buy the standard stock, not purchasing more than they can, if necessary to put up 10 per cent. margin if they will hold will make back what they are out. There are many stocks which if bought at present 5 per cent. margin should hold safe.

Summary: First half-hour the market declined quite sharply under heavy realizing sales, to secure the profits created by yesterday's sharp advance, and was accelerated by the tendency to even up market contracts for the week. At the appearance of the bank statement showing $6,000 increase in reserves, the upturn of the market was remarkably sharp, and rapid shorts hastened to cover, the bidding was spirited; it was unusually active Saturday. We are still of the opinion that the low prices have been recorded. Money closed at 6 per cent. Sales 513,400.

HAIGHT & FREESE CO.

—"It is an ill wind that blows no good, is a saying that is often heard and the high price of coal this year may not be entirely an ill wind to the town, for we learn that several parties living in the suburbs of the town intend removing old fences that are in front of their properties and an eyesore to the appearance of the different places, which had it not been for the value attached to them as fuel this year might have remained for several years yet.

A Unique Fair

The Ontario and Durham fifteenth annual Exhibition took place last week at Whitby. This was an almost unique Fair, there being no side-shows or fakes and no racing. It was a model, purely educational Exhibition. One of the most interesting features was a piece of ground (the site of the old speeding ground), planted with different classes of roots, corn, grasses, etc., which were examined, judged and lectured upon as to their merits and demerits.

Winter Reading

In the October Canadian Magazine Mr. Chiquchoun maps out a possible course of winter reading for those who desire to know more of Canadian literature and history, introducing the subject with some well conceived suggestions. "The Canadian reader is in danger of forgetting two things: that in recent times a literature of undoubted merit has grown up in his own country, and that common sense suggests his knowing Canada through her own writers. This is said in no narrow spirit. It is quite as absurd to underrate as to overrate the community you live in. This is the home, by birth or adoption, of us all. The ideas, poetry, history and polity of Canada must possess for us a primary concern."

Laid at Rest

On Saturday morning the remains of the late Michael Riley were borne to the grave from the residence of Mr. Joseph Kelly, Bethune street, where they arrived from Meriden, Conn. on Friday evening last. The members of the C. O. F. in large numbers paid a last tribute of respect by their attendance, as did also representatives of the Knights of Columbus, of which the late Mr. Reilly was a member. The Peterborough Lock Co., of which he was for many years superintendent, was largely represented among those who attended the funeral. Beautiful floral tributes were also eloquent of the high regard in which the late Mr. Reilly was held. Solemn requiem high mass was celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral by Rev. John O'Brien. The bearers were Messrs. J. O'Brien, J. P. Bryson, and J. Clancy, representing the Court St. Peter's and Messrs T. Fortye, E. Ward, A. C. Corcoran representing the Peterborough Lock Co.

Hunters Preparing

Already signs are not wanting to indicate that the woods will be full of hunters in a few weeks. The Eagle Lake Club has elected officers, and put things in shape for the fall campaign. The Gold Lake hunters are also preparing for the runway, and have ordered an extra supply of buttermilk and provisions. The Katchecum Club, who have a fine layout on their "preserrve" at Ketchecum Lake, will go in detachments. The first will leave on Saturday next. This section will put in their time in fishing, and shooting partridges, wild duck, tame pigeons, old empty beer bottles. The balance will be spent in chewing gum. This party will be chaperoned by Mr. Harry LeBrun, and the second —the real hunters, who are out for blood, and who come armed with rifles, Indian war clubs and cold tea, will be under the supreme command of Capt. Harry Winch. It is then that the country will be perforated and the wild lands sewn with lead.

SUNDAY FUNERALS

Cannot Take Place in the Little Lake Cemetery Except by Permit

The Times is requested to state that no burials will be permitted in the Little Lake Cemetery hereafter, on Sunday, without a special permit from the superintendent. This regulation was passed at the request of a number of ministers in town, some months ago, but the frequency with which the request is made for Sunday burial would indicate that the public are not aware of the rule, which will be enforced in future.

THE REFERENDUM

Temperance Workers Gather at Smith's Falls to Organize For Campaign

Smith's Falls, Sept. 29.—The temperance convention for Eastern Ontario has resulted in organization being effected here on the part of the prohibitionists to bring out if possible a vote on the referendum on December 4th, sufficient to ensure the enactment of a prohibitory liquor law. Mr. J. R. Lavelle, M.P., presided at last night's meeting in the Methodist church. Mr. W. W. Buchanan was the principal speaker. He said he hoped every liberal temperance man in the province was for the referendum and would make up the necessary vote of 216,551. Enforcement of the law, he declared, would involve no violation of personal liberty, inasmuch as it would not prohibit drinking in one's own home. A resolution was passed pledging the temperance people of the district to do all in their power to further the prohibition cause.

INTO THEIR NEW QUARTERS

Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons Have Moved to Canoes

The hustling firm of J. J. Turner & Sons, the well known tent and awning makers, have removed from their old premises, and are now comfortably fixed in their new home. The building is of a commodious and substantial character, and was specially constructed for the business for which it was intended. It was not many years ago that a comparatively small space was all that was required for the business, but the energy of the firm, combined with sound business methods, soon made other and larger quarters a necessity.

The growth of Mr. Turner's trade is phenomenal. It is one of the industries that advertises Peterborough, for the goods of the firm are shipped to all parts of the world.

Mr. Turner invites his friends and the public to call and see him in his new home.

A PUT UP JOB

How a Young Man Bought a Box of Coal Instead of Candy

A young man, who is popular in one of the local dry goods stores, went up against it good and strong one evening last week. He laid out a couple of good hard dollars for two seats at the Opera House. He then jigged into a candy emporium at noon and purchased one of those boxes with a picture on the lid. This box was filled with choice confections, neatly wrapped in pink paper and entwined with a gilt cord.

He laid the box on his desk, telephoned to his best girl that he had secured the seats and went about all of that afternoon with a self-satisfied smile, whispering to himself, "I am the real thing."

That evening, after being comfortably seated in the theater, he handed the box to the young lady. With an exclamation of delight she untied the box and found —not candy, but several lumps of anthracite coal.

The young man tried to explain the situation, as several persons in nearby seats were all attention, and he is now endeavoring to find out who put up the job.

MR. LUDGATE'S SUCCESS

An Old Peterborough Boy Now a Leading Lumberman

Mr. Theodore Ludgate, an old Peterborough boy, who was for many years connected with Mr. McWilliams in the Crown Timber Office here, has met with phenomenal success since taking up his residence in British Columbia. He is now one of the most prominent lumbermen on the Pacific Coast, where lumbering is done on a very large scale. Some time since Mr. Ludgate arranged with the Dominion Government for the purchase of Deadman's Island, at Vancouver, but the ownership being disputed by both Province and City, an exciting time ensued, and Mr. Ludgate built his mill at Seattle. The Daily Province, of Vancouver, of recent date, announced the arrival of Mr. Ludgate, and says "it is stated on very good authority that he has come here for the purpose of forwarding arrangements for the building of a new lumber mill on Coal Harbor, practically on the same plans and fully as large as the mill which he proposed to erect on Deadman's Island. Mr. Ludgate was here some time ago and looked over the ground. Since then land has been secured, and the preliminary arrangements for the erection of a monster milling plant have been going ahead.

The new proposal is entirely exclusive of the Deadman's Island proposition. The question of ownership is still in the Courts or at least the appeal is still hanging fire, and Mr. Ludgate firmly believes that he will be established in the ownership of the property within the next year. It has been understood all along, and there is nothing in the new proposal to change this plan, that as soon as Mr. Ludgate obtains legal possession of the Island, if the matter is settled in his favor, he will carry out the original plan of erecting a mill there. When this is done, if the complete plans of the promoters are carried out, the Deadman's Island property will practically be joined into one of the largest on the entire coast.

Mrs. R. R. Hall and Mrs. D. Ullyott, of town, are sisters of Mr. Ludgate.

IT MUST COME.

As inevitable as the changing seasons of the year is the change which comes to every woman. And just as one anticipates the changes of other seasons it is wise to anticipate this change of season and prepare for it. In this way the discomforts and disasters suffered by many women at the period of change can be avoided or overcome.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a medicine for every season of woman's life, will entirely meet the needs of women at this period of change. It cures the physical ills and relieves the mental anxiety and depression usually associated with this critical period. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces refreshing sleep.

J. S. Carlisle, Esq., of Manchester, Coffee Co., Tenn., writes: "I have been using your medicines for the last sixteen or eighteen years in my Poor-house. I am superintendent of the Coffee County Poor-house and Asylum combined. Your 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' are the best medicines for the diseases for which they are recommended, that I ever used. They saved my wife's life at the time of 'change of life.' I have been recommending your medicine to many afflicted women and have also guaranteed that if it did not cure I would pay back the money spent for it. I have told our druggist that if the people came back and said Doctor Pierce's medicines did not give satisfaction, to give them back their money and charge it to me. I have not once been called upon to refund. I have never found anything to equal the 'Favorite Prescription' for diseases of women."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 50 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

QUEBEC CAN NEVER BELONG TO FRANCE

The Attitude of Sir Wilfred Laurier as Seen by the New York Sun

MUST STAY BRITISH OR BECOME AMERICAN

at French Canadians Would Prefer to Remain as They Are Than Ever Join France.

New York, Sept. 2.—The Sun says: It will be remembered that Sir Wilfrid Laurier after the collapse of the Conference of Colonial Premiers in London, proceeded to Paris, and there not only endeavored to stimulate the growth of French commerce with the Dominion by the offer of tariff concessions, but strove to promote an outflow of French emigration to Canada. It is, perhaps, not surprising, that the boulevard newspapers, which are not distinguished for accurate knowledge of anything beyond the boundaries of France, should have reared upon Sir Wilfrid's expressions of racial good will a fantastic structure of political possibilities.

To some British Imperialists, indeed Sir Wilfrid's genial demonstrations on the soil of his forefathers may have seemed excessive or ill-timed. It is certain that an outcry would go up from the ranks of British Conservatives and of Mr. Chamberlain's friends if a representative of the Afrikander Bond were now to visit Amsterdam to suggest a direct service of steamships from thence to Cape Town, to offer tariff concessions to Dutch manufactures and beg Holland to send colonists to Cape Colony. The fact that such proposals have been made to France by Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not unnaturally construed by superficial Paris observers to mean, first, that the French-Canadian element of the Dominion's population is too powerful to be coerced by Great Britain, and, secondly, that if an attempt at coercion were made, the French-Canadians would seek the support of France, as the Afrikanders, under certain circumstances, might seek the support of Holland, but for the notorious weakness of the Dutch naval power. It is also true, as was asserted by a correspondent of the Republique, signing himself a "French-Canadian," that if a Governor-General of Canada should attempt to do what was done the other day in Cape Colony, that is to say, suspended by autocratic fiat the colonial Constitution that would be for French-Canadians "a day of virile decisions."

What the Paris newspapers fail to understand is that the "virile decision" which, probably would be taken in the case supposed, would, in no event point to re-annexation to France, but would contemplate either complete political independence or annexation to the United States. Reannexation to France is something that the French Canadians, as they are perfectly aware could not obtain if they would; and, what is equal to the purpose, they would not if they could. They could not, because, while the Monroe Doctrine precludes us from interfering with Canada, so long as it remains a dependency of Great Britain, we should not permit it to fall under the control of another European Power, and especially not of one possessing a great standing army and, perhaps, unweaned from the aspirations which, for a time, found vent in Mexico. Nor would the French-Canadians be reannexed to France, if such a thing were possible, because, as fervent Catholics, they detest that interference of the State with the teaching functions of the Church, which has been recently exemplified in the French law regulating religious associations. If French Canadians, as Catholics, still look askance on the proposal of annexation to the United States it is largely because their ecclesiastical leaders are ignorant of the fact, that, so far as our Federal Constitution is concerned, any State in the Union is at liberty to make any given religion the established religion of that state, and confer upon that religious organization the power of holding land in mortmain. No student of American history should need to be told that particular types of religion were by law established in several of the United States at the time when, by accepting the Constitution framed at Philadelphia, they entered the present Union.

From the viewpoint of those Americans who would like to witness a voluntary levelling of the political barrier between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, an increased inflow of French emigrants into the Province of Quebec would be as welcome a spectacle as the outflow of American farmers into Manitoba and the Northwest provinces of the Dominion. The more additions are made to either of those elements of the Canadian population the sooner will be heard a spontaneous demand for the remarriage of countries which ought never to have been divorced. The political significance attached to the increase of either the French-Canadian or the American factor in the Canadian population is clearly recognized by imperialists. Their apprehensions found expression in the letter written to the London Times in September of last year by Mr. Ross, Prime Minister of the Province of Ontario, a letter urging that 'Britons should be encouraged to emigrate to Canada on the express ground that thus the attachment of Canadians to the Empire would be greatly and permanently strengthened. We apprehend that Mr. Ross does not approve of Sir Wilfrid's attempt to stimulate French emigration, and we should be not greatly surprised to hear him hint a doubt of the Canadian Premier's loyalty to Great Britain.

There is really no ground for the doubt, for Sir Wilfrid put the truth with admirable exactitude, and in epigrammatic form, when he said that the feeling entertained by the French-Canadians toward France, "honors France, which has inspired it, Canada, which has preserved it, and England, which has respected it."

FIGHTING FOR LIFE IN A NET

The Desperate Struggle of a Father and Son in Lake Michigan

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 29.—Tangled in a big fishing seine after the capsizing of their boat one mile from shore, Charles Beck, and his son, George Beck, two Evanston firemen, struggled for their lives for two hours yesterday morning in Lake Michigan. Not until the imperilled men had cut the net, which was 300 feet long, in two, were they able to extricate themselves. Then, thoroughly exhausted from their efforts to keep afloat, while they were escaping from the death trap, they battled again with the waves, and, by aiding one another, swam to the beach in safety.

The Becks, who live at 2140 Maple avenue, Evanston, had gone out early in the morning to take in the seine, which they had set off Grosse Point lighthouse. They were engaged in hauling in the netful of fish when a squall arose. Their boat, a flatbottomed scow, swung into the trough of the sea and filled with water. When they were bailing out the water with their hats the scow capsized, throwing both its occupants into the lake. Immediately the arms and legs of the men became entangled in the seine and rendered them powerless to swim. Divesting themselves of their rubber coats and boots, the father and son, with a fishing knife, began cutting the cords from their hands and ankles. When once they had cut themselves loose and started to swim toward shore they again became entangled in the big net. The son's struggle began to give out after a half hour's struggle, and the double burden of helping the boy to keep afloat and freeing himself and his son from the impeding meshes fell father.

The latter's endurance had nearly given out when he succeeded in separating the last strands of the seine. Both fishermen were so prostrated when they reached the shore that they had to be assisted to their home.

THE POPE AS HE IS WILL SOON PASS AWAY

Shows great Feebleness, but Still Drives in the Vatican Gardens

False Stories About His Holiness Corrected—No Longer Visits a Favorite Tower

London, Sept. 29.—Renewed reports are sent out from Rome of the Pope's feebleness. According to the New York Mail and Express, a letter just received from an American priest now in Rome who has had an interview with the Pope announces that his holiness is in a condition of extreme weakness. The writer had seen the Pope on many occasions in the past, but this time the degree of feebleness in the pontiff was unprecedented and extraordinary.

The Roman curia, the cardinals, prelates, minutanti and other prominent officials connected with the sacred human congregations are in entire or partial vacation from the beginning of the present month till the first days in November. The Pope himself take something of a vacation at this time. Audiences to foreign bishops and laymen, receptions of cardinal prefects of congregations for their weekly reports and receptions of bodies of pilgrims are all cut down to a minimum, and the Pope goes forth to breathe the fresh air and to renew his acquaintance with the flower beds and vine plants of the Vatican gardens.

As a matter of fact, the reporters for the newspapers of Rome and even some correspondents of the foreign press have had Leo XIII. promenading for months past in the gardens and even sleeping nights in the Leonine villa. Their descriptions are strangely reminiscent of former years and even the old story has again cropped up of the pontiff indulging in his favorite occupation of catching birds in snares and sending them as presents to various cardinals. Regarding this particular story it may be not uninteresting to state, on the authority of Cardinal Rampolla, that the Pope was chagrined at its constant reiteration, that there was no foundation of truth in it and that the only plausible explanation of its origin was possibly in the fact that on one occasion his holiness had discovered near the grotto some traps with birds in them, had sent for the head gardener, and, on being told had ordered that the birds be set free and never again molested.

The truth about the Pope's outings in the present year is that his holiness for the first time went out of doors on August 20th and spent about an hour driving and sitting in the gardens. On August 23rd he again went forth and remained several hours, during which time he examined the new grotto fashioned in imitation of that of Lourdes, and discussed with Father Candeo, the noted priest expert on viticulture, the various devices which he had caused to be introduced experimentally in the gardens to detroy the phylloxera malady and give the vines new life and vigor.

Since then at irregular intervals he has gone out for a short drive along the garden paths, but at no time this years has he visited the Leonine tower. Leo XIII. has a special predilection for this little palace as a vacation dwelling, but his physician, Dr. Lapponi, has for years been opposed to it on account of its humidity and on account of the difficulty of keeping it warmed up to the high temperature in which, night and day, summer and winter, Leo XIII. has been accustomed to live.

This year Dr. Lapponi has had his way and the Pope, at least so far, has been cut off from one of his favorite diversions. Some of the pontiff's finest Latin poetry was written in the Leonine villa, where after supper on summer evenings he would keep Monsignor Angeli, his secretary for the Latin letters, busy writing and rewriting, copying and altering hexameters and elegiacs and compositions in Horatian meter.

EARTHQUAKE IN TURKESTAN

Seven Hundred Killed and a Town Destroyed

Berlin, Sept. 29.—A dispatch from Tashkend, Asiatic Russia, says it is reported from Kashgar, Chinese Turkestan, that an earthquake on Aug. 22 killed a hundred persons there and three or four hundred in the village of Astyn.

It is added that the Chinese authorities have learned of the destruction of the town of Aksukuicle. The seismic disturbances continued until Sept. 3.

FASTEST WAR VESSEL

The British Armored Cruiser Drake Makes 24.10 Knots

London Sept. 29.—The British first-class armored cruiser Drake, 14,100 tons, returned to Portsmouth this evening after undergoing her engine trials, which proved that she is the fastest war vessel in the world outside the torpedo-boat destroyers.

She made 24.10 knots, which high speed was partly due to an improved type propeller. The contract provided that she should attain a speed of 23 knots.

HUGE BRIBES FOR STRIKING MINERS

President Nichols Charges That a Bribe Was Offered Local Presidents

GREAT LOSSES TO COAL ROADS

Reports of Earnings for the Last Three Months Show Very Serious Losses as a Result of the Strike.

Scranton, Pa., September 29.—"Efforts are being made to bribe mine workers' leaders to surrender their cause," declared President Nichols of District No. 1, in a statement to-day. Nichols says he has information the Michael Grimes, formerly a mine foreman, who now has headquarters in Scranton, is an agent for two or more companies and has tried to bribe some of the local officers to use their influence to break the strike. Nichols accuses Grimes of offering to give the local presidents $25,000 if they would get ten men each from their locals to draw up resolutions declaring that the locals would go to work.

"Two of the men were to get $500 each," declared Nichols, "and eight were to receive $100 each. This would be paid besides $25,000 to each of the presidents. Grimes also offered to furnish money for expenses and said that if they were exposed they would be taken care of. He also promised them any position under the company's employ they were able to fill. Grimes, for his work, is promised a lease of the coal lands from the Erie Company.

Nichols declares he can furnish testimony in court of the attempt to bribe.

New York, September 29.—Two of the hard coal roads have issued reports of their earning in recent months. They show enormous losses as the result of the strike. Since July 1 the Central of New Jersey has earned, so far as reported, $[illegible] net, or $[illegible] less than last year. The net earnings of the New York & Ontario Western showed a decrease of more than 50 per cent., being $[illegible] or $120,007 less than the preceding August.

VIEWS OF PEOPLE AT THE SCENE OF STRIKE--MINERS ARE IN THE WRONG

Is the Conclusion Arrived At by the Business Men Who Have Visited the Mines, and That the End is Near

New York, Sept. 29.—The Herald prints the following:

"If the strike's backbone should be broken it will not be officially declared off till all hope of winning has been long abandoned, and the operators will be harassed in every way possible. Not even Mr. John Markle, the most optimistic and aggressive of the operators not even excepting President Baer, of the Philadelphia and Reading Company will venture to predict when the end will come.

"Nobody can predict the day or week," said he "but it is surely coming; coming fast, too. We are steadily increasing our output and with adequate protection from intimidation we'll make faster progress from now on."

"Furthermore," he continued emphatically, "the price of coal will not be raised above the figures for the corresponding period a year ago. That's flat and positive."

Merchants Say Men are Wrong.

Merchants in Scranton and Wilkesbarre really dare not express their true state of mind. They have been the first sufferers from the strike. Many of them have establishments in both cities. They have had to keep on paying clerks who have had no customers to wait on. Their expenses have remained stationary and their receipts have steadily shrunk.

Here is the way one of them, a bank director and liberal giver to charities, talked when assured that his identity would not be disclosed:

"We merchants have no particular love for the operators. We know they will recoup themselves for their present losses in due time. But we do recognize the merits of the fight they are making against trades unions domination. We know, and the outside world ought to know, that they are fighting much more than appears on the immediate surface.

"In one year the Delaware, Lackawana, and Western had 169 strikes. Many of them began under the most absurd notions. The very pettiest excuse served to lead to a cessation of mining. A breaker boy would be reprimanded by a mine boss. He would give a toss of his head and retort, "Look out or I'll quit." If the breaker boys quit one after another class of workers in the mine would quit, and all work would stop because a boy shouted to his employer: "You're not my boss. John Mitchell is. I won't do what you say."

No Guarantee of Peace.

"If the operators make any concessions now there won't be any guarantee of permanent peace. Next month or next year more strikes will develop More important still, other trades will be so encouraged if the miners win a signal victory here that collateral strikes will be inaugurated.

"The strike of 1900, when the men won their only victory on record, was a just strike. So far as the Scranton and Wyoming district is concerned, they were fairly entitled to the ten per cent. increase they got and the reduction in the cost of the power they have to use. But now what do we find? Here is another strike.

"No, the operators as business men can afford to do anything but hold out for unconditional surrender. We know that as well as they do, and the strikers have received very little sympathy and almost no financial aid from the merchants."

Little Local Sympathy.

Another large dry goods merchant said: "It is not a fight for the men, but a fight to maintain the prestige of the leaders now. They realize, come what may, they are marked men. Even if every strike organizer goes back to work, the employers will find a way to get rid of him sooner or later.

"The non-union men want to go to work of course. Among a hundred and forty-seven thousand men there are, undoubtedly, some who are weak-kneed They want to go back, too. Others have endured enough privation already, and for their families sakes are anxious to go back.

"Here and there a few are working. They are making as much as $21 a day, working in five chambers, instead of two, as usual. The strikers know this, and it must make many of them restive. Therefore, I say, the fight is now dependent upon the pride and selfishness of the agitators at the head of the strikers.

"Governor Stone knows the facts of the situation. Labor Commissioner Carroll D. Wright's report showed that the miners were not serfs. Rabbi Hirsch came here and investigated. He, too, found that a very large proportion—larger than in other industries—have savings bank accounts. These men know the men are not in the right this time.

A Girl's Work.

"That girl over there (pointing to a young girl at the waist counter) is getting $7 a week. Her family is a large one. Her father and brother were miners. They lived well for laboring people. Now her father and brother want to go to work. She knows the brutal treatment they are almost sure to encounter. Rather than have them killed or beaten she is trying to support the whole family. That's a fair instance of the real strike situation. If the several local miners' unions it would show a majority in favor of going back to work I am positive. The more sensible are realizing that violence on the part of their unruly and foolish sympathizers is doing them great harm. Soon the demand that incendiarism, intimidation and atrocious assaults must be stopped, irrespective of the merits of the strikers' or the operators' contentions, will become so unmistakable that law and order will be enforced at all hazards and then the men, beaten and discouraged, will be worse off than before.

"Here, in a city of more than one hundred thousand, only $800 was collected for the strikers. Mind you, it required courage for our tradespeople to refuse to contribute to this cause and yet $800 is all that the local committees could corner the storekeepers into giving. If they can't get more substantial support from the people who ought to know how absurd the miners are, if anybody could know, what prospect can they have of ultimate victory?

One of the best known members of the Citizens' Alliance, of Scranton, a business men's organization, distinct from the Peoples' Alliance, who has worked hard to bring about an end to the strike, said some remarkable things when assured that his name would not be divulged.

"The public labors under many misapprehensions in regard to the true inwardness of this struggle. For example, much has been preached and printed about the miners having to mine nearly three thousand pounds to the ton. This includes dust, slate, culm and other waste. As a matter of fact, not more than 10 per cent. of the miners in this region are paid by the ton be it the commercial ton of 2,240 pounds or any other standard of weight. Ninety per cent. of the coal is paid for by the car, or by the yard. Men who are paid by the ton really make the most money.

"The average miner gets $5.75 a day. A very large proportion work less than eight hours a day of their own volition, though the companies may be unable to fill their orders and would be glad to pay them more for output. Out of this the miner has to pay his helper. The usual rate is $2.25 a day. Now when I say the average miner gets $3.50 a day for himself, I mean the man who actually mines the coal, not the slate boys who get only 80 cents a day, nor the door tenders, who got the same; nor the hoisters, nor pumpers, nor engineers; but the miners, the men who are supposed to be the complainants.

"It is true that the miner does not have work for the full three hundred days in the year; but mine machinery is constantly subject to shutdowns for repairs, and I do not deny that the output has sometimes been restricted by the big coal operators. In that connection, it should be noted that not a few employers did not mind a complete shutdown for a couple of months when this strike was begun. They welcomed it. They could afford to have their men idle. It cost them nothing, and enabled them to make repairs. The rule or ruin idea of having the mines flooded by calling out the pump men fail.

Operators Feel Baggled.

The president of the Dime Deposit Bank of Scranton, an institution whose large deposits are due to the confidence of the men who earn their money a dime at a time in the mines, is Mr. Charles Du Pont Breck. He is also the United States Commissioner for the Scranton Federal District. He said:

"From my observations, and what I hear, I think many even a considerable majority of the men want to go back to work, especially here in the northern parts of the anthracite region. Indeed, there was general reluctance toward going out when the miners of these collieries were canvassed, but they were swayed by the leaders.

"No one can foretell the outcome. I think the operators are disappointed at the small output they have managed to effect. I fancy the figures purporting to show the amount of coal got out each week are approximately correct, but the total is wofully inadequate. Even Scranton itself is not getting the coal it needs, and we should get a share of the coal mined at our doors at the very first, shouldn't we? It looks like a prolonged seige."

Cases of Destitution.

"No one, at least of us local business men can see the outcome of this struggle," remarked Mr. Garret Smith, secretary of the Board of Trade of Wilkesbarre. "My wife has a Sunday school class in a mission school here. When one of her scholars failed to appear she investigated and found that the children had no shoes. The family was composed of an English miner, his wife and four children. An addition to the family was imminent. She found that not only were they almost destitute of clothes, but they had nothing to eat in the house and had not had for several days. The father, and the mother, too, were proud and hated to admit the facts, but it was all palpable. The man wanted to go to work, but dared not.

Probably this is by no means an isolated instance of the suffering the mine workers are enduring. How much longer they can stand it none of us can tell."

They Make High Wages.

"This strike will peter out very soon From the stand-point of the men it was ill-timed. Never were there employers more determined; never had the men more flimsy ground for dissatisfaction. At no time during the struggle have the men had less prospect of conquering the operators."

So spoke John A. Mears, a wealthy retired capitalist of Scranton. He voted for Robert E. Pattison the last time that Democrat was elected Governor of the strongest Republican State in the Union. He was one of the men appointed by Governor Pattison to revise the mining laws of Pennsylvania. For more than thirty years he was a mine operator, then a mine owner, then a real estate man and capitalist, and generally reputed to be one of the best informed men in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Speaking in his crisp, decisive manner, he went on: "Miners are the best paid class of workingmen in America today. Many of them receive $200 a month after deducting their helpers' wages, cost of powder, and other incidentals. They are able to make this much and not work more than five hours a day. It is not extra skilled labor. In sixty days—yes, in thirty days—a man of ordinary ability can learn the business of mining, except perhaps, certain difficult forms of timbering that are not usually encountered.

"The operators have had no peace since the politicians brought about the ante-election compromise of 1900. Then the men got a ten per cent. concession now they demand more. They, themselves have refused to accept the idea of compulsory arbitration, realizing that in the long run they would be at a disadvantage. If any compromise is effected now the operators know it will be but a temporary truce, and more demands will be formulated in the near future. It is now a question of submitting to the dictates of union labor agitators or conducting your own affairs as you, not they, think best."

How Miners' Hopes Have Failed.

"They have seen one hope after another fade. First, President Mitchell did not have a unanimous body behind him. Even taking the figures given out by the miners, it was admitted that not more than sixty per cent. of the anthracite men wanted to strike. Secondly, the anthracite agitators could not induce the bituminous men to go out and thus repudiate their own solemnly made agreements. Thirdly, the Civic Federation was not able to bring the miners into a compromise with the strikers. Fourthly, Mr Morgan did not interfere on behalf of the men upon his return from Europe, as the miners were foolishly led to hope. Fifthly, the Republican Senators from Pennsylvania were unable to do anything, although they had the strongest political reasons for trying to win a victory for the miners. Sixthly, the idea of compulsory arbitration broached by Governor Stone, vanished when it was seen that neither side favored it. Lastly, the wiser, as well as the poorer miners, are one by one slipping away from the unionist leaders, and going back to work, and more coal is being mined each week.

"Now, the thrifty miners did not want to strike at any time. They want to go back to work today. If they were not afraid of being killed they would go back by the hundreds now. (Unfortunately neither the thrifty miner nor the more docile, unthinking Slavs, Hungarians, and Italians control the councils of the strikers. It is the least able workers the most facile talkers who manipulate the miner's affairs."

CHILD SLAVERY

Some of the newspapers in the United States have begun a vigorous crusade against child labor in the cotton factories of the Southern States. In their desire to manufacture at the lowest possible cost, some of the cotton mill owners in Massachusetts and other Northern States have succeeded in doing in the South, what enlightened methods in their own States would not for a moment permit. The result is a horrible condition of affairs that seems hardly credible in this enlightened age. Mr. Edgar Gardner Murphy, chairman of the committee on child labor in Alabama gives statistics showing that of 97,665 employees in the cotton mills of the South, 24,660, according to the census figures of 1900, were under sixteen years of age. From 1890 to 1900 the number of men employed in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama increased 268.9 per cent.; women, 144.2 per cent., and children under sixteen, 268.7 per cent. There are now approximately 50,000 of these children in the cotton mills of the South, more than double the number employed a year previously. An attempt has been made to pass legislation for the prohibition of child labor under twelve years of age, but the bill was defeated in each of the four States already mentioned. Shocking stories are told of the cruel slavery to which these unfortunate children are subjected, and it is to be hoped that public opinion in the States affected may be aroused sufficiently to wipe out what is undoubtedly a blot on the boasted civilization of the twentieth century.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The most promising symptom in connection with the coal strike is the increasing prevalence of violence and bloodshed. It indicated that the unfortunate strikers are being driven to desperation, and when the disorders become so widespread that they have to be put down by the government with a firm hand, the strike will practically be over.

"Bystander" in the Toronto Sun qualifies some recent remarks on coalitions, with however and nevertheless. But the grave and reverend commentator repeats that "he has recognized the fact that so long as the party system lasts, an occasional change of Government will be indispensable as the only means of keeping both parties in a state of efficiency and of admitting both halves of the community in turn to the service of the state."

A Japanese student has taken first honors in the law department of a university in Illinois. The figures just compiled show that out of sixteen members, he stood the highest, with markings of 98.36 and 99 in three branches. The Japs. excel as imitators of western customs, which does not go far in securing them national respect. But when they outshine the pick of Americans at a great university it is time to reconsider the Asiatic question.

A Frenchman named Lobel has invented a new way to ruin "perfidious Albion." He has been adventurous enough to make three "voyages" to Klondike, and he has conceived the project of a rail line all the way from Paris to New York, via Alaska and the Behring Straits. In her quality of insular power, until this day nearly exclusively mistress of the commercial and telegraphical ways of the entire world, England will mind to loose this "monopole" and this "prepotence." It is therefore to be foreseen that she will take umbrage of a creation of which the economical and strategical consequence may be considerable. It is just possible that the mental balance of this prospector does not swing normally.

Some of the new "sky scrapers" in New York city are being built from a foundation sixty feet below ground to a height of fifteen or twenty stories. This is the great phenomenon of the times in brick and stone and steel. Upon the twenty-two square miles which make up Manhattan Island, thirty-three buildings of fifteen stories or over are now in process of erection. Twenty-one of these are to be office buildings and twelve of them hotels. That will add two hundred acres to the floor space of the city, and when they are furnished there will be about one hundred and fifty sky-scrapers in New York. The average height of these new buildings is two hundred and twenty-seven feet.

Michigan peach growers are alarmed by the appearance in their orchards of the disease known as "little peach," or "the littles." The leaves thicken and curl, later turning yellow. The bark grows scabby and the whole tree appears sickly. The fruit is arrested in an early stage of its development. The peaches are very small, hard, without juice and are utterly worthless. It is not known that a case was ever successfully cured, although Prof. Wait at the National Department of Agriculture has made a minute study of it since 1896, when scattering cases were first noticed. Prof. Wait has spent the last two summers in the fruit belt observing "little peach," but has nothing to offer as a prevention or cure except extreme care in the cultivation of the orchard and spraying of the trees to keep them in a condition of general good health.

WIDOW'S HEAD SMASHED IN

Further Details of the Atrocious Murder of Mrs. Frank

Chippewa, Sept. 27.—Further investigation of the murder of Mrs. Franks, a widow, shows that the crime was a most atrocious one. The body was found in the woman's bedroom, with the top of the head cut and smashed in as though with a club or piece of iron pipe, and its position and the general appearance of the apartment goes to show that the deed was committed before dark. As the tea things were still on the table, it is believed that Mrs. Franks was eating her supper when the murderer forced his way through the back door. Upon entering, he pursued her through the bedroom, which was next, into the front room, and there killed her, by striking her over the head with the instrument. Right against the wall there is a pool of blood, where the victim fell when struck, and blood is profusely splashed over the wall. The woman was then evidently carried part of the way to the middle room, but perhaps finding the body too heavy to carry further, the murderer dropped it to the floor, and dragged it into the room where it was found. A struggle had evidently taken place, for Mrs. Frank's calico dress was almost entirely torn from her body, one sleeve of it being torn off.

Mrs. Franks had lived in the house for fifteen months, and on the other side of the hall, an elderly friend, Mrs. Thomas, had rooms. The latter was never at home during the day, and on the night of the murder she returned to the house about 10 o'clock accompanied by Mr. Thomas Macklem, at whose house she boarded. She noticed that there was no light in the house, but entered through a side door into her room, and with Mr. Macklem lighted a few matches and called for Mrs. Franks. There was no answer and Mrs. Thomas returned to spend the night at her friend's.

FINDING THE BODY.

The next morning Mrs. Thomas accompanied by Mrs. Macklem returned to the house, and finding her rooms had been ransacked, called in Herman Herber, and three persons entering Mrs. Franks' rooms found her dead body. Mrs. Franks' broken spectacles and comb were found on the floor in the front room near the pool of blood, and beside the body a silver-plated knife was discovered, which she evidently carried in her hand from the tea table.

No clue has yet been discovered which would in any way go to clear up the mystery as to the perpetrator of the deed. The weapon with which the blows were struck has not been discovered, and no suspicious characters have been noticed around the house although it is practically in the centre of the village. Chief W. H. Means, Niagara Falls, and Constable Cymburner are looking after the case at present.

The motive of the crime evidently was robbery, although as far as is known the amount of money taken was trifling, notwithstanding the fact that the whole lower story of the house was ransacked. A $5 gold piece was taken from Mrs. Thomas' room.

The unfortunate woman was 62 years of age. She was born in Scotland, and came to Canada when four years old. Her only child, a son, disappeared about fifteen years ago and has never since been heard of. Three brothers, John R., Albert and Thomas Fleming, reside at South Bend, Indiana, and have been notified of their sister's death.

NEGRO IS SUSPECTED.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 28— The post-mortem examination of the remains of Mrs. Franks, who was murdered at Chippewa, indicates that criminal assault was attempted before the woman was murdered. A negro employed on the power development work is said to be missing, and efforts are being made to locate him.

a bit thinner and a bit different, somehow. I'm Miss Julia Sinclair. Perhaps you've heard of me. I think we're going to be in the same company, from what Mr. Doulton told me. Only, of course, it isn't true that you're playing Mazeppa?"

"Yes, it is true," said Winifred.

Her traveling companion gave her a very queer look. "Dear me!" she exclaimed. "I thought Mr. Doulton must be joking. I shouldn't have supposed that was in your line at all."

"Why not?" Winifred asked, wondering at the look and tone.

"Oh, nothing particular," said Miss Sinclair. But her voice declared that it was very particular indeed; and the first faint thrill of apprehension that Winifred had felt for herself since her great good fortune thrilled through her veins. What was there so peculiar about this part, which first Mr. Doulton and now this bold-eyed girl had hinted at? Why should it be "out of her line?"

CHAPTER XIII.

A Question of Costume.

Winifred had left London in the morning, and at two the first reading rehearsal was appointed at the Brighton Theater. She found cheap lodgings—not in the same house with Miss Sinclair, for whose companionship she had no fancy—lunched on bread and milk, that her five guineas might last the longer, and arrived promptly at the theater.

The stage-manager and prompter were already at the little table on which lay all the parts for distribution. The former rose with more punctiliousness than most provincial managers show as Winifred drew near, and a tall, slightly dissipated-looking man, who had been talking with him and the prompter, advanced to meet her.

"Miss Gray, I think?" asked the tall man. "Ah, yes, I have had the pleasure of seeing you act in London. I am Mr. Wantage. Glad to meet you, and to have secured you for my production."

Thereupon he proceeded to introduce the stage-manager, whose name was Jeffreys, and Winifred was given her part. By this time the company was assembling, and the girl could not help noticing how differently she was treated from the rest. It was as if she had been a princess among peasants, and she was at a loss to understand the way in which she was distinguished, since the fact that she was engaged to play a leading part was hardly enough alone to account for it. Mr. Marmaduke Wantage, too, was a puzzle. Once he had been what is called a "fine man," but he looked as if he had been buffeted in the battle of life. His nose was red; there were bags under his eyes, and his flashy clothing was ostentatiously new. He gave the impression of a person who had been down in the world, having come so suddenly up again as to be almost disconcerted by his own good luck.

After an introduction or two had been effected Winifred opened her part with curiosity, and began to skim over the lines before the rehearsal. Then came a shock. She hurried from the wings where she had been sitting to the stage-manager, and as soon as he had finished giving certain directions to the prompter she attracted his attention.

"These read like a man's lines," she said.

"Mazeppa was a man, you know," he answered.

For an instant Winifred could not speak, but by an effort she controlled herself. "I didn't know," she returned. "No doubt it was stupid of me, but I never read the poem or heard anyone speak of it, except casually. I—I can't ——" She was about to say that she could not possibly play a male part, when she remembered how completely she was bound. "It isn't in my line at all." (Miss Julia Sinclair's very words, as she realized while speaking them.)

"Mr. Wantage thinks it in your line," replied the stage-manager. "You're 'specially engaged.' I should have thought a larger person would look it better; but I've no doubt you'll act charmingly." His eyes glanced over her face and figure. "And in your great scene you will be perfect."

"Oh, is there a 'great scene?'" she echoed.

"Yes. It was a big sensation once. No reason why it shouldn't be so again."

"And the costume?" Winifred faltered, her eyes large and anxious.

"Oh—the costume? You'll find that all right. Picturesque, you know—ancient period. Plenty of time to discuss that later. Now, we really must call the first one."

Winifred felt cold all over. She had never played a part in male attire save Rosalind, when she had dressed in long leggings, the drapery of a cloak constantly falling about the figure or forming a background. Even that costume had caused her embarrassment at first, although Rosalind, being really a girl, with all a sweet, wholesome-minded girl's modesty to shield her even in disguise, made it less distasteful to an actress than genuinely aping a man.

Yet there was nothing to be done except go through with it. Not only was the contract signed, but she had accepted full salary in advance for the weeks of rehearsal. It was partly her own fault. She ought to have thought less of the advantage she would reap and more about the part; then she would have asked more questions. But even so, Winifred did not see, if she had known the truth from the beginning, how she could have acted differently. It was for her mother's very life—perhaps her brother's life, too—and she must not think of herself and her own scruples. Many good, modest women dressed in male attire on the stage, and no one thought the less of them, nor did they lose their own self-respect—which was even more important.

So Winifred read her lines, and learnt her stage business, and nobody guessed what she was feeling. But as the rehearsal went on she wondered more and more at the choice of "Mazeppa" as an attraction to open at pantomime time in a town like Brighton at the beginning of the twentieth century. It was said to be a "new version," but it was clumsy and old-fashioned.

"What do you think of it?" asked the man destined to play the tyrant, who dooms Mazeppa to a ghastly fate. He spoke in a confidential undertone, such as one "pro." uses to another when the eccentricities of the management are to be discussed. They were not "on," but were waiting in the wings, and nobody

Current Week's Outlook

New York, Sept. 29.—After the strenuous week passed in Wall street, it is obvious that in considering the outlook for the week just opening, that one should speak conservatively and act in similar manner. We will state it to be a fact that many stock issues are cheap at present; to buy them will be to be able to dispose of them at better prices very shortly. In making this assertion it is also not only wise on the part of the writer, but justice to the reader as well, to accompany the opinion with the word of caution, though stocks be cheap they may be somewhat cheaper temporarily, owing to the peculiar situation which makes so many houses loath to make new commitments until easier money is more assured. After a great activity in the market, specially one that came as a surprise to speculators generally, usually for a time afterwards stocks are more feverish and erratic before the money market and the timidity of the broker and customers all favor better prices.

These factors will ultimately govern prices. Any other results are temporary, and for local reasons a short time will witness their entire disappearance as a market factor. The belated corn crop is now safe, climatic conditions from now on will cut no figure. Industrials are all as busy as they possibly can be, while railways will for the next eight months positively have more business than they can handle. We rather anticipate a more or less feverish market for the current week, with frequent ups and downs, but believe the general trend or tendency will be in the majority of instances in the upward direction. Careful trading is advisable, however; buy when depressed, even if money be at the moment run up in prices. Take profits as they appear. We very much doubt if the low prices of last week will be reached again; stocks will have to have quite a rise before plungers and light waisted holders let many of them; until then it should be safe to buy whenever the list is at all depressed. For those who trade for the long pull the thing to do in our opinion is to buy. Those who are daily traders should watch their opportunity, and to them we suggest the advice expressed in these letters.

Summery:—Lower prices from London, and several prominent stock articles published in the public press on Sunday and Monday mornings brought a general selling movement with Louis and Nash. the strong centre. Everything melted under the viciousness of the bearish attack and the standard securities were as weak if not weaker than medium priced issues. Value cut no figure, necessities ruled the day and caused an array of bargains all along the line. It's impossible to state how far the decline may go before the inevitable turn in the market takes place; the time for it to appear, however, should be near.

The Liberty Bell Gold Mining Company,

Owning the famous "Sand Point Claim," in the Agnes group, THUNDER MOUNTAIN, Idaho (over 20 acres of proven gold lands), near the famous Dewey mine, worth $ 6,000,000 or more. The same vein seems to run through the "Agnes claim." It lies in quartzite like the Homestake mine, of Deadwood, S.D., which has paid in Dividends from Jan., 1880, to July, 1902, $620,000 on $4 ore. A 40-stamp mill will crush enough of our ore in a day to yield a daily income of $[illegible],000.

For development purposes and for installing machinery, we offer a limited amount of stock at the low ground floor price of which you can buy on the instalment plan of 10 Per Cent Down, 10 Per Cent Per Month.

The company is capitalized at $1,000,000, shares of a par value of 25 cents, full paid and non-assessable. There is every share being placed in the treasury for development work. The company is organized under the laws of the State of Washington. When present plans are perfected over 40 per cent dividends are likely. A little money expended now may grow into a fortune. For a few days only, 1000 shares $20.00, 2000 shares $40.00, 5000 shares $100.00, etc. To secure shares at this price subscriptions should be forwarded immediately as the next allotment will be 5 cents a share—stock will advance rapidly to par.

The Oro Grande Mine

Wickenburg, Ariz, Arizona's Great Gold Mine

Over 300,000 tons of ore blocked out. Conservative mining men place value of ore in sight at $3,000,000.00. For the purpose of equipping the mine with a large plant, a block of stock is offered at par value, $10.00 per share. Stock is non-assessable.

Before offering a share of stock to the public, the incorporators of this Company spent over $150,000 in extensive development work, and now have in sight over 300,000 tons of high grade free milling ore, which represents a value of more than three times the capital stock of the Company, and will at a conservative estimate return a net profit to the shareholders of about $4,000,000.

Particular attention is drawn to the fact that moneys subscribed for stock are applied entirely to the work of developing and equipping the mine and that no commissions have to be paid to brokers, fiscal agents, etc.

Fullest investigation invited, both as to the company and the property, which has been termed "The Great Arizona Gold Mine," because of its exceptional richness and extent.

Subscriptions should be sent in at once, as only enough stock will be sold to pay for equippement. Address, Oro Grande Mines Co., 1004 Park Row Bldg., New York.

The Cereal Company Starts Work

Yesterday morning out of a couple hundred girls who appplied to be taken on at the Cereal Works, seventy obtained employment. This has created a small sized famine in female labor. Indeed their is a scarcity of laboring men as well just now in Peterborough, caused by the wonderful development of the town's industries. But in a short time there will be plenty of help, so the inconvenience will only be temporary.

We Don't Know

This great family journal is in receipt of a latter from a party who lives in Pittsburg, Pa., asking us if this climate is good for hay fever. Our local doctors says it is, and Mr. George Brown, of Chemong Park hotel says that the disease can't live in that health-giving resort But, personally this g.f.j don't know. We heard of a man who came here from Connecticut to be cured of hay fever, but as he fell out of the boat and was drowned while fishing, we are unable to say whether it was the climate or the water cured him.

Not a Reflection on Our Councillors

In every society and on every board there is always a chap who thinks he is not important unless he is doing all the talking and moving all the motions. There appears to be one of these wise old gentlemen on the board of trustees of a little church in Peel township. There had been trouble over the habit of church goers spitting on the floors. The matter came before the trustees, and one brother suggested that cuspidors be provided. The busy chap saw a chance for a motion, and rising, said: "I have much pleasure in moving that Brother Small and Brother Lang act as cuspidors for the ensuing year."

A Presentation

After the morning service on Sunday the officers and teachers of St. Luke's Sunday school, and the members of the choir, assembled in the Vestry to make a presentation to Miss Minnie Armstrong, who left today for Dansville, N.Y., where she intends preparing herself for the nursing profession. The Rector, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, read an address, which was accompanied by a beautiful gold crescent, set with pearls. In the afternoon the boy's of Miss Armstrong's class also made a presentation to their teacher. Norman Geale read the address and presented Miss Armstrong with an ebony manicure set.

The Children's Eyes

In Ottawa the public school board has decided to have the sight and hearing of pupils tested so as to place them most advantageously in the rooms. This is worthy of imitation. Children with weak sight or impaired hearing may be placed in such a position in the class room that they can only see the blackboard or hear with difficulty. Sometimes from these weaknesses, perhaps not recognized by parents or children themselves, the child is regarded as careless or dull. The Citizen says the method of testing the sight is simple and inexpensive, and a whole form can be tested and the pupils classified in less than half an hour at the beginning of a school term. Peterborough Board of Education made a beginning along this line some years ago, but no definite steps were taken. A large number of our school children wear glasses or complain of weak vision.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—It is a pity that in discussing a matter of such national importance as the Trent Valley Canal, any one should try to make political capital out of it.

At the Board of Trade meeting on Friday night Mr. Dumble is reported as saying "that had we a good live member for West Peterborough at Ottawa favorable to the Government such as we have in the local House, we could accomplish more than at present." The fault is not with our live member at Ottawa, but with the present Government itself, which has been opposed to the scheme since its inception. The canal would have been completed by their predecessors but for their opposition, and none of their followers were louder in their denunciations that Mr. Dumble himself, and this same member of the local House, the latter going so far as to call the canal a frog pond. One would have thought that when Mr. Dumble had got his political reward he would have observed the usual political ethics and forever held his peace

TOOK THE WRONG HORSE

A Mistake Which Cost a Citizen an Eighty Mile Drive

On Friday morning last a well known and esteemed citizen hired a chestnut horse at Leary's livery and drove out to Cochran's farm, about 20 miles on the other side of Buckhorn, on business for the Dickson Company. He returned on Saturday night, and the horse was placed in the stable and blanketed for the night.

On Sunday morning one of the stable men took the horse and tried to lead it down stairs, when it refused to move. It was then that the awful truth was known—that the horse was not Mr. Leary's. The gentleman who brought it was telephoned for and arrived in a few minutes. The cold perspiration broke out in beads all over him when he discovered that he had been given another animal than the one he took with him, there being little or no difference in the appearance of the animal.

There was no alternative but to start back with the horse, which he did on Sunday. He arrived home last night, and says that next time he goes away on a long drive, he will tie a ribbon around the horse's neck so that he will know it.

THE LATE MRS. GILLESPIE

Passed Away on Sunday at No. 32 Division Street

There passed away on Sunday at 32 Division Street, Elizabeth Gillespie, widow of the late John L. Gillespie, of Otonabee. The deceased had been ailing for some time, but a hemorrage was the immediate cause of her death.

The late Mrs. Gillespie was a native of Scotland, and came to this country when quite a young girl, and has lived in the vicinity of Peterborough ever since. She was a highly respected lady, a kind and loving mother and wife, and a faithful member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. Her husband predeceased her about twelve years. There remain to mourn her demise the following sons and daughters—Hugh of Ashburnham; John, of Oregon; Mrs. William Newton, of Keene; George, of Central Smith; Peter, of Hastings; and Adam, Margaret and Frank, of town.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, No. 32, Division street, at one o'clock today, and proceed to the Keene cemetery for interment

AN EVENTFUL CRUISE

What His Majesty's Ship Terrible has Done since 1898

London, Sept. 29.—H.M.S. Terrible arrived at Plymouth en route to Portsmouth, where she will be paid off. The commission thus ended is one of the most interesting in the history of British warships of the present day.

The Terrible is a first-class cruiser of 14,200 tons, with a speed of 22.4 knots, and a complement of 840 men. She was commissioned at Portsmouth on March 24, 1898, by Capt. C. G. Robinson, who was succeeded in the command by Capt. Percy Scott in September, 1899, at which time she left England for China by way of the Cape. On arrival at Cape Town, however, the cruiser was detained there in consequence of the Transvaal war, which had just then broken out.

It is familiar history now how she Terrible landed her guns on improvised mountings and got them up to Ladysmith in the very nick of time, and how the Terrible's naval brigade served with Gen. Buller and earned distinction in the arduous Natal campaign.

After these exploits the Terrible proceeded to her original destination, the China station, arriving at Hong Kong on May 8, 1900. But she did not go out to the far east for a peaceful time. Soon after her arrival at Hong Kong she was sent up to Taku, where she landed men and guns to take part in the expedition for the relief of Pekin. The Terrible's guns, by the way, mounted on the Ladysmith carriages, were at that time the only guns in the British or foreign fleets which were fit for service against the Chinese artillery, and they were sent both to Tien-Tsin and Pekin.

The fighting in North China having been successfully concluded, the Terrible at length rested from warlike duties and entered upon the more peaceful period of her commission, in which, however, she continued to win distinction. By the efforts of her officers and crew, the dredger, Canton River, which was sunk in the typhoon of November, 1900, was raised. While at Hong Kong she set up the world's record in shooting, which was unbroken until quite recently, when she was displaced from first position by H.M.S Ocean. She also established a record for coaling which is likely to stand for a long time to come. Capt Scott's invention, the Dotter, helped to make this shooting record for the Terrible.

A Japanese student has taken first honors in the law department of a university in Illinois. The figures just compiled show that out of sixteen members, he stood the highest, with markings of 98.98 and 99 in three branches. The Japs. excel as imitators of western customs, which does not go far in securing them national respect. But when they outshine the pick of American at a great university it is time to reconsider the Asiatic question.

The powder puff may help to hide the ravages of time but it avails little to hide the ravages of disease. When the face is disfigured by eruptions, the treatment must go below the surface to the blood, which is corrupt and impure.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures disfiguring eruptions which are caused by impure blood. It cures scrofulous sores, erysipelas, boils, pimples, eczema, salt-rheum and other eruptive diseases which impure blood breeds and feeds.

"I was troubled with eczema from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet," writes Mrs. Ella Quick, of Cass City, Tuscola Co., Mich. "Could not walk at times nor wear my shoes. Thought there was no help for me—at least the doctor said there was none. I went to see friends at Christmas time and there heard of the good that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery had done for them, and was advised to try it at once. For fear that I might neglect it my friend sent to the village and got a bottle and made me promise that I would take it. I had been getting worse all the time. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and ten vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and used 'All-Healing Salve,' which made a complete cure. It was slow, but sure. I was taking the medicine about eight months.

"I would say to all who read this; try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery before wasting time and money."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.

Johannesburg, Sept. 27 — The Women's Immigration Department established by the Government, has issued a scheme for encouraging the immigration of women to South Africa.

The department is working in conjunction with the London expansion committee. The Government is prepared to give assisted passages and to make arrangements for the comfort and well-being of the immigrants and on their arrival to assist in finding them suitable employment. A register of applications for employes will be kept. The department will send home from time to time for such class of women as there is a demand for. The selection of immigrants will be undertaken by the London committee, who will exercise the greatest care in choosing women of good character. Owing to lack of suitable accommodation for women in the Transvaal at present, the department will only assist domestic servants and women whose employers undertake to supply them with board and lodgings. Applications for British subjects only will be dealt with. The immigrants will be sent out under charge of a matron. Each immigrant will be brought to the Transvaal at a total cost to herself of $60, the Government paying the balance of the passage money, railway fare, and hotel accommodation at Cape Town or Johannesburg, where she will be cared for free of charge until a situation is found for her. The immigrant will, before leaving England, sign an agreement, making herself responsible to the department for $60, which sum will be deducted from her wages. Employers have to answer a number of questions regarding the occupation for which the immigrant is required, the wages she would get, and whether there is sleeping accommodation in the house. The employer also has to make deductions for the immigrant's fare, and to provide suitable board and lodging for six months. The department will only accept such applications for employes as are approved by them. A number of domestic servants have been cabled for They will be met at the port of arrival by a chaplain, and a Government agent will attend to their wants at that place. The scheme has been carefully thought out, and every security is being provided for immigrants.

London, England, September, 29 — A curious story has been persistently circulated for several weeks in Parliamentary circles in regard to Lord Salisbury's retirement as Prime Minister of Great Britain.

It is affirmed that the coronation honors prepared by Lord Salisbury included peerages for William Waldorf Astor and Sir Edward Lawson. King Edward peremptorily refused to approve these. Prime Minister Salisbury replied that they had been promised, and he must insist.

The King was not moved by this argument, whereupon Lord Salisbury retired a few days before the coronation and refused to attend the ceremony, giving as the reason his alleged ill-health for which at the time there was no foundation.

This story was discredited when it first obtained circulation, but authorities now quoted have gained for it some credence.

Sufferer Cured

Mr. Benjamin Dillon, of Leeds, Ont., was cured of Muscular Rheumatism by Polson's Nerviline, and says: "I feel my duty duty is to proclaim Polson's Nerviline as an infallible cure for Rheumatism; it cured me after 22 years suffering, and nothing I know of can equal its penetrating power. Nerviline simply has no equal in quickly relieving and curing Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica and Lumbago. A trial will convince anyone. Price 25c.

The Cereal Company Starts Work

Yesterday morning out of a couple hundred girls who applied to be taken on at the Cereal Works, seventy obtained employment. This has created a small sized famine in female labor. Indeed their is a scarcity of laboring men as well just now in Peterborough, caused by the wonderful development of the town's industries. But in a short time there will be plenty of help, so the inconvenience will only be temporary.

We Don't Know

This great family journal is in receipt of a letter from a party who lives in Pittsburg, Pa., asking us if this climate is good for hay fever. Our local doctors says it is, and Mr. George Brown, of Chemong Park hotel says that the disease can't live in that health-giving resort But, personally this g.f.j don't know. We heard of a man who came here from Connecticut to be cured of hay fever, but as he fell out of the boat and was drowned while fishing, we are unable to say whether it was the climate or the water cured him.

Not a Reflection on Our Councillors

In every society and on every board there is always a chap who thinks he is not important unless he is doing all the talking and moving all the motions. There appears to be one of these wise old gentlemen on the board of trustees of a little church in Peel township. There had been trouble over the habit of church goers spitting on the floors. The matter came before the trustees, and one brother suggested that cuspidors be provided. The busy chap saw a chance for a motion, and rising, said: "I have much pleasure in moving that Brother Small and Brother Lang act as cuspidors for the ensuing year."

A Presentation

After the morning service on Sunday the officers and teachers of St. Luke's Sunday school, and the members of the choir, assembled in the Vestry to make a presentation to Miss Minnie Armstrong, who left today for Davisville, N.Y., where she intends preparing herself for the nursing profession. The Rector, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, read an address, which was accompanied by a beautiful gold crescent, set with pearls. In the afternoon the boy's of Miss Armstrong's class also made a presentation to their teacher. Norman Geale read the address and presented Miss Armstrong with an ebony manicure set.

The Children's Eyes

In Ottawa the public school board has decided to have the sight and hearing of pupils tested so as to place them most advantageously in the rooms. This is worthy of imitation. Children with weak sight or impaired hearing may be placed in such a position in the class room that they can only see the blackboard or hear with difficulty. Sometimes from these weaknesses, perhaps not recognized by parents or children themselves, the child is regarded as careless or dull. The Citizen says the method of testing the sight is simple and inexpensive, and a whole form can be tested and the pupils classified in less than half an hour at the beginning of a school term. Peterborough Board of Education made a beginning along this line some years ago, but no definite steps were taken. A large number of our school children wear glasses or complain of weak vision.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—It is a pity that in discussing a matter of such national importance as the Trent Valley Canal, any one should try to make political capital out of it.

At the Board of Trade meeting on Friday night Mr. Dumble is reported as saying "that had we a good live member for West Peterborough at Ottawa favorable to the Government such as we have in the local House, we could accomplish more than at present." The fault is not with our live member at Ottawa, but with the present Government itself, which has been opposed to the scheme since its inception. The canal would have been completed by their predecessors but for their opposition, and none of their followers were louder in theira denunciations that Mr. Dumble himself, and this same member of the local House, the latter going so far as to call the canal a frog pond. One would have thought that when Mr. Dumble had got his political reward he would have observed the usual political ethics and forever held his peace.

Yours, etc.,
CIVIS.

PRESENTED A TROPHY

Hon. J. R. Stratton Gives a Trophy to be Shot for by the Peterborough Rifle Assoc

Hon. J. R. Stratton has presented the Peterborough Rifle Association with a valuable trophy which will be shot for on Tuesday, Oct. 7. The trophy will be contested for annually until won by the conditions attached by the association.

A meeting was held last night to decide upon what form of shooting will constitute the match.

It is hoped that there will be a large number of competitors for the trophy which was given with the intention of encouraging the sport in town.

TOOK THE WRONG HORSE

A Mistake Which Cost a Citizen an Eighty Mile Drive

On Friday morning last a well known and esteemed citizen hired a chestnut horse at Leary's livery and drove out to Cochran's farm, about 20 miles on the other side of Buckhorn, on business for the Dickson Company. He returned on Saturday night, and the horse was placed in the stable and blanketed for the night.

On Sunday morning one of the stable men took the horse and tried to lead it down stairs, when it refused to move. It was then that the awful truth was known—that the horse was not Mr. Leary's. The gentleman who brought it was telephoned for and arrived in a few minutes. The cold perspiration broke out in beads all over him when he discovered that he had been given another animal than the one he took with him, there being little or no difference in the appearance of the animal.

There was no alternative but to start back with the horse, which he did on Sunday. He arrived home last night, and says that next time he goes away on a long drive, he will tie a ribbon around the horse's neck so that he will know it.

THE LATE MRS. GILLESPIE

Passed Away on Sunday at No. 32 Division Street

There passed away on Sunday at 32 Division Street, Elizabeth Gillespie, widow of the late John L. Gillespie, of Otonabee. The deceased had been ailing for some time, but a hemorrage was the immediate cause of her death.

The late Mrs. Gillespie was a native of Scotland, and came to this country when quite a young girl, and has lived in the vicinity of Peterborough ever since. She was a highly respected lady, a kind and loving mother and wife, and a faithful member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. Her husband predeceased her about twelve years. There remain to mourn her demise the following sons and daughters—Hugh of Ashburnham; John, of Oregon; Mrs. William Newton, of Keene; George, of Central Smith; Peter, of Hastings; and Adam, Margaret and Frank, of Iowa.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, No. 32 Division street, at one o'clock today, and proceed to the Keene cemetery for interment.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature, either by phone or in writing.—[Ed. Times]

—Miss Delaney was in Toronto yesterday on business.

—Mrs. Thomas A. Wood, of Orillia, is the guest of Mrs. W. A. Staunton, Benson street.

—Miss Alice Fife leaves today to resume her studies at Victoria University, Toronto.

—Messrs. Ben Simpson and H. Finney left for Kingston yesterday to attend Queen's University.

—Miss Avery, of Cressman's millinery department, is in Toronto today picking up novelties for her department.

—Mrs. H. B. McHarry received a telegram from Keokuk, Indiana, where her mother is very ill. Mrs. McHarry left yesterday morning for that city

—Mr. W. H. Wrighton, accompanied by Miss Ethel Wrighton, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Ralph Ross, in Pembroke.

—Miss Julia Reynolds, of Dallas, Texas, who has been visiting Miss Margaret Cox, has returned to her home in the South.

—Mr. Wm. Robinson, who has been connected with the Dickson Co., for a number of years past, has severed his connection with that company, and will enter into the hotel business at Gooderham, where he has purchased a hotel.

—Mr. Frank Packenham, accountant in the office of the Canadian General Electric Company, will take his departure for Montreal on Thursday, where he will take a similar position with the company.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—The Charity Board met last night and passed some accounts.

—Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are, "My empty bin."

—If you meet a man with his chest pushed away out you may guess he has his coal in his cellar.

—Two ladies can be accommodated with board and have use of piano within two minutes walk of the post office. Apply at this office for address.

—All the latest in stationery at Times Bookstore. Call and ask to see our new lines in papetries, containing 255 sheets of paper and envelops to match, best quality on the market, which we are selling for 25 cents.

—The rear end of the office of this great family journal was damaged by fire to the extent of $2 a few days ago, but we have not raised advertising or supscription rates or balanced our hat on our ear on account of it. This g. f. j. is a metropolitan journal and such little things are almost every day events.

—A hotel in Toronto is said to have started the plan of allowing its patrons only one drink. The barman serves the customer, breaks the bad news to him, and then points hastily to rule two of the establishment, that no bad language may be used on the premises. The injured man staggers off, and persuades all his enemies to try the house. Thus is trade stimulated.

—Cobourg Post:—With the number of hogs raised in Northumberland County, Cobourg should promote the establishment of a pork factory. But there is no one to interest themselves in the promotion of this or any other industry, and the outlook will continue to look gloomy until an industrial committee is appointed, or a board of trade organized.

—There are tons of green tomatoes on the stalks that will never ripen, consequently the crop is small, and there are complaints of a scarcity beyond anything known in a number of years. This applies to no particular locality but to the Province generally. The cool summer was unfavorable for tomatoes.

AN EVENTFUL CRUISE

What His Majesty's Ship Terrible has Done since 1898

London, Sept. 29.—H.M.S. Terrible arrived at Plymouth en route to Portsmouth, where she will be paid off. The commission thus ended is one of the most interesting in the history of British warships of the present day.

The Terrible is a first-class cruiser of 14,200 tons, with a speed of 22.4 knots, and a complement of 840 men. She was commissioned at Portsmouth on March 24, 1898, by Capt. C. G. Robinson, who was succeeded in the command by Capt. Percy Scott in September, 1899, at which time she left England for China by way of the Cape. On arrival at Cape Town, however, the cruiser was detained there in consequence of the Transvaal war, which had just then broken out.

It is familiar history now how she Terrible landed her guns on improvised mountings and got them up to Ladysmith in the very nick of time, and how the Terrible's naval brigade served with Gen. Buller and earned distinction in the arduous Natal campaign.

After these exploits the Terrible proceeded to her original destination, the China station, arriving at Hong Kong on May 3, 1900. But she did not go out to the far east for a peaceful time. Soon after her arrival at Hong Kong she was sent up to Taku, where she landed men and guns to take part in the expedition for the relief of Pekin. The Terrible's guns, by the way, mounted on the Ladysmith carriages, were at that time the only guns in the British or foreign fleets which were fit for service against the Chinese artillery, and they were sent both to Tien-Tsin and Pekin.

The fighting in North China having been successfully concluded, the Terrible at length rested from warlike duties and entered upon the more peaceful period of her commission, in which, however, she continued to win distinction. By the efforts of her officers and crew, the dredger, Canton River, which was sunk in the typhoon of November, 1900, was raised. While at Hong Kong she set up the world's record in shooting, which was unbroken until quite recently, when she was displaced from first position by H.M.S Ocean. She also established a record for coaling which is likely to stand for a long time to come. Capt. Scott's invention, the Dotter, helped to make this shooting record for the Terrible.

A Japanese student has taken first honors in the law department of a university in Illinois. The figures just compiled show that out of sixteen members, he stood the highest, with markings of 98.6 and 98 in three branches. The Japs excel as imitators of western customs, which does not go far in securing them national respect. But when they establish the plot of American [illegible] it is time to reconsider the Asiatic question.

The powder puff may help to hide the ravages of time but it avails little to hide the ravages of disease. When the face is disfigured by eruptions, the treatment must go below the surface to the blood, which is corrupt and impure.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures disfiguring eruptions which are caused by impure blood. It cures scrofulous sores, erysipelas, boils, pimples, eczema, salt-rheum and other eruptive diseases which impure blood breeds and feeds.

"I was troubled with eczema from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet," writes Mrs. Ella Quick, of Cass City, Tuscola Co., Mich. "Could not walk at times nor wear my shoes. Thought there was no help for me—at least the doctor said there was none. I went to see friends at Christmas time and there heard of the good that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery had done for them, and was advised to try it at once. For fear that I might neglect it my friend sent to the village and got a bottle and made me promise that I would take it. I had been getting worse all the time. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and ten vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and used 'All-Healing Salve,' which made a complete cure. It was slow, but sure. I was taking the medicine about eight months.

"I would say to all who read this; try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery before wasting time and money."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.

IIEMS OF NEWS BY BY CABLE AND LETTER

Johannesburg, Sept. 27 — The Women's Immigration Department established by the Government, has issued a scheme for encouraging the immigration of women to South Africa.

The department is working in conjunction with the London expansion committee. The Government is prepared to give assisted passages and to make arrangements for the comfort and well-being of the immigrants and on their arrival to assist in finding them suitable employment. A register of applications for employes will be kept. The department will send home from time to time for such class of women as there is a demand for. The selection of immigrants will be undertaken by the London committee, who will exercise the greatest care in choosing women of good character. Owing to lack of suitable accommodation for women in the Transvaal at present, the department will only assist domestic servants and women whose employers undertake to supply them with board and lodgings. Applications for British subjects only will be dealt with. The immigrants will be sent out under charge of a matron. Each immigrant will be brought to the Transvaal at a total cost to herself of $60, the Government paying the balance of the passage money, railway fare, and hotel accommodation at Cape Town or Johannesburg, where she will be cared for free of charge until a situation is found for her. The immigrant will, before leaving England, sign an agreement, making herself responsible to the department for $60, which sum will be deducted from her wages. Employers have to answer a number of questions regarding the occupation for which the immigrant is required, the wages she would get, and whether there is sleeping accommodation in the house. The employer also has to make deductions for the immigrant's fare, and to provide suitable board and lodging for six months. The department will only accept such applications for employes as are approved by them. A number of domestic servants have been cabled for. They will be met at the port of arrival by a chaplain, and a Government agent will attend to their wants at that place. The scheme has been carefully thought out, and every security is being provided for immigrants.

London, England, September, 29 — A curious story has been persistently circulated for several weeks in Parliamentary circles in regard to Lord Salisbury's retirement as Prime Minister of Great Britain.

It is affirmed that the coronation honors prepared by Lord Salisbury included peerages for William Waldorf Astor and Sir Edward Lawson. King Edward peremptorily refused to approve these. Prime Minister Salisbury replied that they had been promised, and he must insist.

The King was not moved by this argument, whereupon Lord Salisbury retired a few days before the coronation and refused to attend the ceremony, giving as the reason his alleged ill-health for which at the time there was no foundation.

This story was discredited when it first obtained circulation, but authorities now quoted have gained for it some credence.

THE HORRORS OF THE GREAT COAL STRIKE

Scenes of Blood and Riot Seldom Seen that are Outside Actual Warfare

AN INTENSELY BITTER FEELING EXISTING

The Real Condition of Affairs Described the End of the Strike Not Yet in Sight

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 30. The appearance of United States troops at the various mining districts has only intensified the feeling of the strikers, who claim to be still in the ascendancy. Talk about the French Revolution! Why, we have had just that very thing here for the past five months and the end is not yet, while the State officers are making little or no effort to restore order and accord to those who choose, the protection they need to return to work. And there are tens of thousands of mine workers who have long since tired of the strike and are anxious to return. I am a miner myself, having been employed for thirty-three years by the Delaware, Lackawanna company, and as such am interested in every good move that will increase the wages of the mine worker and ameliorate his condition generally; yet I cannot bring myself to to the point of accepting the principles of the United Mine Workers of America as they now stand, practiced by Mitchell and his lieutenants. When ready to do that then I must cast asite all self-esteem, sense of honor and respect for law and order and abandon myself to the life of an avowed Anarchist and become a general desperado equipped with a billy, a revolver and three or four sticks of dynamite in my pocket ready to shoot down my brother man and blow up his little home, representing years of saving and toil, perchance sending its precious cargo of wife and children to their death. This is no wild, painted picture, but drawn true to life and what we may have seen and heard almost daily for five months past.

It is certainly beyond comprehension why so many leading papers can be so sordid and lost to all decency as to countenance this condition of things and to encourage its continuance by deliberately misrepresenting affairs. The advent of this man John Mitchell into the peaceful valleys of the anthracite coal regions is responsible for the commission of more crime that the combined careers of the notorious outlaws, Frank and Jesse James, Cole, Bob and Jim Younger, and any other ten bandits or outlaws known in the history of this country; while the teaching of his organization has done more to demoralize the social condition of the mine worker than any other agency could do.

No one not living here can have the least conception of the awful havoc that has been wrought. Families have been torn apart, fraternal organizations split, while even the Church of God has been invaded and dissension created to such a degree that men and women hitherto living in blessed peace have jumped to one another's throats, ready to commit murder—this in God's own house. In addition to this is the use of that most pernicious of weapons—the boycott. It is boycott in everything and everywhere—in the schools, in the churches, and in business. Let a man utter one word that can be constructed as derogatory to the cause of the strikers and he is a marked man. More than one business man has been brought to the verge of bankruptcy through the evil machinations of this devilish boycott.

Only last week a child of a non-union man died in this city; immediately thereafter a number of women holding membership in the same church as the father and mother of the child, called upon the pastor of the church and demanded that he should not officiate at the burial of the child or have anything to do with the grief-stricken family. Here is Christianity for you! Where will this thing stop? Last Sunday afternoon a most disgraceful scene was witnessed in one of the principal Sunday schools in our city, when several women refused to sit in the same class with a fine, respectable young woman against whom the breath of scandal never blew, because she was the daughter of a man who returned to work in order to earn money enough to pay off the interest of a mortgage hanging over his little property. On Monday the pupils of school 13 in the this city rebelled and walked out of the room of a female teacher because a relative of hers was a non-union employee. I could go on almost without ending citing just such cases, so numerous are they.

Miners who are members of this organization tell me, and I know them to be truthful law-abiding men, that 'the oath prescribed for admission to this order makes them nothing short of rank, downright Anarchists, ready and willing to shoot down men cold-bloodedly in their tracks who dare to exercise their right of liberty.

John Mitchell tells you that there is no want or suffering among the men and that they are able to hold out all winter, which is a dastardly lie, for I know personally of many families whose pantries are empty down to the last crumb, who suffer the pangs of hunger, whose never-ending prayer to God is that the strike may speedily pass away. I have heard scores of families right here in this city who have tasted nothing for weeks but bread and water. Talk about mortality among the children of the poor in the slums of New York during the hot summer months! It is not a circumstance to the mortality list of the children in the coal regions during the past summer, that of the city of Scranton almost doubling, and for the want of food and medicine. A well-known physician of this city informed me that the poverty of the city was simply appalling. Dozens of times, he says, he has been called to attend the wife or child of a miner whom he found had nothing in the house in the way of food or nourishment, let alone money with which to buy medicine. And all of this is the result of what John Mitchell is pleased to term a fight for principle waged in behalf of the down-trodden miner. More to the point would it be to call it a fight for the extermination of poor, helpless women and children. With so much suffering in the summer, what will it be when the snows of winter fall if this strike should be prolonged till then?

British Hurry Restoration of Railway to China as Czar's Agents are Doing

Pekin, Sept. 30.—Sir Ernest Satow, the British Minister, is at Tientsin, where he will remain for the purpose of hurrying the transfer of the Pekin-Shanhaikwan railway to the Chinese. This move was precipitated by the action of the Russians in turning over the Shanhaikwan-NewchTang Railway to the Chinese before the time agreed upon. Sir Ernest is awaiting instructions from London before completing the transfer. Yesterday he released the Shanhaikwan station and the return of the shops, engines and tracks to China will follow.

It is the intention of Sir Ernest Satow to complete the restoration of this line at the same time Russia completes the transfer of the Shanhaikwan-Newchand line, several sections of which are already in possession of the Chinese.

MT. PELEE IS QUIET

The Unchained Demon of Martinique Slumbers

Paris, Sept. 30.—M. Lemaire, governor of the island of Martinique, cabled today to the French Colonial office that the Mont Pelee volcano is now quiet and that the inhabitants are recovering from their panic.

It was decided to clear the northern portion of the island of all inhabitants and the residents of the villages thus abandoned are now crowded into Fort de France. They will be settled at points in the centre and south of the island in such a manner that the vanished communes will appear in their integrity and with the same inhabitants, who will have the same municipal rights as they enjoyed in their former homes.

The minister of the colonies, M. Doumergue, is also arranging for the transportation of those without homes to French Guina and the island of Guadeloupe.

A STAGE MANAGER MURDERS HIS WIFE

And Then Goes to Police Station and Asks to be Arrested

A Horrible Crime in New York, Caused by a Woman's Unfaithfulness

New York, Sept. 30—Harry Rose, a stage manager, shot and killed his wife today. He went to a police station, told of his crime, and was placed under arrest.

The police of the West Thirtieth Street Station say Rose walked into the station house and laid his revolver down on the desk. He said he had put four bullets into his wife's body. He claimed he had gone hime from his duties as stage manager at the Garrick Theater and found his wife with a man.

"Three days ago," he said, "I came home and found a man with my wife. It was the first time I had even suspected her in all our married life. This man is a rich man. She admitted to me that she loved him and ceased to love me. Now I am square."

They have a negro servant, and this woman made the following statement: "There was no one in the flat with Mrs. Rose last night. Mr. Rose stayed out all night. This morning Mrs. Rose had her breakfast in bed about 8 o'clock. Mr. Rose came in about 8.30. He had a few words with Mrs. Rose, and then went out, banging the door after him, as if in anger. When Mrs. Rose was dressed ready to go out, Mr. Rose came back. I was in the kitchen. After a few moments I heard Mrs. Rose, half shrieking say: "You wouldn't harm me, Harry, would you?" and Mr. Rose answered "No." Then there was quiet for 20 or 30 seconds, followed by four reports from a revolver. Mr. Rose left the flat, and I went in and found Mrs. Rose lying on the floor."

The man mentioned by Rose is known as a theater-goer, an inveterate "first nighter."

Although Rose had been told that his wife was dead, he asked the Coroner whether she was alive. Upon hearing the Coroner say she was dead, he threw up his hands and fell in a faint on the floor of the cell.

Coroner Scholer held Rose without bail at the station house, and the prisoner was not therefore arraigned in a police court.

In Chlorosis, Anaemia, Tiredness, Langour, Brain Fag, Indigestion, and Dyspepsia, its action is prompt, and satisfactory cures always follow. Yes, I recommended Ferrozone to my customers because I believe it is the best tonic and strengthening medicine that money can buy. Large boxes cost 50c.

"Gat" Howard's Murder is Still Unavenged

A Demand Is Made that His Cold-Blooded Killing by one Named Ferrara Should be Avenged

Montreal, Sept. 30.—"It's a burning shame that Canada does not take some action to secure the bringing to justice of the men who killed 'Gat' Howard in cold blood," said Sergeant George W. Dawson, of the Canadian scouts, to a reporter this morning. He has just reached Montreal From South Africa where he served in the Imperial Light Horse, the Protectorate Regiment, and the Canadian Scouts, receiving honorable discharges from all three.

"I was one of the party who went out to fetch in poor 'Gat's' body when the news of his murder came to camp," said Sergeant Dawson.

"The murder took place near Derby, a Kaffir mission station in Swazieland, not far from Vryheid. When I got to the spot with my men, I found the dead bodies of our poor beloved commander and of his gallant comrade, Sergeant Northway, himself a Canadian, both cold in death. Northway's Kaffir boy was there also, mortally wounded but still alive. He gave us a vivid description of the murder of Howard. It appears that after he fell wounded a young Boer—who we afterwards found to be named Ferrara, a relative of the commandant of that name—came up to him as he lay there on the ground and seeing his badge, exclaimed 'Oh, he's one of those blasted Canadians,' and with that advanced and shot Howard twice in the forehead, blowing out the back of his skull. It was one of the most cold blooded murders I ever heard of, yet Ferrara is allowed to go free. It was agreed between Lord Kitchener and the Boer leaders that all guilty of murder, either under the white flag or otherwise, would be handed over for punishment. But this man who was guilty of one of the most fiendish of all the murders which took place during the war is allowed to go free. He was under General Louie Botha, and that General must know his whereabouts.

"The Canadian Government should take this matter up. Until this dark deed of February 17 last, is compensated for by the bringing to trial of the murderer, every Canadian who served in South Africa will feel a sense of personal injury. Lord Kitchener described 'Gat' Howard as 'one of the bravest men I ever knew,' and I am sure he would aid in bringing his murderer to justice if the Canadian Government were to approach him."

SOFT COAL CARGOES FROM CAPE BRETON

Buffalo Dealers Refuse Orders, Boers Must Avoid Political Agitation

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 30—Referring to the desire of the Boer Generals to obtain audience with Emperor William, a Berlin correspondent quotes a statement from the Cologne Gazette, to the effect that the audience would only be granted on condition that the Boers abstain from every kind of political agitation in Germany. The correspondent says the margin between correct demeanor and political agitation is very narrow, especially in Germany, in view of the most unmeasured denunciations of Great Britain by Germans. It would not require much of what The Cologne Gazette calls "Boers' rustic cunning" to work the popular mind up to a state of excitement, and inspire it both in Germany and South Africa with vain dreams and ambitions.

IMPROVING THE GRECIAN MILITIA.

Special to The Times.

London, Sept. 30 —In view of the approaching dissolution of the Greek Chamber of Deputies, says an Athens correspondent, ex—Premier Delyannis publishes his political programme. He promises to introduce measures to increase the wealth of the country, especially agricultural production, without involving fresh taxation. Public burdens are to be lightened and the existing system of taxation to be reformed. The army is to be reorganized and supplied with modern rifles to the number of 200,000. "In order to popularize the army," says Delyannis, "the term of service must be made shorter and recruits must receive preliminary instruction before their enlistment. The present general staff, under the direction of the Crown Prince, should be abolished, and military police should be replaced by local constabulary, in order that the army may be free to attend its proper duties." Delyannis says economics in the civil administration must furnish funds for the projected military expenditure.

PAN-GERMAN AGITATORS IN HUNGARY.

London, Sept. 30—Hungarian journals, says a Vienna correspondent, protest vigorously against the attempts of leading German papers to defend Pan-Germanic agitations in Hungary. Up to a short time ago these papers repudiated sympathy with agitators, but when the law was enforced against Hungarian subjects of German nationality who endeavored to excite race conflict in Hungary, a chorus of reprobation and menace was raised in the German press. The Vossiche Zeitung and Neuste Nachrichten attempted to hold the Hungarian Government responsible for 'illegal proceedings of the courts. The Neuste Nachrichten said it was the Germans who introduced and maintained civilization in Hungary, which fact ought to be a most valuable reminder of the desirability of preserving good relations with Germany. The Pester Lloyd protests against such "rude and magnified attacks, which, it says, are opposed to the most elementary dictates of international politeness. It asks what would be the use of the triple alliance if Hungary were torn asunder by internal strife.

Montreal, Sept. 30—There is just a possibility that some solution may be found for the coal problem by the use of the bonding system and the carriage of coal from Cape Breton to Portland, and thence by Grand Trunk to Montreal, Toronto and Western points. Abner Kingman, of Kingman, Brown & Company, selling agents of the Dominion Coal Company, has left for Portland to endeavor to make arrangements which will enable the needs of the West to be supplied in this way all winter long. Last year there were a number of coal steamers plying between Sydney and Portland, but their cargoes were chiefly for Montreal use. The idea is to develop this service largely and send this soft coal as far west as possible. Ald. Laporte, chairman of the Civic Finance Committee, has approached the Canadian Pacific with a proposition that freight rates upon hardwood shall be reduced this winter to allow large quantities to be brought to the city from the Laurentian Mountains, and in this way supply fuel for the poor of the city.

BUFFALO FIRMS REFUSE TO RECEIVE MORE ORDERS.

Soft coal, domestic, $7 to $8.
Soft coal, steam, $5 to $6.
Soft coal, slack, $3.75 to $4.75
Hard coal, none for sale.
Hardwood, $9 to $10.
Soft wood $5 to $6.

The scarcity of fuel in Toronto has broken into uniformity of price, but the above quotations mark the range of quotations today for coal and wood. considered as a permanent one. They received word this morning not to send any more orders for soft coal for the present. This request must not be considered as a permanent one, the step is taken merely to give Buffalo men a chance to catch up to the business. It will also give Toronto men a similar opportunity.

Toronto requires about 300,000 tons of hard coal per year, but of this amount only 30,000 tons have been obtained. The soft coal demand is quite 325,000 tons under normal conditions. This will naturally increase this season owing to the scarcity of anthracite At present the supply is not equal to the demand, but with a lull in orders, dealers think they could replenish the stock sufficiently to meet orders.

Some citizens have clubbed together to get a carload of coal from some outside town. Very little is coming in this way, however, according to the railway authorities. Five citizens who have made a purchase of this kind report that laid down here such coal will cost $11.

CITIZENS MAY GET WOOD AT FOUR DOLLARS A CORD.

The poor of Toronto—and we are all experiencing a poverty of fuel—may be getting good burning soft wood and some hard wood for $4 a cord, or less, during the winter, as a result of Ald. Foster's generosity. His offer to allow the city to remove 6,000 cords from some property forty miles away would permit the wood to be sold at that price, and as the market prices are much higher at present, his offer is worth anywhere from $25,000 to $50,000. Some critics assert that the wood would not be worth much until it has been cut a year.

Ald. Foster consulted Ald. Alex. Stewart, who is a practical lumber man, in regard to the matter, and got an estimate of the cost of delivering the wood to the consumer in the city ready for use. He placed it at $3.25. This was made up of $1 for cutting, 50 cents for drawing, $1 for freight, 25 cents for unloading 50 cents for delivery. Ald. Stewart says there will be no difficulty in getting the railways to carry the wood, and he will urge Council to accept the offer, and have a committee of citizens appointed to take charge of the whole matter. There would be no attempt to make money or anything but the actual cost of handling the wood, and the committee would see that it was fairly distributed.

The bush from which the wood may be had is near Zephyr. It is largely made up of tamarac, which is a splendid soft wood, and there is also some birch and other hard wood. —Toronto News.

PETERSON MISSED CHANCE TO MAKE HANDSOME PROFIT.

Mr. Peterson, who is connected with the company that brought out from England the three turrett vessels for carrying grain on the Great Lakes, is feeling cheap because they did not carry over a supply of Welsh coal. He could have secured nearly ten thousand tons and delivered it at a handsome profit.

BLACK DIAMOND STICKPINS.

Chicago, Sept. 30— "Genuine black diamond stickpins" have been placed on sale in Chicago at 15 cents each. The "black diamonds" are lumps of anthracite coal fastened to gold washed pins, and they find a ready sale on the streets and in some of the stores.

TO PREVENT SUFFERING.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 30—Mayor Collins has called a conference of representative men of Boston, to be held Wednesday noon in the Common Council chamber to consider ways and means for relieving the present coal situation in vew of the threatened suffering of the poor of the city.

12,000 TONS OF COAL.

Reading, Sept. 30.—The reports of the Philadelphia & Reading Company here show that during the past week about 12,000 tons of hard coal were turned out of the washeries and collieries of the company and transported to different points. This would be equivalent to about 400 cars. None of it has been delivered to this end of the Schuylkill valley. The officials say that the coal was all sent to Philadelphia and points beyond there.

COAL IS SCARCE.

Montreal, Sept. 29— Of the 300,000 tons of hard coal per year used in Montreal, there have been consumed already 75,000 tons, so that the situation is now taking a serious aspect. Welch coal to the extent of 20,000 tons has been ordered, and in some cases is being delivered, but that is all, and added to a general shortage there is also a lack of soft coal and of wood.

Farmers have been so busy that they have had time only to cut wood for themselves. Coke has been suggested and the Gas Company has been obliged to raise the price of that commodity to $6.50 and the output is only 30,000 tons.

ST. VINCENT'S DAYS OF UNSPEAKABLE TERROR

Details of the Second Big Volcano Eruption There This Year

THIS ONE GREATER THAN THE FIRST

The People Had Timely Warning—Strong Winds Saved the Island Capital

Castries, St. Lucia, Sept. 30. The full details are arriving of the second big eruption this year of La Soufriere, the volcano on St. Vincent island. Preliminary earth quake shocks were felt on Aug. 30, but it was not until ten days later that they grew serious. A correspondent sends this report of the progress of events;

Aug. 30.—At 9.30 p.m., loud detonations in the Soufriere Mountain, seventeen in all. Very severe earthquake at Chateau Belair. Two long earth tremors followed. At this time four distinct halos were seen above Chateau Belair harbor, visible from Kingston. The theory is that the loud detonations suddenly projected through the throat of the crater produced the same effect in the acqueous atmosphere as is produced when a pebble is thrown into a lake, causing circles to appear. In an acqueous atmosphere such phenomena are often produced. The luminosity of the rings or halos was like that of the Milky Way.

Aug. 31, 8.15 a.m.—Three loud detonations heard. 7.45 p.m.—Two others.

Sept. 1, 6 p.m.—Crater emitting considerable smoke.

Sept. 2, 6 p.m.—Still smoking. 6 p.m.—Smoking much more.

Sept. 3, 6 a.m.—More and darker smoke. 10.15 a.m.—Slight eruption. 1 p.m.—Further eruption. Government ordered the officials of Chateau Belair and Georgetown to remove all people immediately from those districts. General stampede all through the afternoon and night. Crater smoking more and more. At 6 p.m. apparently quiet. At 9.30 p.m.—Loud detonations and earth tremors.

Sept. 4.—At 1 a.m. detonations louder and continuous. Mountain in full eruption. At 2.30 a.m., grand spectacle. The entire heavens covered with smoke. Noise from the crater terrific, accompanied by continuous electric flashes, both forked and sheet. Edges of every cloud lined as if with a rim of gold. It was beautiful, but awful to behold. At 3 a.m. it grew dark and people were trembling with awe. Sharp earthquake at about 4 a.m. Whole population awake awaiting in terror the dawn. Coarse sand and large stones fell at Cumberland, Corell's Hill, Troumaca Hill and Bay over six inches deep, destroying arrowroot crops and all vegetation. The material is very coarse, not dust. Morning broke very threatening, but it became clearer about noon.

This eruption of the Soufriere was quite as severe as the eruption of May 7 and 8. The detonations, the roaring, and the height of the volcanic cloud were all greater as to force and to length of time than the first eruption. No lives were lost because the people had timely warning and had all escaped before the volcano got into full action. They all left Georgetown and its vicinity and Chateau Belair before sundown Wednesday, and so escaped, but the material ejected was heavier, the lightning was more vivid and constant, and the whole lasted 2 1-2 hours longer than the first one. At Chateau Belair the matter ejected fell from 8 inches to 16 inches deep.

The whole of the Fitz Hughes estate, property of Mr. McDonald, and the estates of Petit Bordell and Sharpes, owned by James Richards, have been ruined and covered with sand and ashes. Some of the buildings were broken down by the weight of material. Several houses in Chateau Belair had their roofs broken in. That town is now forsaken. No more than a dozen people can be seen there in the day time, and overnight, including the policemen, leave it. The cloud of volcanic material rose to twice the height of the first eruption and was carried fortunately away to the southwest and west by the strong wind. This saved the island, even Kingstown.

Wallibou, Richmond estates, etc., have been more deeply buried by this eruption. The whole of the Wallibou valley is hidden by ascending steam and vapor. The crater has greatly altered. Its southern edge has been largely blown away and it is much lower. It is still alive, emitting steam and occasional black smoke.

Another correspondent says;

On Sept. 3 the people all over the island were alarmed. The whole heavens were ablaze with lightning, forked, chiefly. No pyrotechnics of the grandest scale imaginable could convey an idea of the awfulness and weirdness of the scene. Had the cloud fallen on Kingstown all its people would have been wiped out. Imagine the forks and lines lightning ascending and descending, every cloud fringed with a golden electric edge, thousands and tens of thousands of them—the bellowing and continuous roaring of the volcano, which seemed to struggle for relief. The noise was if all the surfs of the bays and oceans of the world were united in one great thunderous roar as they fell on the trembling shore. All Kingston was in a state of terror—that's the word, for we could not tell, with that awful cloud above us, how long it would end, and when we should be stricken down with the electric flame. Not only were the lower classes terrified, howling and praying for mercy all Wednesday night, but most of our leading men and their families were panic stricken. One man and his wife—near neighbors of mine—ran out in their night dresses down to the police barracks for safety and waited there till morning, when they sent for their clothes to return home. I tell you, it is enough to shake the stoutest nerves.

St. Lucia has had a singularly calm hurricane season so far, quite unlike most of its predecessors. Here is a query for the scientists: Is there any and what connection between the forces below and the winds above? Certainly, the present season is altogether unlike what we expect. Except when the craters are in eruption, when it appears to be hotter than usual, the season is more like April.

WEATHER NOTES

Wednesday—Strong north and north westerly winds; showery and a gradual change to cooler weather.

The weather is cloudy throughout Ontario and Quebec, and rain, which has already begun to fall near Lake Erie is likely to gradually extend eastward. It continues fine in the North-west Territories and Manitoba, but frost occurs each night. It is quite possible that cautionary signals may be displayed before night at all stations on the great lakes.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Japan tea has risen in price from 2[illegible] to 3[illegible] per cent., due to the short crop this year. The importation of Japan teas into Canada for this season shows a decrease of 1,300,352 pounds against last year's business. The following figures show the number of pounds imported into Canada for the present and past seasons;—1902-03, 1,806,476; 1901-02, 2,360,-320; 1900-01, 2,492,540; 1899, 3,914,024, 1898-99, 2,336,583. Three-quarters of the tea consumed in the Dominion comes from the land of the Rising Sun. Of the Provinces, Quebec leads, and in the French-Canadian communities Japan tea is used to the almost total exclusion of any other kind.

The English zealot, Mr. Pigott, who is under delusion about his Messiahship, and does not hesitate to proclaim his authority for his mission in Old London, is being persecuted by howling mobs, as if he were merely reciting a part in "John Storm" in one of Hall Caine's vivid stage productions. They ran after him by thousands with the pious thought of tearing him to pieces. The "little village" by the Thames demonstrates by this as well as it did on Mafeking and Peace nights that it can produce a brutal and savage populace to order at short notice. Only recently a magazine writer spoke of the shudder that passed through his anatomy at the bare recollection of the hideous laugh that rent the air on Mafeking Night.

It is noted that the strike and lockouts in England last year accounted for less damage than usual. Still some 4,000,000 working days were lost, and taking the economic value of the labor at 2s. this would mean a loss of [illegible]. The number of fresh disputes was 642, almost as many as in 1900, and the number of work-people affected was 179,546, or about 9,000 less. The number of working days lost was 4,142,000, but the comparison is more favorable if we go back to the 15,290,000 days lost in 1898, and 10,346,000 days in 1897. The number of actual stoppages settled by arbitration or mediation was only forty-one, but these included some of the most widespread and prolonged disputes. As usual, however, the principal agencies for arbitration and conciliation were chiefly concerned with the prevention of strikes and lock-outs rather than with their settlement. Thus the various permanent Boards of Conciliation and Arbitration are known to have settled 605 cases, apart from the cases dealt with under the Conciliation Act, or by the medium of individuals.

THE NATIONAL OIL CO'Y

A Concern Whose Property is Regarded as Very Rich

What the Company Proposes to Accomplish—Bright Outlook for Investors—Mr. Wm Fair is the Local Representative of the Company

Regarding the operations of the National Oil Company, of which our esteemed citizen, Mr. Wm. Fair, has been appointed local agent, the Oil News prints the following:

A representative of The Oil News was sent into the Auglaize county oil field last week in order that a report on the operations in that county might be secured first hand without having to depend upon the regular correspondents for information. It took a whole day to cover the county in a way that would have a good impression of the work now being done, but the results were entirely satisfactory. It was, of course, impossible to cover the entire county in that short time, but enough facts were gathered to leave a most flattering impression upon the mind of the Oil News man.

Throughout the county it was noticed that The National Oil Company is perhaps the most active company engaged in developing the territory. Nearly every township in the county has been tested by this company, and in all there were found to be 38 wells now pumping, all of which belong to the National Oil Company.

The first property visited was that lying in Duchouquet township. Here the company holds leases on tow farms, Collier heirs, section 3, and the A Bowsher, section 22. In all the territory controlled in this township by this company covers 3[illegible] acres. There are six wells, connected with a power pumping plant which is run by a gas engine. This territory is located in fine producing territory and all the wells have a settled production that is quite satisfactory.

Next in line is the Logan township property, located on the G. Brorein farm, section 23 and 33, the Phil. Brorein farm, section 29, the A. J. Walter farm, section 29, the Joseph Alspaugh farm, section 28, and the Dan Gracely farm, section 30. In all there is a territory covering 600 acres in this township, with 17 producing wells, operated by 4 engines and connected by 3 pumping powers. All the wells in this territory are good ones, producing no salt water but lots of oil. The writer was on the top of four tanks and saw a steady stream of oil flowing into them at a nice rate.

In Moulton township were found 3 producing wells, located on the Michael McGuff farm in section 21. These wells are also run by a power and a total acreage of 112 acres is under process of development. This territory is new and so far the wells drilled in are above the average in production. The McGuff farm is located some distance from former developments. Down in sections 22 and 30 the same company holds leases on eight farms, a total acreage of 580 being represented. Here are 8 producing wells and 2 pumping powers run by steam and gas engines. These wells have been drilled in for a number of years and have stood the test very nicely. The production is very good indeed. In the same township the company also holds leases on 125 acres on undeveloped territory which they are now engaged in testing. This property lies in section 32 where they have recently completed a well on the Wm. H. Reha farm. This well started off at 7 barrels a day and is now being pumped steady with a nice settled production.

In Washington township the company holds leases on 6 farms located in sections 19, 30 and 29 on which there are 3 wells run by steam engine. There is a total acreage of 471 acres in this locality.

The company also holds some valuable leases in Van Wert county, comprising 84 acres in Ridge township located right in the seat of the most active operations in that county. They also hold 1200 acres of leases in Kentucky which they will develop as soon as it seems expedient.

In all the National Oil Company has 38 producing wells; they have leases on 2400 acres of good developed territory in Auglaize and Van Wert counties besides over 600 acres in Wood and Hancock counties. They have at least 150 locations for new wells on their Ohio properties which the writer understands they will work up soon. They have one well now drilling and are building several new derricks and are moving others to new locations preparatory to beginning on active campaign.

The Oil News is personally acquainted with the officers of the company and knows them to be men of the best standing. Judge Lowery, president of the company, is a well known Lima man and has been connected with the oil business for many years. J. B. Adkins, vice president, is an oil man who stands in the foremost ranks with the oil producers of this field; W. B. Jack, manager of the company's properties, came from the Pennsylvania oil regions in 1890 and has since been a most successful operator in the Lima field; H. C. Settlage, secretary of the company, has been actively engaged in this oil belt for more than 15 years; Senator Brorein, another member of the company, has been one of the most extensive drillers and operators in the Lima field and is now operating four strings of drilling tools.

On the whole the Oil News man was very highly gratified with all he saw of the National Oil Company's operations. The property undoubtedly will develop into even more valuable property that it now seems to be and in a short time, if the company carries out its plan of new work, it will have one of the largest productions in the Trenton Rock fields.

EARTHQUAKE IN TURKESTAN

Berlin, Sept. 30.—A despatch from Tashkend, Asiatic Russia, says it is reported from Kashgar, Chinese Turkestan, that an earthquake on Aug. 22 killed a hundred persons there and three or four hundred in the village of Astyn.

It is added that the Chinese authorities have learned of the destruction of the town of Aksukukh. The seismic disturbances continued until Sept. 2.

was near enough to hear the words.

"I don't know what to think of it," responded Winifred.

"If it has a chance it will be your big scene that will save it."

"You mean the one with you?"

"No—oh, dear no. I mean when you come on strapped to the horse. They say the house used to rise to Ada Isaacs Menken."

"I—have to come on—strapped to a horse?"

"Don't tell me you didn't know that?"

"I didn't. Oh, I can't do it. I should be too frightened. They must leave out that scene."

"I expect they'd sooner leave out all the rest of the play. Why, that is 'Mazeppa'—all it's worth being put on for. They'll get a reliable 'gee' for you, of course. But there'll have to be rehearsals. Fact is, Miss Gray"—and he chuckled a little—"we're all rather looking forward to that scene."

Somehow Winifred was angry. He was not a gentleman, she told herself, and there was a look and an emphasis which she disliked, though she could not quite have explained why.

After the rehearsal Mr. Wantage called her aside. The gentleman who was "backing" him—a great lover of Byron—had a horse which he was going to lend for the big scene. It had been bought from a circus, and was a clever and docile beast, and would arrive in a few days with its groom, and there must be rehearsals. Did Miss Gray understand horses?

She had ridden when a child, and again sometimes in the Park since she had lived in London; that was her sole experience. She did not think that she was a coward, but if she had known what she would be required to do as Mazeppa she would have thought twice before taking the part.

"I hope you don't accuse me of unfairness in my treatment of you?" asked Mr. Wantage. "Every request you have made has been granted, and if there is anything else——"

"Only to escape from that scene if it were possible."

"That's the one thing that isn't possible. Everything depends upon that. Oh, it won't be half as bad as you think. And it will be the success of your life. All England will be talking about you."

There was little consolation in that, but Winifred did not say so. When she wrote to her mother in the evening, she did not mention her new troubles.

When the invalid was well again, then the requirements of the part might be gently broken to her, and the best made of them. After all, Winifred could not obtain permission to go to town on Saturday, but a telegram was waiting for her after the long hours of suspense during rehearsal to say that all was well. The operation had been successfully performed. On Sunday she did go to London, and was allowed to see Mrs. Gray, though not to speak. There was only a gentle pressure of the hand, and a meeting of the eyes which said as much as words; but it was hard for the girl to go away again, knowing that, as she had left herself so little money, she could not afford another visit until she began receiving salary once more.

To her relief, nothing further was said about the horse for some days. Then, one morning, it was announced that the animal had arrived at Brighton, but he was to be accustomed to the stage by his groom, who would rehearse him several times privately before Miss Gray need try the scene. Would she care to see the creature meanwhile?

At first she refused, for the thought of what she must be prepared to do was hateful. But after a day or two a kind of nervous curiosity triumphed, and she informed Mr. Jeffrey that she would like to be present when the others were out of the theater the next time that the animal was rehearsed on the stage.

So she sat in a box and watched the queer scene with an unpleasant fascination.

The footlights were lit that the horse might become accustomed to the effect, and then Winifred heard the echoing ring of hoofs on wood. The horse was in the wings, being got ready for his entrance. Suddenly he dashed on at a gallop, and with a thump of the heart she saw that a slim young man, almost a boy, was strapped across the creature's back, with his head hanging down. The horse went through various evolutions, such as rearing with his rider and flinging up his hind legs as if desiring to be rid of the burden, then galloped off the stage again.

This was Mazeppa's "great" scene. This was what she—Winifred Gray—would be called upon to do. It seemed even more horrifying than her fancy had painted it.

After that day the girl looked forward with shuddering to her own first rehearsal with the formidable animal. He was said to be gentle, yet she was not reassured.

But at last the dreaded moment came. In cycling "bloomers"—since a skirt was impracticable—she was strapped to the horse's back as the groom had been, submitting to the loathed necessity in silence, with white, set lips—for she was not a girl to indulge in hysterical outcries. The groom ran by the horse's side at first, then retired to the wings, and before she realized what had happened the ordeal was over for the day.

By this time the company had been rehearsing for several weeks. They had all been measured for their costumes, which were to be supplied by the management, and would be ready in time for a dress rehearsal.

Brighton was placarded with huge colored posters, and Winifred's name was to be seen on every hoarding in large letters. She was "starred," and, of course, as Mr. Wantage pointed out, it would do her a great deal of good in the profession. To be a "star" was, in his opinion, a step up even from playing Lady Kitty.

On the day of the dress rehearsal all was suppressed excitement at the theater. The costumes had come, and were very handsome; but there had been one mistake, Winifred was informed. "Your things for the great scene were forgotten when the rest were sent off from the costumier's in town," Mr. Wantage said; "but I have telegraphed, and they'll be here in time for the night, without fail. If anything's happened, they'll have to set to work and finish a new rigout."

"Why, I didn't suppose I was to have another costume for my ride," exclaimed Winifred. "Surely it isn't necessary—and won't even be realistic? You see, I'm a prisoner, condemned to die. Is it likely I would have an extra

FIGHTING FOR LIFE IN A NET

The Desperate Struggle of a Father and Son in Lake Michigan

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 29.—Tangled in a big fishing seine after the capsizing of their boat one mile from shore, Charles Beck, and his son, George Beck, two Evanston firemen, struggled for their lives for two hours yesterday morning in Lake Michigan. Not until the imperilled men had cut the net, which was 300 feet long, in two, were they able to extricate themselves. Then, thoroughly exhausted from their efforts to keep afloat, while they were escaping from the death trap, they battled again with the waves, and, by aiding one another, swam to the beach in safety.

The Becks, who live at 2140 Maple avenue, Evanston, had gone out early in the morning to take in the seine, which they had set off Grosse Point lighthouse. They were engaged in hauling in the netful of fish when a squall arose. Their boat, a flatbottomed scow, swung into the trough of the sea and filled with water. When they were bailing out the water with their hats the scow capsized, throwing both its occupants into the lake. Immediately the arms and legs of the men became entangled in the seine and rendered them powerless to swim.

Divesting themselves of their rubber coats and boots, the father and son, with a fishing knife, began cutting the cords from their hands and ankles. When once they had cut themselves loose and started to swim toward shore they again became entangled in the big net. The son's struggle began to give out after a half hour's struggle, and the double burden of helping the boy to keep afloat and freeing himself and his son from the impeding meshes fell father.

The latter's endurance had nearly given out when he succeeded in separating the last strands of the seine. Both fishermen were so prostrated when they reached the shore that they had to be assisted to their home.

FASTEST WAR VESSEL

London Sept. 29.—The British first-class armored cruiser Drake, 14,100 tons, returned to Portsmouth this evening after undergoing her engine trials, which proved that she is the fastest war vessel in the world outside the torpedo-boat destroyers.

She made 24.10 knots, which high speed was partly due to an improved type propeller. The contract provided that she should attain a speed of 23 knots.

Mrs. Michael Murphy, of town, received word yesterday that her husband, who was wounded in South Africa, accompanied by Dr. Blanchard, had arrived at Halifax, and are now on their way to Peterborough. Both soldiers are heroes of the Hart's River engagement and it is the intention of the local volunteers to give the boys a royal reception. Further word is expected from Murphy as to the exact time that he and Blanchard will arrive in Peterborough and the regiment will very likely be called out to meet them. Their many friends will be very much pleased to know that both have recovered from their recent illness.

MUST SERVE OUT HER SENTENCE

Court of Appeal Refuses to Help Mrs. Crossley

Rex vs. Crossley.—Judgment (C.) on appeal by prisoner from order of Falconbridge, C.J., in Chambers, dismissing an application for her discharge from custody under conviction by the Police Magistrate for the Town of Peterborough, for being the keeper of a house of ill-fame or bawdy house in that town, and superseding the writ of habeas corpus on which the prisoner was brought up. She was sentenced to three months imprisonment at hard labor and to pay a fine of $75. The learned Chief Justice amended the conviction by reducing the fine to $50. The prisoner contended inter alia that the conviction disclosed no offence known to the law. The court is of the opinion, for reasons which will be given in writing later, that the appeal should be dismissed. The order amending the conviction will not be interfered with. D. O'Connell, Peterborough, for the prisoner. Frank Ford for the Crown.

PETERBOROUGH'S NATURAL ADVANTAGES

Chiefly Influenced the Site of the American Cereal Company

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—We notice in an evening paper a statement made by Mr. D. W. Dumble at the meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade "That we were located here through the influence of one man."

Please permit us to state that Mr. Dumble is incorrect in making a statement of this kind, privately or publicly, and evidently speaks without full knowledge, or, in fact, any knowledge whatever of the matter, and in correcting this misstatement permit us to assure you and the public that our company came here because of the natural advantages of Peterborough, which are the geographical location, railways, the water power, and the Trent Valley Canal which we were assured would shortly be completed, and which, when finished and in operation, will in our opinion, secure to Peterborough all the industries that your city can comfortably take care of.

We are, yours very respectfully,
THE AMERICAN CEREAL CO.,

AN EYE-OPENER

Didn't Believe It Possible That Coffee Was at Work

People often atribute their ill health to some indiscretion in eating, and change diet in the hope of recovering their wonted good health; finding no change for the better in their condition, they are at a loss for the cause, never for a moment thinking that the cup of coffee which they take in the morning is the true source from whence all their ills have come.

A lady in Philadelphia had her attention called to the pernicious working of coffee on the system by reading a little book on "How to Live." She says.—"It was truly an eye-opener to me. All the many symptoms of the nervous stage under which I had been laboring so long, were here directly traceable to coffee drinking. Especially was it shown to be responsible for the complete 'breakdown' of my nervous system, which I had ascribed to many different causes, and which had become so great that my hands shook like that of a toper whenever I carried things to my mouth or reached out to grasp anything. I found myself subjected to frequent spells of despondency and gloom, a feeling of emptiness, with constant sour eructations.

Now, like every slave to an inordinate appetite, I was loath to believe that my favorite morning and mid-day beverage was the true cause of all this nervous wretchedness.

Having noticed the advertisements of Postum Food Coffee, I determined to test it, and purchased a package and had some prepared carefully as directed. I enjoyed my first cup immensely, and Postum has been my favorite drink ever since, and that is a year and a half ago. I had barely used it a week when I realized a general 'tone-up' of my system. First, my appetite improved; next, I had no feeling of depression for days together, and a sensation of comfort especially of my stomach, was noticeable. After a month I was aware that my hands no longer trembled, my nerves were improved, and this improvement continued until I entirely recovered my health.

Whenever I learn of a case of nervous prostration, dyspepsia, or stomach trouble among friends and others, I at once urge the abandonment of coffee as a beverage and the use of Postum in its stead, and I have yet to learn of a single case in which it failed of its effects." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

He is now doing well, and will soon be all right again.

No Temperance Meeting

The meeting to have been held in the Maccabees' hall last night, under the auspices of the Temperance Lodges, did not take place. The purpose of this meeting was to make arrangements for the approaching referendum, but as there were but seven or eight persons present, including Rev. J. P. Wilson, of George street Methodist church and Rev. Mr. Wilson of St. Paul's, proceedings were indefinitely postponed. Those who put in an appearance attributed the lack of attendance to counter attractions and the inclement weather.

A Quiet Wedding

Yesterday morning a quiet wedding took place at St. Peter's Cathedral, when Mr. John McMahon, son of David McMahon, of Ashburnham, was united in marriage to Miss Mary McMurray, daughter of Mr. John McMurray, of Douro. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Father McColl. The bride was attended by her sister, whilst the groom was supported by his brother. The newly married couple will reside in Ashburnham.

A MECHANIC'S IDEA

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir.—Will you kindly give me space in your valuable paper to tell my fellow workingmen how I propose to fight Jack Frost this winter. Coal doesn't worry me a particle. I'm as independent as J. Pier. Morgan in the money line. I've got about all the fuel I need for the winter, although I expect to get in a little more in order to make sure. No. I didn't lay in a stock of coal before the strike, nor have I discovered a coal mine. e'I struck a genuine snap, nevertheless. I discovered a farmer who had wood to sell at a dollar a cord in the pile and I got him to haul it to my house for a dollar a load. He took two cords at a load, so that all told the wood cost me only a dollar and a half a cord delivered. I put in an hour or two every day sawing wood, and I can get along without coal till next spring if I have to. But I hope to get a couple of tons of hard coal, just the same, for there are about six weeks in the winter when wood is hardly sufficient to heat a house. In the event of coal becoming remarkably high-priced this winter, Peterboronians could do worse than lay in a supply of wood. Twenty-five years ago it was a rarity to find a coal fire in the country around Peterborough, and farmers found no troubel in keeping their houses comfortable with wood fires. Stoves are still made for burning wood, and by heaping on large chunks of knotty maple, or other hardwood just before going to bed the fire can readily be kept going until morning.

FLYNEVILLE—DOURO.

The summer is fading fast and autumn is at our door step.

—The village blacksmith's hammer breaks the silence of our streets.

—Mr. Levi Sullivan is taking his colt to the Apsley show.

—The potatoes in the neighborhood of Flyneville have been badly affected with the rot. Prof. P Davey says that it is owing to the bite of a reptile in the shape of a tape worm that has been running at large since June last. Col. Kennedy has ordered his men out and will give him a lively chase. He expects to run him down and have him and all his species extinct by October the 10th.

—The tea store and printing office of O'Brien and Towns' is turning out to be a complete success, and why should it not. Owing to the fine staff that is employed it could not be a failure. They have engaged the services of Mr. M. D Sullivan as chief tea taster, and you bet when "Mick" pulls the whisker the tea is o. k. Mr. G. Buck has been employed as editor of the Poultry Department of the "Morning Glory" Be sure and see the ducks that they raise on the Chippewa stream. Mr. M. Kennedy looks after the conundrum and puzzle department. Mr. Lewis Sullivan has been appointed general agent for the new firm. As Messrs. O'Brien & Towns always place the right man in the right place, they choose Mr. Sullivan, believing that a man with firm step and good understanding is the best to manage their affairs abroad. Mr. Sullivan leaves for Warsaw on Monday.

A WOMAN'S PRAYER.

It is notable that in the despondency caused by womanly diseases, there seems to many a suffering woman no way of escape from pain except at the price of life itself. It would be sad to record such a story of struggle and suffering except for the fact that in such dire distress many a woman has found a way back to health and happiness by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This great remedy for womanly ills has well been called "A godsend to weak and sick women." It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"Your medicine almost raised me from the dead," writes Mrs. Edwin H. Gardner, of Egypt, Plymouth Co., Mass., Box 14. "My urine was like brick dust, and I had pain all over me and such a dragging feeling it seemed I could not do my house work. I had to sit down to wash the dishes, even. In the year 1897 I was so sick I did not care to live and prayed many times that God would take me. One day I found a little book. I read it and wrote to Dr. Pierce, and in a few days received an answer. I decided to try his medicine, and to-day I am a well woman. I have no backache, no headache, no pain at all. I used always to have headaches previously to the monthly period and such pain that I would roll on the floor in agony. I took three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and three of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and three vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and was completely cured."

Accept no substitute for "Favorite Prescription." There is nothing just as good.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—Mr. Kelly, the new principal of the Ashburnham schools assumed his duties yesterday.

—A handsome new brass sign was placed in front of Frost's Diamond Hall by J. J. Turner & Sons yesterday.

—Owing to a break in the machinery at the power house of the Peterborough Light & Power Co. last night the town was in darkness This accounts for the "Morning Times" being issued later than usual.

—The opening social for the men of the town was held in the Y.M.C.A. last night. Besides a programme with special music and literary features there was a programme in the gymn. Pumpkin pie was served at the conclusion of the exercises.

FROM LT. COL. GREENWOOD

An Interesting Letter from a Former Citizen of Peterborough

Capt. L. M. Hayes has received the following letter from Col. Greenwood, a former resident of Peterborough now serving in South Africa:

"The country is recovering, very slowly. The Boers are going out to their farms and camping alongside their burned houses, but in most cases they have no farming utensils to cultivate with, consequently they are eating up the seed they took out to plant. I must say that the Boer though a modern fighter, is not a modern agriculturalist. This country is going to be like the Province of Quebec—always looking for some concession from the Government. The Boer is not at all modest about asking. But I must give the Boer credit for what he once learns he does well. Some of our best workmen are Dutchmen, while the Colonial (South African) is shiftless with a cheeky independent air, which when suppressed bobs up again. There are very few poor Dutch farmers, as nearly all farms consist of from 600 to 12,000 acres of land, any of which will sell for not less than £1 per acre, while the farms with gold on them bring £60,000 and £100,000. These are the people who have £3,000,000 set aside by Government to rebuild their houses and help restock. The Dutchman says he got nearly everything he asked for in the peace settlement, and I do not believe he is far wrong. It was a surprise to find there were 20,000 men in the field when they sued for peace. Do you know that they are coming in still. On Friday five armed Boers surrendered at Pretoria. The past two years and a half has been a great experience for me, and I have seen more than I had in my whole life before, having come in contact with all classes. My great regret at not having got into the service is completely blotted out.

"Now, old man, I must congratulate you on your promotion, and am sure you deserved it long ago. I am set aside on the shelf in connection with 3rd P. W. D., so do not interfere with anybody. I saw young Rogers of the 3rd here in Johannesburg. We saw quite a little of Murphy in No. 13 General Hospital. He seemed a good fellow and a credit to the 57th. My wife used to visit the hospital once a week and supply the Canadians with little comforts from the Red Cross funds.

"I was sorry that Bradburn did not run up to Johannesburg before leaving South Africa. I would like to have seen him, and sent some messages back. The Boer prisoners from St. Helena, Ceylon and Colombo are returning and it is quite interesting to study their faces as they pass through on the trains. I have pretty busy time and work seems to increase every day. The correspondence amounts to 70 and 80 letters per day, one day (a record) 150. Of course it is not necessary for me to dictate all of them. I simply make a few notes for my confidential clerk, and I sign them all after reading them."

A PEAT FUEL BOG CLOSE TO THE TOWN

And a Syndicate Said to be Preparing to Work It For All It Is Worth

The Times is informed that a valuable peat bog exists on what is known as the "Old Beavermeadow" property, just outside the boundary of Ashburnham, in Otonabee, and only a couple of miles from town. The property has been inspected, and is now, it is said, in the hands of a syndicate, who propose to work it for all its worth. The Times was told yesterday that the property is a very valuable one, and contains a vast quantity of peat, which can be converted into fuel at a comparatively trifling cost. Those interested are having soundings made of the depth of the bog, and an estimate prepared of the quantity of peat. It this is satisfactory, as it is expected, the necessary plant will be ordered, and operations begun.

It is the development of our great peat fields that will make Canada independent of the United States in the matter of fuel. Should this new discovery result in the establishment of a peat works almost in the town itself, it will be a great thing for Peterborough. Mr. A. L. Davis, of town, who is one of the "fathers" of peat fuel, and who has spent so much time and money in the work of treating the raw peat and making it fit for fuel, will soon, we believe see the full realization of his dreams.

A HIDDEN TREASURE IN SCUGOG RIVER

A "Raft" of Oak Timber, Valued at Many Thousands of Dollars

Somewhere beneath the mysterious surface of the Scugog River, a few miles from Lindsay, is a large quantity of oak timber, which is now worth many tens of thousands of dollars. Some where in the heart of that winding river, where thousands of summer visitors spend so many pleasant hours in passing to and fro from Sturgeon Point, Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls, and other well known resorts, the buried timber has lain for about 50 years.

The facts connected with the sinking ing of the timber is now known only to the oldest inhabitant. Away back about 1850 Mr. Alex. Dennistoun operated largely on the waters of the Scugog, Cameron and Balsam Lakes, and in those days square timber was the chief product of the forests in this locality. The timber was floated down in vast rafts made up of hundreds of cribs, the whole being run through Peterborough to Lake Ontario and towed to Quebec.

Mr. Dennistoun, who by the way was a grand uncle of our esteemed townsman, Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, had a foreman in one of his camps named Joe Demoe, (whose widow still lives at Fenelon Falls.) Demoe, instead of cribbing his oak with a few sticks of pine to keep it afloat, built his raft entirely of oak. This timber was floated in one huge block to a point near the mouth of the Lindsay River, when it was tied up for the winter. In the spring the rafts had disappeared beneath the surface of the Scugog, having become water logged during the winter. In those days oak was plentiful, and it was decided that it would not pay to raise it. In a few years the circumstance was forgotten.

The timber is as sound to-day as it was when cut, having been preserved by the water. Mr. John Thompson, of the Dickson Company, says that the timber, judging what he has heard about it, is worth $100,000 or more. Some time or other it will be recovered, and will make some one immensely rich.

THE ARCTIC FOR CONSUMPTIVES

Lieut. Peary Recommends It—He Has Quit, but Another will Reach the Pole

New York, Sept. 30—Lieut. Robt E. Peary, who is now at the Hotel St. Denis, enjoying a rest after his struggles and hardships in the Arctic, repeated yesterday to a Sun reporter his firm intention of quitting exploring, leaving others to search for the Pole in the future, and of devoting himself entirely to his work in the navy. Asked if he thought the Pole would ever be reached, he replied:

"Certainly it will be reached. There is no reason why it should not be. Some man who is able to make latitude 80 his starting point, and who is properly equipped for his task will get there one of these days. His first attempt may not be a success. He may have to try many times, but he will get there at last. I only wish I could transfer to some such man the experience I have gained up there. That alone would go far, I think, to insure his success."

In answer to another question, Lieut. Peary expressed the opinion that the best possible way of curing consumptives would be to send them into the Arctic. He thinks it would be perfectly feasible to establish sanitariums at very high latitudes for such purposes, and he pointed out that the men who take in Arctic expeditions and who are not exposed to unforeseen hardships usually increase in weight. Lieut. Peary instanced Dr. Sohon, the physician of the Windward, who gained nineteen pounds during the last trip.

The Day of Miracles Not Past

A Toronto "Star" reporter investigated the case of Mr. Geo. Warner, and found that after thirteen years of almost total deafness, he had been cured by inhaling Catarrhozone.

This proves that where Catarrhozone treatment is employed, impaired hearing and deafness can be cured. Catarrhozone always brings quick relief, and is warranted to give lasting satisfaction. All sufferers from Impaired Hearing, Deafness, Head Noises and Ringing in the Ears are advised to inhale Catarrhozone and derive the great benefit it is capable of affording. SAW STRANGER AROUND HOUSE

Important Evidence Given at the Franks' Murder Inquest

WITNESS HEARD THREE BLOWS

Statement Corroborated by Constable Lymburger—Doctors Testify as to the Wounds

Chippewa, Sept. 30—At the inquest into the murder of Mrs. Franks yesterday, Mrs. James Office, a neighbor swore that about five o'clock on the Monday preceding the murder she saw a man lurking about the house, evidently sizing up the premises. Two other men, who were apparently waiting for him, were a short distance up the Stone road, between Chippewa and Niagara Falls South. The man wore a black suit and a black wide-rimmed fedora hat. He was afterwards driven out of town by Officer Lymburner, who regarded him as a suspicious character. Shortly after 8 o'clock on the night of the murder she heard three blows, as if someone were pounding on a door. Mrs. Office lives about 400 feet east of the house in which Mrs. Franks was murdered.

Constable Lymburner corroborates the statement of Mrs. Office, as far as the stranger is concerned, for he saw the man on the street, and told him to leave the town, because he did not like his appearance and demeanor.

The evidence of the doctors, showing that the throat of the deceased had been cut, showed that the wound was very close to the carotid artery, and was not sufficient to cause death, and, in their opinion, had been inflicted after death. The doctors also testified there was evidence of criminal assault. Either of the two wounds on the head was sufficient to cause death.

Mr. and Mrs. Macklem and Miss Thomas also testified, and repeated the evidence given by them on Thursday last, about going into the house on Wednesday night about 10 o'clock and, supposing Mrs Franks not at home and the house being in darkness, they returned to Mr. Macklem's house. On Thursday morning, returning with Mr. Herman Heber, they making the discovery that Mrs. Franks had been murdered.

At the afternoon session of the inquest Crown Attorney Cowper asked to have the inquest adjourned until Tuesday, Oct. 7, which was granted.

New Westminster, B.C., Sept. 30 — The N.A.L.U. champion Shamrocks fell easy victims to New Westminster to day the Western champions piling up a score of 10 goals to the Irishmen's 2.

New Westminster had resurrected their celebrated team-work of 1900, and had little difficulty in getting through the big Shamrock defence, while the British Columbians checked closely, and easily kept the Shamrocks from scoring.

There is great rejoicing over the result, as it is held to prove conclusively that only the obstacles of distance and hostile grounds keep New Westminster out of the Minto Cup.

FERGUS AND OSHAWA TO-DAY.

Fergus has been making a bid for a lacrosse championship for twenty years but has never got out of the "runners-up" class; but the good people of the town consider that to-morrow, when the team meets Oshawa in the final game for the C.L.A. intermediate championship there will be a change in the complexion of affairs Fergus is banking heavily on taking Oshawa into camp and nearly all the local enthusiasts will come down to see the big match Both teams have been practicing strenuously for the game, and will be in fine shape for a hard contest. Oshawa has been very successful this season, and they are fully as sanguine of victory as their opponents. A special boat service will be provided for the game.

EXPERIMENTS WITH SOFT COAL

Coal at Six Dollars or Thereabouts for Peterborough

The Council of Ottawa is endeavoring to procure 5,000 tons of coal from Wales for the use of the city, and Mayor Denne, who is anxious to secure Peterborough against the threatened coal famine, has written the Ottawa authorities to know if Peterborough cannot join them. If the order could be increased a couple of thousand tons, so that Peterborough would receive the extra quantity, it would be a God-send to our people.

If no coal from Wales can be obtained there, then an effort should be put forth to secure it in the West. Failing this the mines of Nova Scotia should be applied to, and finally as a last resort wood, peat or some other substitute fuel will be obtained.

The people may rest assured that Mayor Denne will leave no stone unturned to provide fuel for the citizens.

LANDLORDISM DRIVEN TO THE LAST DITCH

J. O'Dowd Says Irish League Has Forced Them to a Compromise--May Take Action

Regarding the Coal Strike—Canada and the Cunard Line Bargain—Comments on Bourassa's Article

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 1—A Dublin despatch says J. O'Dowdm M.P., speaking at a meeting at South Sligo of the Executive Committee of the United Irish League, said that landlordism as an institution had been driven to the last ditch and landlords realised this, hence their anxiety for a conference with tenants. The United Irish League had forced landlords to beg a conference with the men whom they would have hanged, drawn and quartered three months ago.

AGAINST OCCIDENTAL INFLUENCES.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 1—A correspondent at Hong Kong sends intelligence of an increased display of Chinese antagonism to Occidental influences. The latest manifestation of hostility is in Canton, there being anti-Christian and anti-foreign placards displayed throughout the city.

ROYAL BIRTH IN AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 1—Regarding the announcement that the Princess of Hohenberg, the morgantic wife of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir apparent to the throne of Austria-Hungary, has given birth to a second child, a son, the Vienna correspondent of The Times states that it may be said without breach of courtesy or discretion that in both Austria and Hungary the event is considered as possibly involving far-reaching consequences bearing upon the future dynasty of the Monarchy.

TREATMENT OF ROUMANIAN JEWS

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 1— Commenting upon Secretary Hay's note to the Powers on the treatment of Roumanian Jews, a Paris correspondent says that the French Government must not be expected to show any very great eagerness in supporting the contention of the United States. It is true, says the correspondent, that France used to pride herself on having forestalled other nations in admitting the Jews into citizenship, and it is also true that the Jews in French colonies have been staunchest supporters of French rule and throughout Morocco and the Turkish Empire have been the instruments of the French propaganda, causing France at the Berlin Congress to take the lead in stipulating that they should receive humane treatment in Roumania. But there's an opposite tendency on the part of the French Government Russia must be consulted on this, as on ohter questions, and Russia cannot be expected to show very great sympathy for Jews in Roumania or elsewhere, and France must keep step with her actions.

CANADA AND CUNARD LINE BARGAIN.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 1—Radical journals are taking Bourassa's article on the French-Canadians as a text against the new Imperialism The Manchester Guardian says, "Bourassa states frankly that the French-Canadians are not anticipation protection at our hands, or need it, and do not propose to contribute men and money to a central fund in order to keep the Japanese, any, out of Australia or Russia out of the Persian Gulf. If we are wise, we will not complain at this or forget it. To press Canada to shoulder Imperial liabilities would be to do a signal unkindness to our own countrymen with whom the Frenchmen live."

THE FAST LINE NEGOTIATIONS.

The British Government's agreement with the Cunard line is expected to have an important influence on the Canadian fast mail negotiations. If, for instance, the British Government is willing to lend money to maintain a mercantiel marine, why not for building a Canadian as well as New York steamers! Owners would then get money at 2 3-4 instead of 3 1-2 or 4 per cent. The fact that the Cunard Line undertakes to build two 24-knot boats is accepted most regrettably, as almost disposing of this ideal of Canadian steamers out rivalling New York, for estimates prove that a 24-knot boat costs at least a million and a half dollars more than the 20-knot steamers upon which the Canadian Pacific estmiated.

THE U. S. CABINET MAY TAKE ACTION.

Special to The Times.

Washington, Oct. 1—The President, Secretary Root, Secretary Moody, Attorney-General Knox and Postmaster-General Payne resumed their conference on the coal strike situation this morning.

The conference closed shortly before noon. It is understood that a decision was arrived at, for it was announced there would be no more conferences held on the question. By direction of the President, an official statement will be issued this afternoon.

Baer Holds the Job Yet.

New York, Oct. 1—The statement that President Baer, of the Philadelphia and Reading has resigned is absolutely without foundation.

THE COAL SITUATION

Mayor Denne Trying to Secure Welsh Coal for Peterborough

In view of the efforts being made by Mayor Denne to secure a supply of soft coal for Peterborough, the following, taken from the Ottawa Citizen, will be of interest just now;

One of Ottawa's well known citizens, who has had experience in burning soft coal both here and in Nova Scotia, very kindly granted an interview to a representative of the Citizen yesterday morning, and gave the following information:

"Soft coal can be used very successfully in cooking stoves and in those stoves that are fed from a hopper above, but it is rather doubtful if it can be used in furnaces. Its chief disadvantage is that it deposits a heavy coating of soot whenever the smoke cools. This condition would make it necessary to clean often those flues that have many turns as is the case with some stovepipes. Straight chimneys, however, do not need cleaning more than once a year. This deposit of soot that soft coal leaves and the fact that it breaks up easily into dust make it much dirtier to handle than anthracite. But this dust is no loss, because it burns as well as the whole coal if dampened slightly. One precaution is necessary when soft coal is burned in the heating stoves and that is to place a layer of ashes over the new fire previous to retiring. This keeps the coal from blazing too much and prevents the fuel from forming a crust and shutting off the draught. Some time ago when comparatively high fuel rates prevailed a number of the people of Ottawa jointly had a carload of coal brought from the Springhill mines in Nova Scotia. At that time as a result of the venture the coal was placed in the houses at a total cost of from $5.50 to $5.75 per ton, thereby effecting a great saving over the prevailing rates."

From the interview it will be seen that Nova Scotia coal can be laid down in Ottawa at $6 a ton at the outside, and the increased cost owing to increased consumption would be met by the difference in prices in soft and hard coal. It has been suggested that it would be advisable should the dealers refuse to handle it that citizens should club together and bring it in by carload

A RECEIVER FOR THE COAL MINES

Boston Citizens, Headed by Newspaper, Seek Relief in Courts From Storage

BILL IN EQUITY FILED IN SUPREME COURT

Coal Carrying Roads Included in Petition—A Lawyer's Novel Large Theory Would Run Whole Business

Boston, Mass., Oct. 1.—A committee of citizens, headed by the publishers of a Boston newspaper, yesterday sought relief in the courts from the present coal shortage and high prices by asking for a receiver for the coal companies and coal carrying roads. A bill in equity was filed in the supreme court against the following named corporations;

The Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company, the Delaware & Hudson Company, the New York Ontario and Western Railroad, the Erie Railroad Company, the Pennsylvania Coal Company and the Philadelphia & Reading Iron & Coal Company.

COURT TO FIX PRICE.

The petitioners ask that a receiver be appointed for the benefit of all concerned upon such terms and in such manner and with such agents and servants, and with such rates of wages and other conditions of employment, and at such prices for goods produced and as the court shall from time to time adjudge proper.

The bill is based upon the legal theory of the coal situation given by H. W. Chaplin, a lawyer.

LAWYER SUPPORTS THEORY.

Mr. Chaplin says in support of his position;

"Since the public has a right in the mines, a right to have coal forthwith mined for immediate consumption, and have a right to have that coal immediately transported from the mine regions by the coal carrying roads, a court of equity, is no other solution of the difficulty is open, has authority to, and upon the application of a representative proportion of the people undoubtedly would, appoint a receiver or receivers to take into his or their hands the whole business now in the hands of the anthracite coal combine, and to run it their own way."

A subpoena to serve on the delinquents, giving notice of the bringing of the suit is to be taken out on Monday by the plaintiff's lawyer, and it will probably be returnable in November.

RUSSIA HAS DESIGNS ON PERSIAN GULF

A Struggle Which Must Come Between Britain and the Muscovite

London, Oct. 1.—One of the oldest bugbears of international politics—Russian designs upon Persia and the consequent struggle sooner or later between Russia and England for the supremacy of the world—is again the burden of political gossip. In order to improve her position, if possible, England has just decided to extend her stragetic frontier railway from the Indian border at Quetta to Nushki, but this step is too late, for long before the projected line can be completed Russia will run the railroads which she has built in the north right down to the Indian Ocean.

Russia means to obtain an outlet on that ocean and to secure it she will, if need be, fight England and even Germany and England combined. That has long been a settled thing and history has demonstrated that once the Czar's Government has decided upon a definite line of policy it is carried to a conclusion sooner or later, usually later, for the Muscovite statesman is never in a hurry. So it is now, and the current excitement here will not be able to accler. the struggle by a single year.

MR. MATCHETT HONORED

By the Pupils of the Ashburnham Public Schools

On Tuesday afternoon Mr. M. W. Matchett, who has been principal of the Ashburnham public school since 1893, was presented by the school children with an address and a silver cream jug and sugar bowl. The address, which was read by Janet Quinn, was as follows:

Ashburnham, Sept. 30, 1902.

Mr. W. Matchett, Esq:

Dear Mr. Matchett,—We have learnt with much regret that you have decided to disconnect yourself with the Ashburnham Public School of which you have been the Principal for several years. It is our earnest wish on this, the last day of your being our Principal, to assure you of the gratitude for the many services you have rendered us in preparing us for our respective relationships in life. We admit that we, like many others who, in their childhood, have not had the forethought of ripe experience, have not always appreciated your zeal and effort on our behalf as much as we should have done. Nevertheless, we feel today more seriously than ever the loss of your ability and the kindly interest that you, in and out of school, have shown us.

We wish to assure you of our appreciation of all you have done for us, and that we will always remember the privilege we have had of having been your pupils.

We ask you to accept the accompanying gift as a mark of our gratitude to you for your ladbors on our behalf.

In saying "good-bye" to you we wish you much success in your undertakings, and God's richest blessing upon you and your family.

On behalf of the pupils of Ashburnham Public School,

Yours affectionately.

JANET QUINN.
NORMAN GEALE.
JOHN GARVIN MARKLE.

Kathleen Long then presented the silver cream jug and sugar bowl.

Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, who gives religious instruction to the children of the Ashburnham public school every Friday afternoon, was asked to be chairman for this special occasion. In his address he referred to the many excellent qualities of Mr. Matchett, and to the lively interest he had always taken in the welfare of the children, as well as of the school. He pointed out the excellent results the Ashburnham school has had in Entrance as well as in Promotion examinations, which all proved the ability of the teaching staff, especially of Mr. Matchett. There was a happy atmosphere about the school, Mr. Langfeldt said, which was certainly due to the amiability of the principal. In his own relations to Mr. Matchett, the chairman could not give enough praise to the readiness and co-operation which Mr. Matchett has shown at every opportunity. He always felt sure of the entire sympathy with the work he was carrying on in teaching the children the elementary principles of Christianity. Personally he regretted very much that Ashburnham was losing such an efficient and kindly teacher. He called upon the children to express by earnest application to their work, and by a sincere endeavor to make their mark in life, to Mr. Matchett their gratitude for the toil and anxiety which it had cost him to impart to them the learning they needed for their life and work.

Mr. Matchett, to whom the invasion of his room, and this presentation was an entire surprise, was much overcome and deeply appreciated the good will of the pupils. He assured them of his further interest in them, and bespoke for the new principal, Mr. Kelly, their good will and obedience.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION

A Movement on Foot to Re-Organize the Exhibition Association

As intimated in The Times a few days ago, a meeting is called for tomorrow evening, for the purpose of re-organizing the Central Exhibition Society. The following circular has been sent out:

It is proposed to form an organization composed of business men and merchants of the town, and farmers of the county, with the object of carrying on in the town an annual fair, to be called the Peterborough Industrial.

It is important that it be fully known to what extent the business men and merchants of the town are perpared to support the work of such an organization, and a meeting with this object in view, will be held in the Council Chamber, on Friday evening, October 3rd., at eight o'clock.

You are urged to attend. The matter is sufficiently important that it should be given preference over other engagements. A proposition will be laid before the meeting covering the objects as above, and it would be well if you were present to hear the discussion, and take part in the organization.

NOW FOR THE NORTH POLE

Lieutenant Peary announces that he has retired from the Arctic exploring business and will resume his duties in the navy. But he is confident that the pole can be reached. It is, he says, only a question of money, and he estimates that the comparatively small sum of $200,000 would equip a ship and crew and keep a party in the north ten years —if so long a time should be found necessary—and enable them to approach the pole by gradual stages.

Two hundred thousand dollars would be a mere bagatelle for men like Carnegie, or Rockfeller, who are constantly searching for ways and means to promote worthy enterprises and add to the sum of human knowledge. And there are hundreds of men of lesser fortunes who could easily spare the money. Now that Peary has concluded to return to the work for which the government pays him, if some genuine and competent scientist and explorer who can demonstrate that he means business, comes forward, perhaps the money can be found. It is a remarkable fact that none of the recent American explorers —Baldwin, Peary or any other—has succeeded in approaching so near the pole as a Swedish explorer did in 1896. This should inspire American capital to do something, for we do not want to have our nation beaten in a game in which it is demonstrated that money can play a winning hand.

Some people scout at Arctic explorations and say there is nothing to be learned up in that frozen region of any value. But the scientists do not agree with them. They believe that much might be added to the sum of human knowledge by a party that could reach the exact point where there is no latitude or longitude. Besides, the constant example of heroic endeavor and the braving of perils in a scientific quest is a stimulant to high thinking and high deeds.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Even the metropolitan dailies may soon be reduced to the straits of gladly accepting cordwood in lieu of subscriptions.

Too many doctors are being turned out by medical schools and colleges in the United States. Hence the movement now becoming general for more rigid examinations. The Cincinnati College of Medicine has just closed its doors, owing to the falling off in attendance for this reason. It is estimated that 6,000 doctors are graduated annually, and sent out to perform their missions of healing. This is not too large a number, probably, but even if a few medical institutions have to close, it is a good thing that the legal requirements which must be met before a physician can practise are being made more strict. New York has led the way in establishing a uniform entrance examination for medical candidates. Ohio followed last year. Minnesota has fallen into line, together with Pennsylvania and Illinois. It is also proposed to establish a similar law in Michigan. There are six medical colleges in that State—two in Ann Arbor, one in Saginaw and three in Detroit. Each college has now its own standard of entrance.

OTONABEE.

On Thursday afternoon of last week the pupils of S. S. No. 1, Otonabee, presented their school mates, George, Jenny, and Lizzie West, with a pair of gold cuff links and collar buttons, and gold brooches, respectively, on the occasion of their removing to Oregon with their father, Mr. David West, who has sold his farm in Otonabee.

Miss Maggie Dickson read the following address and Christy Plunkett, Bessie Shearer and Bella Wood made the presentations:

Villiers, Sept. 25, 1902.

Dear School Mates,—As you are about to leave us we feel that this, your last day at school in Otonabee, should not be allowed to pass without expressing our regret at your departure. We trust that when you have reached your western home that you will often be reminded of the pleasant associations and hours spent together at S. S. No. 1, Otonabee.

We therefore ask you to accept these gifts with our warmest wishes for your future happiness and prosperity.

HARVEY.

The eight annual exhibition of the Harvey Agricultural Society was held at Lakehurst on Wednesday, September 24, and it was in every way a splendid success. The weather was favorable and the attendance was large, while the exhibits were of a most gratifying and creditable character.

It is eight years since the Harvey exhibition was inaugurated, and very great progress has been made, both in the high character of the exhibits, and in the evidence they afford of the advance made in stock raising, as well as general farming.

This was specially noticeable in the class of horses, in the ring, which was very superior, if not in numbers, in quality. To specify more particularly, there was one two year old colt—a general purpose beast—which a gentleman who is a judge of horse flesh, said on the grounds, could not be surpassed in the province. In no department, perhaps, as in horses, is the improvement so pronounced; and if the farmers of Harvey keep up the same rate of improvement in horse flesh for four or five years, as they have done in the past two years, they will find the side lines and concessions of the township scoured by horse buyers, as Smith and Cavan are now.

In the cattle pens there was a fine exhibit of cattle. Among some fine stock may be especially mentioned a yearling bull, owned and exhibited by Mr. John Smith, which a visitor asserted, compared very favorably with any Toronto. In all the other departments the show was fair. The display of grain shown at the Industrial Exhibition at and other farm products, and of ladies' work, was very creditable, and gave evidence of the progressive improvement in quality and quantity which is so noticeable in connection with the Harvey Exhibition. The visitors were much pleased with the interesting speeding events.

Taken altogether, the Harvey Exhibition was a gratifying success, and the wisdom and public spirit of those who projected this fair, has been amply justified, and those who helped it upon its feet, have every reason to feel proud of the success which has attended it. The friendly competition among the farmers it has excited, to see who could excel at the annual fair, has led to an improvement in stock, in both horses and cattle, which had been worth thousands of dollars to the farmers of Harvey. And this benefit is not confined to those who have exhibited, but all have been benefitted by the opportunities afforded to improve the stock of horses and sheep by the superior animals imported by enterprising exhibitors. It is no exaggeration that say that in no township in the province has the benefit of well-conducted exhibitions been so evident as in the Township of Harvey.

suit of clothes for the purpose?"

"I'm afraid we're rather bound by convention for that scene," replied Wantage, not looking the girl in the eyes. "It slipped my mind to say anything about dressing it, as that was taken for granted. Exactly the same costume has been provided for you, and made from your measurements, as Ada Isaacs Menken wore when she made her great hit in the part."

Winifred said no more. The costumes which had already arrived were modest as well as magnificent, and she must take it for granted that this other, copied from the dress of the once-famous actress, would be equally satisfactory.

At last the night of the first performance came, and Winifred, cheered by favorable news of her mother, set out from her quiet lodgings for the theater.

It was raining, a cold, sleety rain, but this would not matter to the management, as Mr. Wantage had told Winifred that every reserved seat in the house was already sold.

As she came near to the theater she saw that, despite the rain, a large crowd was collected. "People must be waiting for the pit doors to open," she thought. As she approached on her way to the stage entrance, however, she found that they were not forming a line, but were huddled round a poster at which everyone was staring on tip-toe over each other's shoulders.

There had been no poster in that place before, and Winifred wondered vaguely what it could be which apparently interested so many people at once.

She would have liked to draw closer and see for herself, as she knew that, if it were a picture, it must represent some scene in the play. But it was not good form for one of the actresses to mingle with a crowd in the street in front of the theater, so she went on, on the other side of the street, only crossing to reach the stage-door.

Miss Julia Sinclair stood near the entrance, reading letters, for it was early, still.

"Have you seen the new poster?" she asked, with a certain eagerness, her eyes on Winifred's face. Perhaps she had lingered over her letters when she learnt that Miss Gray had not yet arrived, in the hope of asking this question and hearing the answer.

"No," said Winifred. "But I saw a crowd grouped round something which looked like one. Isn't it rather late for a new poster?"

"Better late than never for such a striking one as this. I suppose they couldn't get it ready before—or else they had some other reason. A pity you missed it. It shows Mazeppa on the horse. And it has your name underneath in red and black letters six inches high—'Miss Winifred Gray as Mazeppa.'"

Winifred was annoyed, for though she had grown fond of Selim, the clever and beautiful "trick" horse, she hated the scene almost as much as ever, and would have preferred not to be identified with it on a special poster. With a quick flash of intuition she was ready to believe that Mr. Wantage had kept back the picture until the last moment, suspecting how she would feel, and not wishing to be troubled by objections. But she did not give Miss Sinclair the satisfaction of seeing her annoyance.

"It must be a fancy portrait," she said, quietly, "unless someone 'snapshotted' me in those wretched bloomers of mine at rehearsal."

"Well, it isn't much of a likeness," rejoined Miss Sinclair, "but the effect is certainly striking."

"Is the dress pretty?" Winifred asked, already moving away towards her dressing-room—for she had not her own maid to help her now, and must not waste too much time.

Miss Sinclair laughed out, a queer little giggle. "Lovely!" she answered. "Lovely!"

Further on there was Mr. Wantage, who had been waiting for her. The costume had not come yet. There had been a hitch. But he had sent a man to town, who would be back with it in his hands an hour before it was needed.

Winifred was not particularly concerned. She did not see the crucial necessity for an extra dress. She could quite well go through the horrid scene in one she had worn previously, for the less the audience looked at her during those moments the better she would be pleased.

Just as she was ready to go out for her first scene someone knocked at the door and handed in a parcel. "Your costume's come at last," said a voice, and Winifred took the box that was hastily handed to her.

But she could not wait to open it then. Tossing the parcel on to a chair, she hurried away, and was only just in time.

Out in front was a sea of faces. The house was packed. Winifred only saw this vaguely, but as she appeared upon the stage someone moved in the proscenium box and let fall a rose, which dropped close to her feet. Involuntarily the girl looked up, and met the eyes of Lionel Macaire.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Secret Out.

Winifred did not know how she got through the scene. It was only mechanically that she spoke her lines. For her there was but one man in the audience; the man who had done his best to ruin her life and drive her out of the sole profession in which she was fitted to make a living. "He heard that I was to play in this, and so he came," she said to herself. "He hoped that the sight of him would make me break down. But I shan't—I shan't."

She felt if only she could escape to the quiet of her own dressing-room and think for a moment that she might steady her nerves again; and when at last she was liberated by her first exit speech she hurried almost blindly from the stage. But Mr. Wantage blocked the way. "Our backer wishes to be introduced to you, Miss Gray," he said, stopping her in the comparative dusk of the wings. Her eyes were still dazzled by the shimmer of the footlights, and she only saw, for an instant, that there was another man with the manager. "Of course you must have heard of Mr. Lionel Macaire," he went on. And at the sound of that name the eyes of her mind were opened. As by a lightning flash in dead of night all that had puzzled her, all that had lain hidden in comforting darkness, was made poignantly clear.

Without speaking she broke away, and fled to her dressing-room. She

Treasury Assistance

New York, Oct. 1.—Somewhat late to materially benefit many people the U. S. Treasury has come to the rescue. The secretary has announced that he will make a deposit of Government money to the extent of the market value of Government bonds instead of par value; also will deposit money against such quick securities as savings banks are allowed to invest in. The savings bank class of securities may also be substituted for part of each bank deposit of two per cent., against circulation, so that more National Bank notes may be issued against the released 2s. twenty five millions of such currency has already been printed, anticipating its consequent demand by the banks. This will release a lot of money, and should not only materially relieve the general stringency, but what is far more to the point go a long way towards restoring confidence.

Everyone knows that stocks have not declined owing to future outlook or because they were too high, but because the money situation made it simply impossible for all to get funds without liquidation. This enormous liquidation has also aided matters materially; once the storm is over there will be as much of a desire to buy as the past few days witnessed to sell. Bargains are more in evidence in Wall Street than they are in dry goods stores. We think it is no exaggeration to say that fully 75,000 shares of stocks have been absorbed by cash investors since Saturday morning last. This stock will practically go out of the market to stay for some period at least. It will take good profits to bring it back into Wall street, as this class of buyer purchases when low, and only parts with his holdings when things are high and people climbing for them.

Another point to bear in mind is that the market of the past week has thrown back upon the hands of the cliques and insiders nearly all outside holdings. Their work of disposal will consequently all have to be done over again. Remember in the 1899 tight money episode Keene and the Standard Interests were bearish upon the market. Today they are loaded with stocks, the course of St. Paul the past month fully proves it. Their interests are consequently identified with the bulls, and they are probably the strongest combination today on Wall Street.

Summary—Today's market illustrated the excellence of our advice for the time being to sell stocks on bulges, then to repurchase them on the set back. We don't mean these remarks to be in any way to be tinged as bearish in nature, as we advise buying long stocks on the depressions. To do as outlined above is simply to take advantage of the feverish and erratic market movements which always follow a shake up. Stocks will eventually go much higher, in many instances higher than any previous price recorded; but the feverish up and down periods should be gone through before a continuous upward march is resumed. Consequently we hazard the advice for benefit of our clients. The low prices of the annual tight money period we believe have been made and will not be generally reached again. Money closed 8 per cent.; sales 989,000.

RUPERT OF HENTZAU

A letter from Mr. Small, of the Grand Opera House, Toronto, regarding to-night's high class attraction says: "Rupert of Hentzau Co. gave a good performance of this play, and I sincerely trust that this attraction may do the business in Peterborough to which it is entitled." This attraction certainly comes highly recommended. Plan of opera house closes at 7 p.m. sharp

He Took Our Advice

—Mr. G. E. Whiten, the well known photographer, has a high regard for this great family journal, for it was through perusing these columns that he secured his winter's fuel. When he was told by this g. f. j. as far back as May last that coal would soar sky high this fall, he at once placed his order with Mr. McClellan for his winter's supply, at $7 per ton. The coal was delivered a few days ago, and Mr. Whiten is congratulating himself that he followed the advice given

Blanche Gets Six Months

Blanche Royal, who is now well known to our readers, was yesterday given six months in jail by Police Magistrate Dumble. While her case was proceeding she lay in the prisoners' box as motionless as a log. The general opinion of the court officials was that her action this morning and on a good many previous occasions is feigned. Magistrate Dumble has given the girl's condition a careful study and concluded that the jail was the best place for her for the next six months. He felt that she would have shelter, the services of a physician and warmth during the winter.

STOLE MONEY AND CLOTHES

Jane Ellis, a Girl 13 Years of Age, Pleads Guilty

Jane Ellis, a little 13-year-old girl who has been stopping at Mr. Harry Fowlers', near Best Station, since last Wednesday, disappeared yesterday, taking with her a small sum of money and some clothing. Mr. Fowler followed her as far as Peterborough where she was arrested and was brought before the Magistrate. The girl pleaded guilty to the charge and was remanded for a week. Jane came from England at the age of 11, her mother and father being both dead. She has an aunt in Toronto by the name of Mrs. Smith. She says that before going to Mr. Fowler's she stopped in town with people by the name of Garet, but the police were unable to locate any person residing in town by that name

A PROSPECTIVE INDUSTRY

A Large American Machinery Company to Locate in Canada

As The Times mentioned several days ago the Aultman, Taylor Company, of Peoria, Ill., manufacturers of farm implements have decided to establish a considerable size branch of their business in Ontario. Mr. C. C. Marcum, first vice-president, and Mr. C. D. Mays, chief constructor of the company, who were in Toronto for several days last week, said that the industrial situation in Canada fully warranted the company in deciding to manufacture separators and engines in this country. The price of land in Toronto and vicinity, however, was too high for them, and they would locate in a smaller place, where they could perhaps get a donation of land. They hoped to begin manufacturing in Canada early next year. There was a growing tendency among the American manufacturers to locate branches in Canada for the manufacture of goods to be sold in this country. Cheaper labor, less inclination to engage in strikes, the present tariff and the talk of Canada raising the tariff on manufactured goods were responsible. If the tariff were raised the American manufacturers would be in difficulties unless they had plants in Canada.

FOR FALSE PRETENCES

John Dundas was Arrested Yesterday on a Serious Charge

John Dundas, who was to have officiated as groomsman at a wedding yesterday, was arrested on a charge of having obtained a suit of clothes from P. Simons & Co., by false pretences. It appears that Dundas ordered the suit, and when they were ready to deliver he came and presented an order which purported to be signed by Mr. Felix Brownscombe, Town Treasurer, stating that the town owed him $25, alleging it to be the usual South African grant to volunteers. Mr. Simons soon found out the swindle and Dundas was at once arrested. He will face the Magistrate this morning.

ARRIVED HOME YESTERDAY

Yesterday morning Sergt. Michael Murphy and Dr. Blanchard arrived home from South Africa, where both had been ill. Sergt. Murphy was wounded, being struck on the head in the Hart's River fight, and Dr. Blanchard was stricken with enteric fever.

Their many friends were pleased to see them, and The Times joins in extending to the returning soldiers a hearty welcome.

COLONY LIFE

Effect of Climate Overcome by Proper Food

The necessity of pleasant, nutritive and proper food is highly appreciated in the Philippines, particularly by Americans unused to climate and native custom in cooking.

One of our soldier boys writes:—"In this land of bad food and disordered stomachs, a nearly fatal attack of malaria left my digestion for many months in such a state, that food of any kind distressed me terribly. I suffered from the effect of drugs, but dared not eat. It was simply miserable to live. The so-called remedies seemed to aggravate my sufferings.

Some friend suggested Grape-Nuts Food, and I gave it a trial. To my surprise and pleasure, it did all and more than was claimed for it. I am now, after using the food for 18 months, in good health; my digestive apparatus in perfect order, and I have long lost all feeling of pain or discomfort after eating. In fact I live again. I would not be without Grape-Nuts for the world. It is not only the excellent effect of your food that renders it valuable, it is also delicious to the taste, possessing flavor of its own, and can be prepared in many ways to suit many palates." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

ANOTHER GRAND CONCERT

Given by Mrs. W. J. Morrow, Assisted by Mr. Harold Jarvis and Mr. Harry Bennett, in the Opera House Last Night

Another of those splendid concerts which the music loving people of Peterborough are becoming so eager in their anticipation of, took place last evening in the Opera House, under auspices of Mrs. W. J. Morrow, whose fine ability and indefatigable perseverance have been so instrumental in placing within the reach of all a feast of music, the thanks of the grateful public are due. The opera house was beautifully decorated and the stage settings most artistic. A cultivated and refined audience whose repeated applause showed their appreciation, filled the building to the doors.

One of Chopin's finest solos—"Fantasia Impromptu," was the opening number, given by Mrs. Morrow in her most masterly manner, and showing her ability as a brilliant interpreter of Chopin. This was followed by Mr. Harold Jarvis giving "Aria, Out of the Depths," (Homer A. Norris) as a vocal solo, in his inimitable style, after which a funny march song entitled "The Chinse Soje Men" man was given by Mr. Harry M Bennet, which evoked much applause.

Mrs. Morrow again favored the audience and rendered "Son Vergin Vezsose (Belleni) with her usual artistic taste.

"A Stein Song," (Bullard) was Mr. Harold Jarvis' next selection. This was rather difficult of rendition and brought out to advantage his magnificent vocal powers.

A song was next given by Mr. Harry M. Bennett, entitled "I am going to be Married," which was followed by most enthusiastic applause.

A piano solo in two parts, "The Dance of the Dwarfs," (Greig) and "Mazurto" (Goddard) given by Mrs. Morrow, was very much appreciated after which Mr. Harold Jarvis gave "The Admiral's Broom."

Mr. Harry M. Bennett again appeared and convulsed the audience by his rendition of "By the Sad Sea Waves," a humorous solo.

The next number given by Mrs. Morrow was exceedingly pretty "Annie Laurie" (Lady John Scott) by request and Mignon (Hardolet).

"O, For Thy Wings, O Dove," (Watson) was next rendered, as a social duet by Mrs. Morrow and Mr. Harold Jarvis. The grandeur of the selection, and the perfect manner in which it was given almost brought down the house.

Miss M. L. McHarry presided at the piano, rendering the accompaniments with much taste and expression. The piano used was a Heintzman & Co.'s grand, which was characterized by its full and even quality of tone.

The concert concluded with the audience singing "God Save the King," led by Mrs. Morrow and Mr. Harold Jarvis.

"Rupert of Hentzau" To-night

TIMES LETTER BOX.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—In Tuesday morning's Times appears an article by "Civis," striking at the Hon. J. R. Stratton over Mr. Dumble's shoulder. In the said article "Civis" says Mr. Stratton called the canal a frog pond. I have lived in Peterborough a good many years and I have always heard Mr. Stratton advocating the early completion of the canal. I support Mr. Stratton, not on political grounds, for I am a Conservative, but because I believe Mr. Stratton does more for the town and county of Peterborough than any other man could possibly do or would try to do. And just so long as he continues to work for the interests of the county he represents in as able manner in the future, as he has done in the past he will get my support, for I know he is doing all he can to influence those in power to have the canal finished as soon as possible.

Yours truly,
FAIR PLAY.

Christian Science Business

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—Replying to the letter which appeared in the Times a few days ago, your correspondent tries by quibble to evade the facts, that Christian Science is not a church, but a medical institution. He quibbles on the meaning of the word medical. He assumes that it means drugging, which is not at all what it means.

Medical means healing, a medical institution is a healing institution, medical science is a healing science, and medical quackery is pretended medical science. Christian Science is a system of medical quackery which uses religion as birdlime to catch dupes.

It is greatly for the financial interest of the practising Christian Scientists to foster the delusion the Christian Science is a religion rather than a system of medical quackery; and the laxity of our medical practise laws and the indifference of the people generally permit them to foster it to the injury of the public both in body and estate. It is refreshing, therefore, to read the action of Judge Pennypacker, who refused the First Church of Christ in Philadelphia a charter on the ground that it was a medical institution, the healers in which did not possess the qualifications necessary under the State laws for practitioners of the healing science.

We Know What is going to happen to the little boy who is stuffing himself with green apples. A grown man couldn't be induced to try that experiment; and yet the grown man will overload himself with indigestible food for which he will pay a greater penalty than colic. It is this careless and thoughtless eating which is the beginning of stomach trouble and all its painful consequences.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other forms of "stomach trouble." It restores the weak and run-down man or woman to sound health.

"Some time has elapsed since I have written you in regard to the treatment I have been taking under your instructions," says Mr. R. F. Clagmans, of Minneapolis, Minn. "When first I commenced taking your remedies I was under treatment of a well-known specialist in this city (and had been for four months), for catarrh, and especially stomach trouble, and I was rapidly getting worse. Got so bad that I could not eat anything that did not distress me terribly, and I was obliged to quit taking the doctor's treatment entirely. I was greatly reduced in flesh. As a last resort I wrote to you and stated my case, and, after receiving your instructions I followed them closely. After taking five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets' I commenced to improve, and decided to continue the medicines and observe your instructions regarding hygienic treatment. It is now nearly six months since I commenced your treatment and I can say that I am well and never felt better in my life. Am very grateful to you for what your medicine has done for me."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness and sick headache.

Boys Wanted

We want three good boys at once—one to learn Bookbinding, one to learn the Printing Business, and a Messenger Boy for The Times Bookstore. Apply at once at the Bookstore.

The necessity for more stringent medical practice laws, or a more rigid enforcement on the ones we have, should be apparent to every one. But on this subject, which ought to be of vital interest to all, there seems to be general indifference. The people apparently do not want to be protected from medical quacks. As Barnum found out long ago, they would rather be deceived than not; only they do not like to know they are deceived. But the health of a whole community is dependent to a large extent on the health of individuals in it and the public welfare demands that the health of the individuals should be protected from the consequences of their ignorance and folly. The only practical way to do this is to require of all practitioners of the healing science that they be properly educated and trained.

THE PRESBYTERY

An Adjourned Meeting Held Yesterday Morning

An adjourned meeting of the Presbytery was held in St. Andrew's yesterday morning. There were present, Dr. Torrance, Messrs. Lord, Potter, Bennett, McIntyre, Campbell, Atkinson, Somerville, Ross, ministers; and Mr. Robt. Harrison, elder

Mr. Lord tendered the resignation of the Convenership of the Augmentation Committee, which was accepted. Mr. R Harrison, elder, was appointed as his successor.

Mr. Reeves was appointed to exchange pulpits with Mr. Campbell, of Havelock, at an early date, and to urge the people there to contribute more largely to the Stipend Fund, so as to meet the falling off in the Augmentation Grant.

The remit of Assembly on "Aids to Worship" was approved of.

Messrs. Harrison and Sinclair were appointed to appear before the Assembly's Augmentation Committee in March next to plead the cause of the Augmented Congregations within the bounds.

Mr. Potter presented the report of H. M. Committee as to the Missionaries needed for the winter months, and as to the changes that might be effected to economize men and money. The report was adopted.

Mr. Harrison and Mr. Bennett were instructed to prepare a report for presentation to the executive of the Augmentation Committee, which has been convened to meet on Monday next.

The Presbytery very reluctantly accepted of the resignations of Messrs. Ross and Somerville, of their respective charges of Roseneath and Norwood. The former charge is to be declared vacant on the first Sabbath in November, and the latter on the 19th October.

Presbytery adjourned to meet again in the Walton street Hall, Port Hope, on the 9th December, at 2 o'clock, p.m.

HEINTZMAN & CO.
PIANO

When a piano is extolled by such artists as Friedheim, Plancon, Albani, Plunket Greene, Burmeister, Edward Lloyd, Lieut. Dan Godfrey, there surely can be no question as to its merits. When they go farther, as in this case, and agree that for power, brilliancy of tone and touch, an artistic construction, the Heintzman & Co. Pianos are unexcelled, it places this instrument in an enviable position in the music world. Plunket Greene says in regard to this instrument:

"I have sung to your piano on my two Canadian tours, and at the close of my second season in Canada I feel I would be lacking in courtesy, did I not congratulate you on the high character of the instrument which you produce. My Recital programmes involve a wide selection of songs of most varied characteristics, and require, of necessity, a piano capable in the highest degree of the most delicate inflections and of widest range, alternating from fine pianissimo effects to the most powerful manifestations of dramatic force. To these demands I found your instrument most responsive. I can assure you that it was to me, as an Englishman, the greatest pleasure to find so splendid a piano assisting in the musical prestige of Her Majesty's foremost colony."

TOO FOND OF FRANCE TO INTERVENE NOW

Pope Leo will not Take Part in the Present Religious Troubles

Treaty with Ship Combine—A Subsidy War — Boats Needed for Cattle Men—Coal Strike no Bluff

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 2.—The Archbishop of Tolouse, who headed the recent pilgrimage to Rome, was asked, says a Paris correspondent of The Times, whether the Pope would intervene in favor of the religious orders. The Archbishop replied:—Leo XIII. is too wise and fond of France to intervene now. He comprehends too well that the enemies of the Church ask nothing better than to extort from him some promise giving them a pretext for persecutions. It is for those who have received his instructions to obey. The Pope's silence is the best proof of his affection for France."

THE TIMES ON NAVAL EXPANSION.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 2—In an editorial on Mahan's article, "Why we must have a great navy," The Times says:—"The argument of inexorable and inevitable necessity of naval expansion, alike to the United States and any other power aspiring to take its due share in the political and commercial future which the march of events is preparing, is very cogent and comprehensive. It opens out a prospect of naval expansion to which it is hardly possible to set an assignable limit. But it may occur some day to the powers which seek to establish a commercial monopoly in their own favor that even a monopoly can be too dearly purchased at such a price as, to all appearances, they will have to pay."

RUSSIA AND THE DARDANELLES.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 2—An Odessa correspondent says the real danger of allowing four unarmed Russian torpedo boats to pass the Dardanelles lies in the establishment of a precedent, which would constitute an enormous danger to Turkey's inviolability. The four torpedo boats are simply a mask for the establishment of a desired precedent. If they are allowed to pass without protest from the signatories of the treaty of half a century ago, of which one clause was framed to prohibit such proceedings, there is no reason why four Russian cruisers, minus guns and stores and flying commercial flag should not be allowed to enter the Black Sea tomorrow.

TIRED OF BOER HEROISM TALK.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 2—The press of Vienna, says a correspondent, has so far failed to support the Berlin newspapers regarding Emperor William. The truth is that the public is getting a little tired of the everlasting theme of Boer heroism.

London, Oct. 2.—The Government has made an agreement not only with the Cunard Line, but also with the American combine. Mr. Gerald Balfour, President of the Board of Trade, disclosed the facts yesterday in a speech at Sheffield. He said that by an arrangement with Mr. Morgan, the general deficit was to ensure that the British companies in the combination would remain British, not merely in name, but in reality. A majority of the directors were to be British subjects, the ships were to fly the British flag, be officered by British subjects, and manned by a reasonable proportion of British seamen. The British Government, on its side, undertook that these lines should be treated the same as other British companies.

As regards the future, the combination has undertaken that at least half the tonnage built for it should be built for the British companies, and be under the British flag. The agreements with the Cunard Company and Mr. Morgan were for twenty years. In the case of the Atlantic shipping combination, the period of twenty years could be prolonged by either side giving five years' notice.

Some of the evening papers were not so enthusiastic over the arrangement as the morning press. Sir Alfred Jones, President of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, and head of the Elder-Dempster Steamship Company, in speaking at the West India Club last night said that the Government had been able to do a very bold stroke, and the Cunard Company deserved it. As far as he was concerned as an outside shipper, he and many others felt that they had been left out in the cold, but that did not matter, so long as the agreement with the Cunard Company was in the interests of the nation.

The Morgan combine has been incorporated at Trenton, N.J., as the International Mercantile Marine Company with an authorized capital of $120,000,000, of which one-half is to be preferred stock, with 6 per cent. cumulative dividend. The Company is also authorized to issue $75,000,000 of 4 1-2 per cent. bonds.

"Our advice to you is to get in as much soft coal as you can. The situation is extremely serious. This is no bluff." Thus writes a big American coal firm to a Toronto dealer. Reports received from various centres indicate that the situation is gradually becoming worse, so far as power to fill orders is concerned. Prices in Toronto are practically prohibitory, so far as the masses of the people are concerned. There is no uniformity in quotations, the range being from $7 to $9. Hardwood continues to sell at $9 to $10 per cord in limited quantities. Soft wood from $5 to $7 per cord, according to quality.

Toronto coal merchants are now awaiting anxiously and hopefully the result of the conference at Washington today between President Roosevelt and presidents of the coal companies interested. No one dares to prophesy as to the outcome.

Montreal, Oct. 2—In speaking of the Canadian Pacific's departure in establishing a line of freight boats on the Atlantic, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy said:

"When the subject of an improved Atlantic service between Great Britain and Canada was receiving consideration in London your directors thought it wise to submit to the Canadian Government, on behalf of the Company, a proposal to provide what they believe to be the best and most practicable service under existing conditions. The company offered, subject to certain traffic arrangements to establish a weekly service of twenty-knot steamers between Liverpool and a St. Lawrence port during the summer months, Halifax to be the Canadian port during the winter months, for a subsidy of £285,000 sterling per annum during the first ten years, with a graduated reduction in the amount of subsidy during each of the two following period of five years, the ships to be most modern in every respect, and to be built specially for the route. In addition to this, the company signified its willingness to furnish a fleet of modern freight steamers of 10,000 tons' capacity each, sailing at a speed of about twelve or thirteen knots per hour, serving Canadian ports. Up to the present time your directors have no information as to the policy likely to be adopted by the Government.

C. P. R. Has Been Hampered.

"It is evident, however, that whatever may be the outcome of the negotiations for the fast mail service the rapid growth of your export tonnage and the necessity of being in a position to meet the rates of any of your competitors make it imperative that your company be so situated on the Atlantic that it can quote through rates of freight and give through bills of lading without being compelled to negotiate for space and rates with independent steamship lines

"To that end there will be submitted for your approval a resolution authorising the directors to make arrangements for the charter or control of vessels, if and when, in their opinion they are required for protection of the company's freight interests on the Atlantic ocean. It is not expected, of course, that these freight vessels, when provided, will receive any Government subsidy, and therefore there will be no restrictions to prevent your company from running them between such ports as may best suit the purposes of the company."

Cattle Ships Needed.

The necessity of an Atlantic fleet to care for the C.P.R.'s export trade is seen by the condition of the cattle business today. The reports from Winnipeg to the effect that cattle shipments are being diverted to Portland and Boston, owing to the high rates charged by the Canadian Pacific, is not borne out by Montreal cattlemen, who claim that if cattle are not shipped from this report it is simply because there is not sufficient tonnage to carry the freight offered. Messrs. Gordon, Ironside, and Farr, who are admitted to be the largest shippers of Canadian cattle to Liverpool, London and Glasgow, said today: "There has never been a question of difficulty with the C.P.R. If we are shipping to Boston and Portland today, it is simply because we cannot secure tonnage by the St. Lawrence. Conditions are changing here. The Allans, and other lines, who formerly catered to the cattle trade, are today looking toward a passenger business, and consequently we have to look for cattle freighters elsewhere."

Messrs. Robert Bickerdike and Co., who represent some of the largest shippers, including D. J. Wilson, of Maple Creek, N.W.T., H. A. Mullin, and others, say: "The trouble is Canadian shippers cannot get tonnage here. The shipments of Canadian cattle this year have been so heavy that a sharp decline took place yesterday, especially in ranch-fed cattle. All the cattle shipped so far, and this is just about the height of the season, have come over the Canadian Pacific. The tonnage at the port of Montreal has been and is, so inadequate that the Warren, Allan, Dominion and Cunard steamers running out of Boston have all been chartered by Canadian shippers, and even then they cannot accommodate the live stock offering. For September and October this is especially so."

TWO YOUNG LOVERS SUICIDE TOGETHER

He Could Not Marry the Girl He Loved

SO RESOLVED TO END IT ALL

Shocking Tragedy on a Country Road—No Signs of a Struggle Apparent, and Death Was Evidently Welcomed by Both

Special to The Times.

Suffolk, Va., Oct. 1—Putrefying with autumn sun and located by vultures the bodies of R. Banister Mitchell, aged 27, and Miss Mabel Lee, 21 years old, were found last evening in Greenesville County, Virginia, by A. Bascom, former County Treasurer and a negro helper. The couple had left their home in Stony Creek Tuesday morning presumably to get married. They went in a carriage and got out of the village without being seen. The place of death was near Callaville Postoffice, 25 miles from the starting point.

Sweethearts for Years.

Mitchell was the merchant who recently moved to Stony Creek from Jarratts. Mabel Lee was a daughter of E. Lee, also a merchant. They had been sweethearts for several years, but Mabel's parents objected strenuously to the marriage. Having got away the village folk presumed they were married, and a Richmond paper printed a story about their probable marriage in Washington, D.C. The horse was found two days ago seeking grass on which to live. The lovers' bodies were lying side by side on a smoothly spread carriage robe about 200 yards from the road. Mabel was on her left side, her head propped on the left arm, her face turned toward the form of her dead lover. Mitchell was lying on his back, his sightless eyes gazing heavenward. By his side was a 38-caliber gun which told part of the story.

A Remote Locality.

In his pocket was another gun, none of whose chambers were empty. Owing to the remoteness of the place a Coroner could not be got until this afternoon. Dr. Haligan, of Smoky Ordinary, conducted the autopsy. He examined the girl first. There were three bullet holes about her body and one in her head. In Mitchell's pockets were found $634.25 in cash, a gold watch, diamond ring and a bunch of Mabel's love letters. The Coroner decided that Mabel had come to her death as the result of pistol shot wounds inflicted by R. Banister Mitchell, and that he had killed himself. The motive for the double crime is a mystery.

Plan to Prevent Strikes

A New Union Formed which will Put Agitators Out of Business

New York, Oct. 1

King Mitchell and those who rule with an iron rod the laboring masses of the continent, will not favor the new union which has been started in Michigan, and which promises to become a power of good. At a meeting held here last night Charles W. Post, a large manufacturer and employer of labor at Battle Creek, Mich., revealed the formation of the new plan as regards agreements between employers and employes to avoid disputes. It is the formation of a union between the manufacturers and his workers. The plan was as follows:

As large employers of labor your attention is invited to the work now in the hands of a temporary organization, as the result of some conferences between a number of manufacturers and workingmen; the permanent organization will be effected as soon as attorneys can complete the necessary papers and blank forms for membership contracts.

Thousands of workingmen, anxious to earn a living for their families, are prevented by fear of violence or death from fanatics excited to a point of frenzy by labor agitators and law-breakers. Many enterprises and factories would give steady employment to labor if permitted to do so. To meet these conditions and to supply steady work at satisfactory rates and with some assurance of protection to both workmen and employer, a new union has been formed known as the "E. and E. Union" (Employers and Employes.)

Under the ruling of the new union a contract is entered into between the employer and employe for a term of six months or a year at a rate mutually fixed. The employer deposits a satisfactory bond in the hands of the treasurer of the union equal in amount to $25 for every employe, and each employe deposits on each pay day two cents on every dollar of his pay until he has deposited $25 with the treasurer of the union. If the employer does not keep his agreement he forfeits $25 to the employe, and the employe likewise forfeits but of the sum he may have on deposit up to $25 if he fails to keep his contract. The treasurer of the union must deposit the money received in some bank or trust company and give suitable bond for indemnity.

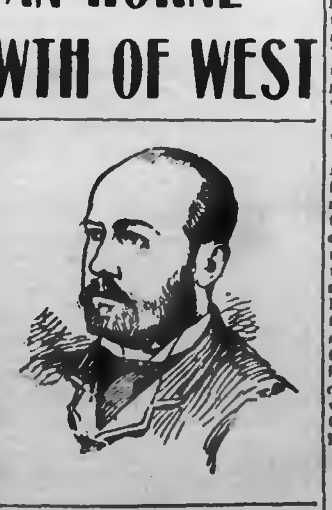
Each employe reserves the right to quit if sick or incapacitated or ill-treated, but shall not quit to obtain higher wages and shall not interfere in any manner with any other employe. The employer reserves the right to dismiss any employe if unfitted or incapable, but shall not discharge any employe to secure labor in his place at a lower price than agreed on for the contract period, and the employer will in no way interfere with the employes seeking work elsewhere.

Neither employer nor employe shall be a member of any federation, union or agreement which by combination or otherwise seeks to force wages up or down.

SIR WILLIAM VAN HORNE ON GROWTH OF WEST

The Rush of Settlers Into the Country is Wonderful

It is a Permanent Movement, and Will Continue



Montreal, Oct. 2—Sir William Van Horne has arrived from a ten days' trip to the coast, and was interviewed by a reporter. He was accompanied on his journey by his secretary, Mr. Linn M. A. Evans, and by General Grenville M. Dodge, the well known railroad builder of the United States. Speaking of his trip to the west, which he had not previously visited for three years, Sir William said:

"I found the Canadian Pacific Railway in fine condition throughout. Practically all of the original temporary structures have disappeared and the greater part of the main line has been relaid with rails of the heaviest description. Extensive additions have been made to the sidings, and there is every facility for handling traffic. The agricultural scenes in the North-West can only be described as magnificent. Indeed, I regard them as matchless. I have never seen anything to equal them and there are marked evidences of prosperity in every section. I was particularly struck with the growth of Winnipeg, Vancouver, and Calgary, both by the splendid character of the new buildings and by their number. I saw hardly a passenger train in the whole Northwest without at least twelve cars on it, and everyone was crowded. The people are coming in from all directions, and the indications are that the next year's movement will be vastly larger than this year.

"Is there plenty of homestead land to be had by settlers?"

"The homestead lands immediately along the railway track have been taken up, but you must remember that the territory is enormous, and that when all the homestead lands are taken up, the population will be numbered by millions, and the railway mileage will be increased tenfold. In Manitoba, I suppose, practically all the homestead lands have been taken up and practically all of the railroad lands have been sold. This is also largely true of Eastern Assiniboia, but as you go further west, of course, the unoccupied areas increase.

"Do you think the influx of population will be steady this time, or will there be a setback as there was some years ago?"

"I regard this as a permanent movement. It is not stimulated by speculation as the earlier movement was. The great majority of the people are coming with the intention of remaining permanently as farmers, and not for the purpose of buying up lands for an advance. The greater part of them are people from Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, and others of the better western States, who have been successful, who originally bought their lands very cheaply, or took up homesteads, which they are now able to sell at very high prices, and who are coming to the Canadian North-West to repeat this operation. They are all coming with enough money to make a start in a large and substantial way.

"Do they bring any dislike of the railway with them?"

"O, there is not dislike of the railroad. That is only on the surface. The people up there have good sense. They do not sympathize with the views you hear from idle sprouters. The people up there who are most prominent in fault finding are more or less concerned in politics, and they think it gives them more political strength to pretend to be antagonistic to corporations. The Canadian Pacific Company pays no attention to this class, but pursues its long settled policy, believing that this course will secure and hold the good will of the best part of the community that part whose good will is worth having."

The Agonizing Pains of Rheumatism

Swollen, aching joints, muscles are stiff and sore, every movement accompanied by pain. The most potent remedy is Polson's Nerviline, which has five times the pain-subduing power of any other preparation. Apply the Nerviline copiously, rub it on well and then bind in a hot flannel bandage. This will cure the worst case in a short time. Try Nerviline for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica or Lumbago—it's all right and only costs a quarter.

TURKEY ORDERS OUT HER MILITARY RESERVES

Big Effort Being Made to Suppress the Macedonian Revolt

Probable War Between Russia and Turkey—Serious Condition of Affairs in the Balkans

London, Oct. 3 — Reminiscences have dangerous tendencies among the Balkans. While the Russians and Bulgarians have been fighting sham battles in the Shinka Pass in commemoration of the victories over Sulman Pasha twenty-five years ago, a formidable insurrection has broken out in Macedonia, and the Turkish Government has called out 40,000 reserves to suppress it. The magnitude of precautionary measures is the principal evidence of the seriousness of this new Eastern crisis, for the rebels have found a leader in a veteran officer of the old-time Bulgarian army but have not yet reported in great force. They are operating in the mountainous districts along the Servian and Bulgarian frontiers, and are in a position to retreat, if hard pressed, into friendly territory. The Turkish Government, knowing how much dry timber is awaiting the touch of the flame among the excitable mountaineers of Macedonia and Albany, is evidently forewarned and thoroughly alarmed, and the revolt will be stamped out by the weight of numerous battalions before the Servians and Bulgarians have time for holding sympathetic meetings and supplying recruits.

New York, October, 3 — The situation in Macedonia bears a striking resemblance to that in Bulgaria just previous to the outbreak of the Turko-Servian war in 1876. There are the same partial risings calling for suppression except that the Turkish Government, instead of leaving the matter in the hands of the local authorities, as it did then, under the advice of the Russian Ambassador, Gen. Ignatieff, has sent a large force of troops into the country and has just called out thirty-eight batallions of Kedifs, or regular reserves. For the moment the reported rising appears to be confined to that part of Macedonia comprised of the triangle formed by a line drawn from Salonica to Monastir, toward the northwest, another from Monastir toward the junction of the Servian and Bulgarian frontiers and the third from that point to Salonica. The whole of that tract is mountainous.

The Turkish force actually in Macedonia is estimated at about one hundred thousand men; but if the insurgents are properly equipped with modern rifles as they probably are, and are skilfully led, it will have to be largely reinforced. No doubt sympathizers from Bulgaria will find their way across the frontier to swell the insurgent ranks; and the Turkish Government will be lucky if it does not have to deal with the Greeks in the south and the Servians in the north at the same time. The attitude of the Albanians, too, is of consequence, and also that of Montenegro, should the Slavs of Novi-Bazar and Old Servia take up arms. It is at this point that the policy of Austria will have to develop itself, while Italy looks after Albania.

Since the Russian invasion to Turkey in 1828, it has become a superstition at Constantinople that there should be a war between Russia and Turkey every quarter of a century. As the last was in 1877, the next is about due, and recent events in the Black Sea and what is going on in Macedonia and Armenia seem to be its harbingers.

POLITICAL OUTLOOK IS VERY OMINOUS

Hon. Mr. Tarte Said to Be Aiming to Succeed Sir Wilfrid Laurier

Ottawa, Oct. 3—It is no exaggeration to say that the political situation has not been more interesting since 1867 than it is today. The South African war has profoundly modified the relations between the Colony and Great Britain and the members of the Dominion Cabinet are at sixes and sevens among themselves on the tariff question. It is well known also that health of the Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, is precarious and may at an early date cause his retirement from office. It is to this that the present activity of Mr. Tarte, the Minister of Public Works, is attributed.

It is commonly supposed that Mr. Tarte is aiming at the succession to the Premiership, and in order to unite Canadians of all races and origins in supporting him he is going about over Ontario and other Provinces, carrying on a vigorous campaign in favor of a high protective tariff. It is hardly necessary to say that he is meeting with enthusiastic support from the industrial interests everywhere, and to a considerable extent from that section of the agricultural community dependent on the industrial; but there is a strong opposition on the part of several of his colleagues in the Cabinet, and hesitation among the agriculturalists of Ontario whose products are exported to outside markets.

What the issue of the present crisis will be cannot yet be foreseen. No one seems to know whether Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who is still in Europe, approves of his colleague's activity and programme, or whether it may not be that he is profiting by it to obtain favorable terms in his negotiations with the French, Swiss and Italian governments for Canadian products. Be this as it may, Mr. Tarte himself acknowledges no relation between his advocacy of a high tariff and the commercial negotiations with the European Continental countries named.

KEENE.

—The annual fall fair held here on Tuesday and Wednesday was very successful, though the attendance was not quite up to former years on account of the threatening weather in the morning. The boats brought in about 200 from Hastings and points on the lake. The display of fruits, vegetables, ladies' work, etc., in the main building, was exceptionally large. There were not quite as many horses and cattle shown as last year. Gough and Grafton had large exhibits. The candy men did a rushing business during the afternoon. The directors are thinking of buying the grounds and putting up a grand stand and sheds for horses and cattle.

—We are sorry to learn that Sergt. Fred. Burnham, of the 46th met with an accident at the military camp at Niagara.

—Mrs. John Gillespie, an old resident of Otonabee, died in Peterborough on Sunday and was buried in the Pine Grove Cemetery, Keene.

—Mrs. Roach, who has been quite ill, has recovered sufficiently to be around again.

—Mr. G. N. Smalley, of Boston, Mass., is at the Lake for the duck shooting.

—We are glad to learn that Mr. T. G. Wallace is to remain here as principal of the public school, at an increased salary.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

With the single exception of flaxseed, which is almost an absolute failure, Russia's crops for the present season are the largest that country has produced, in any year during the last ten, according to a report to the State Department at Washington from Consul Heenan, at Odessa.

The Father of Arbor Day, Hon. J. Sterling Morton, of Nebraska, is to have a monument erected to his memory. The institution of Arbor Day, says the Baltimore News, was one of the happiest possible inspirations—begun in a very modest way, and perhaps with some misgivings, and in a few years spreading over every part of the country. Mr. Morton did a great deal for the cause of the trees, and his services well merit this form of recognition. From Morton's inspiration came "Arbor Day" in Ontario, set apart in our laws, but the law is "a dead one" for any practical outcome.

It is explained that the falling out of Commander Peary and Dr. Diedrick, of the last Arctic expedition, was due to incompatibility of temper, exacerbated by the long nights, "the cold and darkness of which are bound to tell on the nerves." The arctic night lasts for 160 days each. Another reason for the quarrel was that Peary put the doctor in charge of the natives under his command, and afterwards gave the job to Mat Henson, a colored man, a distant connection of the old gentleman who sat for Mrs. Stowe's portrait of "Uncle Tom." Diedrick thereat roused himself and camped among the natives in Smith's Sound until Peary's return from his arduous pursuit of the North Pole.

TIMES LETTER BOX.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

To the Editor of "Morning Times:"

Sir,—In reply to Mr. A. F. Rose's letter in the Times of Sept. 25, which contain a good many misstatements, I can do not better than quote from a letter written to the Philadelphia "Press" in regard to the refusal of a judge there to grant the Christian Scientists a charter for their church, by Mr. Alfred Farlow, of Boston, of the Publication committee of the Mother Church of Christian Science in that city, who says, in part:

"Christian Scientists do not attempt to conceal the fact that 'Science and Health' is sold at the ordinary price of such books, but the fact must not be overlooked that a profit is given to the retailer and a liberal commission to the publisher, so that the price of the book is only part profit to its author. The first edition of 'Science and Health' brought Mrs. Eddy no profit whatever. Thereafter, for a considerable period she paid for the publication of the book and gave her students 50 per cent. of their sales.

"The records show that Mrs. Eddy has given to the church more than the entire profit from the sales of her books. Nearly all of those who have purchased 'Science and Health' are students of Christian Science, are identified with the Christian Science movement and therefore direct beneficiaries of Mrs. Eddy's funds. It is safe to assume that very little has come into this movement from outsiders.

Since the Christian Science cause draws only from its own people, how can it be looked upon as an institution for profit? The individual work of those who give their time exclusively to healing the sick do so independently of the church, and this feature of the Christian Science work could not be considered testimony in favor of the claim that the church is a business enterprise any more than the practice of an M. D. who is a member of the church and who is practicing in keeping with what his church considers the proper method of curing the sick would be regarded as evidence that his church is a money-making institution. Those who volunteer to be guardians of the Christian Science movement and who deem it their duty or privilege to publish Mrs. Eddy's private affairs should at least confine themselves to the facts, and she alone can give them.

"The price of tuition in the Massachusetts Metaphysical College was $300 and was never raised to $400. Even the fee of $300 was not exacted. A very large per cent. were indigent students who had nothing to pay. Husband and wife were always taken for one tuition and a very large per cent. of the students came in pairs. Another large per cent. because of limited financial ability, were taught free of charge. Mrs. Eddy has said many times, 'I might have been a millionaire, but I would never be that while so many people are poor,' and those who know her generosity can bear testimony to this fact. I am informed by her bookkeeper that she gives away annually large sums to private charities and it is quite well known to the public that she is always ready to contribute to public enterprises. Mrs. Eddy's bookkeeper informs me that Mrs. Eddy's annual contributions have sometimes amounted to $20,000.00.

"Summing up this matter we would say Mrs. Eddy has never shown any disposition to be mercenary, and estimating the situation from the knowledge which they have of her department in the past, Christian Scientists are thoroughly convinced that Mrs. Eddy cares nothing for money except to do good with it and that her fortune is considered by her as a fund to be used in the propagation of her much cherished ideas and for worthy charities.

"Mrs. Eddy, according to the records, preached a number of years in the Christian Science church, during which time she contributed in small amounts far more than she received for her service. Though having made large contributions to her church, she has virtually received from it only a few hundred dollars. At the present time she is the only unpaid employee in the church and gives to it more of her time than any other. She closed her college just at the time when large numbers were clamoring for admission and thus gave up what would have brought her a very large income.

"The Christian Science periodicals were Mrs. Eddy's property. All these she has given to the church, and at the present time they yield a liberal income. She has studiously thrust aside many legitimate means of accumulating wealth. No one could possibly take all of these matters into careful, intelligent and fair consideration without concluding that the noble and illustrious leader of the Christian Science movement is entirely controlled by the desire to Christianize the world through the scientific interpretation of Christ's teaching and that a petition for a charter on the part of a branch church of this denomination is for the purpose of aiding in this exalted mission."

Referring to the annual receipts of the Mother Church, he continues:

"It should be remembered that the Mother Church is the governing body of the entire Christian Science movement and necessarily incurs a very considerable expense. But why should it concern the public how the Christian Scientists manage their own affairs and use their own money?"

And commenting on the position taken by the Judge, he says:

"I shall not declare that the Pennsylvania Judge has been governed by prejudice, but will assume that his desire is to be just and that he has labored under misapprehensions. That Mrs. Eddy once advised that the Bible and her books should, during a period of one year, be the only teachers of Christian Science; that she recommended that these be largely circulated; that she went so far as to indicate that those who did not appreciate and act according to this plan were not in reality Christian Scientists and not worthy to continue as members of the Christian Science denomination, could not be intelligently considered sufficient reasons for the charge that the Christian Science Church is conducted for profit.

"Even though it should be true that it is managed in such a way asto aid its is managed in such a way as to aid its motive of this would have to be settled before the charge of working for profit could be sustained; and we have already shown that the individuals who have benefitted Mrs. Eddy by purchasing and selling her books have been the direct beneficiaries of the profits accruing to her. Thus it may be noted that the Pennsylvania Judge in this instance has not based his action altogether upon evidence, but has judged in matters which involve the conscience of Christian Scientists and concerning which God alone is able to give a just decision.

"A large portion of religious denominations, both Protestant and Catholic, in our cities sell sittings. Because of this a Judge might assume that such institutions are conducted for the sole purpose of profit through the hiring of pews.

"There are book concerns in connection with most religious denominations and most of the members of these denominations either buy or sell the commodities of these concerns. It is not unlikely that individual members of such organizations who should work against these concerns or refuse to acknowledge their usefulness, by word or by error, of commission or omission, would be considered unfit for membership and liable to expulsion. Many churches resort to selling tickets for lectures and entertainments for the purpose of obtaining funds. Many organizations have fairs and thus enter into mercantile business and yet, so far as I know, no Judge has ever taken these matters into consideration in the granting of a charter nor declared such ractice illegal.

"A charter is refused under the weak excuse that the societies petitioning therefore are doing so for profit. The only testimony offered is that the leader of the Christian Science movement sells books to its members for a profit and indicated that a lack of due appreciation of the importance of circulating the Bible and the Christian Science book disqualifies a professing Christian Scientist for membership in the Christian Science Church. And this refusal is made in the face of the fact that she gives this profit back to the church. If this decision should become a precedent it would be difficult for any religious organization to obtain a charter; for where technicalities, prejudice, and misapprehension maintain it is not difficult to find an excuse for rejecting a petition."

Thanking you for your courtesy in this matter, I remain, yours respectfully,

C. R. MUNRO.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers
Fortune's Spor. Miss Nobody,
Her Royal Highness Lady
Mary of the Dark
House, etc.

pushed the door shut, and, locking it in the same instant, stood still, panting, her forehead damp under the stage make-up.

"How's the piece going, miss?" asked a meek voice, and, hearing it, Winifred started. It was the "dresser" employed in the theater who assisted such ladies as had no maids of their own, and had helped Winifred to get into her costume for the first act. The girl had forgotten her existence, but instantly she controlled herself as well as she could.

"Going? Going?" she repeated vaguely, for the woman's question had scarcely conveyed an idea to her mind. "Oh—I'm ill! I don't know what I shall do."

"Have a drop of brandy, miss. I'll send out for you," suggested the dresser, accustomed to such emergencies. "You'll be all right."

"No, no," exclaimed Winifred. "I don't want anything. And—I shan't need you. You can go and help somebody else."

"Well, miss, if you're sure, there's plenty as wants me," answered the woman. "But I thought I'd be here ready, as I'd been tendin' so much to the others at first. There's your new costume, miss, out of the box. I thought you'd like to have it put out and save time."

She pointed, and Winifred saw something pale and pink and glimmering hanging over the back of a chair. For a few seconds after the dresser had softly unlocked the door and departed, she stood looking at the delicately tinted, formless mass, half dazedly; then she sprang forward and snatched it up in both hands.

What she held was a complete suit of silk fleshings, made to cover the entire body; and Winifred dropped it to the floor with a little choking cry of disgust, as if the thing had been a snake and writhed under the touch of her fingers. Then she covered her face with her hands and stood quivering.

"Maseppa, ple-ase!" the call-boy shouted. Winifred did not hear.

Five minutes passed, and she had not moved. She was thinking—thinking, when a thundering knock at the door tore away the dark veil of thought in which her spirit had wrapped itself.

"Miss Gray, what's the matter? Good gracious, they're waiting for you on the stage." It was the voice of Jeffrey, the stage-manager.

"I can't go on with the part," she answered, brokenly. "Something has happened. I've been cheated — deceived."

"Nonsense!" he ejaculated, desperately, and pushed open the door. "Who would have thought you were one of the hysterical kind? Come on, Miss Gray; you've got to come on."

"I can't," she panted. "I can't."

His answer was to catch her round the waist and pull her out through the open door. "You must be mad," he stuttered. "I'll have to force you. You've got to play. Make a row afterwards if you must. Do you want to ruin us all—Wantage, and every man and woman in the company? Come along; I tell you the stage is waiting."

Roughly he pushed her into the proper entrance. Again she was blind, giddy, distracted. Everything swam round her for a moment, and then she knew that she had been sent staggering on to the stage, every eye in the house upon her.

All the actress in her n[illegible] rose and mastered shame and des[illegible]. She found herself answering her cues, saying her lines, going through the stereotyped stage-business. There were two selves that fought together—one raging with a wild rebellion against the vile plot which had trapped her; another that was like a cold, unfeeling piece of stage mechanism wound up to do a certain thing, and insisting upon doing it though the world rocked.

So the end of the act came, and there was applause from the audi[illegible]ce and the clapping of a pair of hands in a box.

Winifred was half carried off the stage by some one of the actors who saw that she was scarcely conscious of what she did. He held her as the applause went on, growing louder, and supported her before the curtain in response to a "call."

Whether the old-fashioned play were to be a success or not, the audience was taking it kindly. Out in front they were talking of a certain poster, and wondering if it were possible that the real scene and costume would resemble it, when Maseppa should appear bound to the horse.

Behind the curtain, Maseppa was being carried in a dead faint to her dressing-room.

Marmaduke Wantage—called to consultation—and the stage-manager were both in a state bordering upon desperation. "She's shamming—the little fiend!" Jeffrey hissed. "She'd go to any lengths to get out of it. Better not have kept so dark about the scene, and have had your row out with her beforehand. Cat! Idiot! Prude! What's to be done now?"

"Tell the dresser to get the things on to her someh[illegible] while she's unconscious, and take everything else away. Then you'll have her on the horse and out on the stage before she knows what's happened to her," answered Wantage, furiously, his face darkly flushed.

He was not in his "backer's" secrets, but he had some suspicion that he had been beckoned from his obscurity for a very special reason. There were other men whose names and reputation would have been of far more value to the revival of this ancient play than his; and, high salary or low salary, it was all one to Mr. Macaire, if he chose to amuse himself by paying a huge bribe to buy off a pantomime at the Thespian Theater of Brighton, and put on a musty old piece which everyone else had forgotten thirty or forty years ago.

After a while Wantage had begun shrewdly to guess that there was method of some sort in the millionaire's seeming madness, and presently to realize that the whole production was but a gigantic bait to lure one pretty little fish.

But that discovery mattered nothing to him. He had got his chance to be in the swim again, and he was earning more money in a few weeks than he had been able to beg or borrow during the years in which he had been down under the deep waters. Marmaduke Wantage was utterly unscrupulous where he had any advantage to gain for himself. Lionel Macaire had chosen his man well. And now Wantage was determined that his patron's mysterious scheme, whatever it might be (exactly what it really was he had never been quite sure), should not fail

John Dundas was Arrested Yesterday on a Serious Charge

John Dundas, who was to have officiated as groomsman at a wedding to-day, was arrested on a charge of having obtained a suit of clothes from P. Simons & Co., by false pretences. It appears that Dundas ordered the suit, and when they were ready to deliver he came and presented an order which purported to be signed by Mr. Felix Brownscombe, Town Treasurer, stating that the town owed him $25, alleging it to be the usual South African grant to volunteers. Mr. Simons soon found out the swindle and Dundas was at once arrested. He will face the Magistrate this morning.

A PROSPECTIVE INDUSTRY

A Large American Machinery Company to Locate in Canada

As The Times mentioned several days ago the Aultman, Taylor Company, of Peoria, Ill., manufacturers of farm implements have decided to establish a considerable size branch of their business in Ontario. Mr. C. C. Marcum, first vice-president, and Mr. C. D. Mays, chief constructor of the company, who were in Toronto for several days last week, said that the industrial situation in Canada fully warranted the company in deciding to manufacture separators and engines in this country. The price of land in Toronto and vicinity, however, was too high for them, and they would locate in a smaller place, where they could perhaps get a donation of land. They hoped to begin manufacturing in Canada early next year. There was a growing tendency among the American manufacturers to locate branches in Canada for the manufacture of goods to be sold in this country. Cheaper labor, less inclination to engage in strikes, the present tariff and the talk of Canada raising the tariff on manufactured goods were responsible. If the tariff were raised the American manufacturers would be in difficulties unless they had plants in Canada.

As a side line Doc buys furs and ginseng and turns a neat penny in that way.

In Addition to Treasury Assistance

New York, Oct. 2.—Dividends and interest due in October amount to a great deal of over eighty one million dollars, exclusive of Government interest, which has been anticipated by Secretary Shaw. This amount was figured at twenty million, but probably only about sixty per cent. of that amount will be called for. There will naturally be some shifting of loans consequent of these payments, but the money will be immediately available again. We have undoubtedly turned that corner in a very nasty market situation. The probabilities are that a first-class panic would have been raging on Tuesday last had the secretary not come to the front as he did. Values have been temporarily slaughtered, and though recoveries would have been sharp and speedy, many people would have been compelled to let go, regardless of price, while even the foundation of some of the pools would have been severely shaken.

After the episode of last week it will be perfectly natural for the market to be fitful, feverish and erratic; many unexplainable ups and downs will be recorded, prices alternately weak then strong. Such markets afford splendid training opportunities for the cool and sagacious. Conditions are such at present that one can trade with a pretty general certainty that should be for the time long of anything which declined in their hands, that a few days will bring prices back so he will have no loss. Looking along the line of stocks these remarks would seem to apply generally to all of them. There has not been a time in over a year when it was so much to the interest of the cliques and greater powers of Wall Street to assist in the work of rebuilding values as at present. Their immense holdings make this logically imperative. We can therefore bend upon their assistance in again advancing prices, and rely upon their support to the market for a long time to came. Had the treasury not acted as it did it would have taken from two to three weeks for the money situation to have improved. As matters now stand it should and will improve immediately. Fortunately for all concerned the wealthy men were the principal shareholders. Public interest was small, consequently values will mend more rapidly than they otherwise would do.

New York, Oct. 2.—The market opened off fractionally, then first advanced under leadership of P. R. S. and C. F. I. Both of these stocks show strong indications of going materially higher. The latter was very firm when the market was at its worst, not selling as low as it did previous to the decline, while the former to-day is actually four points higher that the best previous high price. Wm. A. Nash, chairman of the Clearing House committee, has issued a circular to the members of the Clearing house giving the following form as the one to be used the coming Saturday, and thereafter until further notice in reporting the bank statements: Average amounts of loan and discount, average amount of specie, average amount of Legal Tender notes. Average amount of Deposits other than United States, average amount of United States Deposits average amount of circulation. This method of computation will be more satisfactory, inasmuch as it affords a more comprehensive view of monetary conditions. Money closed at 6 per cent. Total sales 801,700.

HARRINGTON, former Superintendent Quincy Mines, Pary City Utah, which paid in dividends last year $1,250,000 (see Engineering and Mining Journal) promises to make "La Plata" a second Quincy within six months. No Further Offering of this stock will be made when this allotment is placed, as the company will then have all capital needed to make it self-supporting and a large dividend earner.

IT IS NOT OFTEN that you have an opportunity to secure stock of this character at such a price, one that will pay dividends within a year.

Company owns 600 acres of Mineral Land, including the Town site of "La Plata," and water power. Should Mr Harrington's predictions be fulfilled $10 per share will look cheap for this stock. Send all orders and checks to

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS

Furnished House to Rent

No. 7 Walton Street, containing 7 rooms with bath and electric light. Apply on premises to C. CLEMENCE.

The Opera House Last Night

The Opera House was comfortably seated last night with the elite of the town when "Rupert of Hentzau" was presented. The characters were all well sustained, and the large audience were delighted with the performance.

The Coal Situation

The local coal situation is unchanged. Mayor Deane has not yet received a reply to his letter to Ottawa, referred to in The Times of yesterday. Hard coal is $15 a ton, and very little to be had at that figure, while soft coal sells at $8. There is a strong feeling in New York and elsewhere that the strike will end in a day or two. Mr. J. M. Brooks yesterday paid $7.50 for a cord of sawed hardwood.

Colonel Hughes Reports

Winnipeg Telegram:—Col. Sam. Hughes, M.P., is at the Clarendon, en route for Prince Albert and Edmonton. Interviewed, the member for North Victoria regretted that time would not permit him to accept Mr. Borden's invitation to join the party in the tour; but on another occasion he would be heard in the west. The Colonel leaves on the evening train to-night for the west.

Turning Down the Doctors

The marvelous cures of Catarrhozone are being much talked about. Thousands are daily recognizing the exceptional merit of this simple inhaler treatment, and instead of running to the doctor with their winter ills they protect themselves by Catarrhozone; it kills colds in the head in ten minutes, quickly relieves Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Lung Troubles, and cures even though all other remedies have failed. Catarrhozone is very pleasant, safe and convenient to use. Its best recommendation is its enormous sale; try it to-day. Price $1.00, small size 25c., at Druggists.

To the Old Quarters

Mr. W. G. Howden, whose premises were destroyed by fire in January last, and who was forced to secure temporary premises, is back to his old stand, 410 George street, which has been handsomely fitted up for him. The new store has all the latest fixtures in the way of pretty hardwood tables with marble slabs, a huge refrigerator, combination light and gas fixtures, and, in fact, all that is necessary for an up-to-date butcher shop. "Billy's" many friends will be pleased to see this evidence of prosperity.

Company Wound Up

The Peterborough Waterworks Company is no longer in existence. Though its business was turned over to the town at the beginning of the year, and was placed in the control of a board of three commissioners, it was not wound up till yesterday, when all accounts were adjusted and the shareholders received their final cheque from the secretary of the Company. The old Company performed heroic work in the dark days when the receipts and expenses were far apart. To the energetic Secretary and Mr. McKee, one of the directors, is perhaps due the honor of carrying the undertaking through to a successful issue.

Thrilling Experience

The other evening while returning from the Keene fair, Prof. R. Begley, advertising agent for Gough Bros., met with an accident which he will remember for some time. It seems while coming down a steep grade the other side of Zion one of the wheels suddenly came off, which caused the entire load to be thrown into the ditch, with the Prof. on the bottom, who received a bad gash in his left foot, and a severe shaking up. The road was completely blocked for some time with clothing, boxes and advertising matter. Help was secured from some of the neighboring farmers, who set the rig up in running order, and all landed home safely a few hours afterward. It is to be hoped the Prof. will be around in a few days.

Coal Killed Him.

The following lines were sent to The Times for publication. They tell their own story:

As the weather grows cold
And people are told
That coal will come in bye and bye;
Local dealers look wise,
Hold their coal for a rise
And smile to themselves on the sly.

A man in town
Whose name is Brown
Had a ton of coal to pay;
When he saw the bill
He swallowed a pill
And died the very next day.

POLICE COURT

John Dundas was Given Three Months by Magistrate Dumble

There were two cases disposed of at the Police Court yesterday morning.

A young man was fined $2 for being drunk.

John Dundas was given three months in jail on the charge of obtaining a suit of clothes from T. Simons under false pretenses.

THE PIGEON CREEK BRIDGE

The County Council and Others Inspect the Bridge Yesterday

Yesterday a committee of the County Council consisting of Warden Eastland and Messrs. Wm. Anderson, R. Crow, W. Casement, G. W. Fitzgerald, R. Shaw and P. Castello, accompanied by County Engineer Belcher and Town Engineer Hay, drove out to Pigeon Creek to inspect the bridge. A committee from Victoria County joined them, and a conference took place in regard to placing the bridge in good condition.

This bridge is in bad shape, and will require a considerable sum to renew it. There is a feeling amongst the members of the County Council that a permanent work should be undertaken but the matter will have to be threshed out at the next meeting of that body. Just how much each municipality will be asked to contribute has not yet been decided. This town will not feel like going down very deep into its pocket for an expenditure outside the town limits.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—Doctors say it is not healthy to live in houses overheated.

—The committee on appointments of the Town Council met last night.

—Rev. Mr. Yule, of Bethany, preached in the lecture Room of St. Paul's church last night.

—It is said that there was only a matter of $300 between the highest and the lowest tender for the new skating rink.

—Rev. Dr. Potts, of Toronto, will preach in Charlotte st. church next Sunday morning, and in George st. Church at night in the interests of the Educational Society.

—A Toronto Magistrate has formally decided that a man's home is where his wife lives. And that's just why a lot of men hate to go home when it gets real late.

—Hamilton Spectator:— Peterboro people, who once lived in Hamilton, but were led away, have formed a Hamilton Old Boys' club, and are coming to see us as soon as we invite them. This is too kind.

—There's a preacher in Peterborough who is a cheerful sort of joker. He asked a young girl for a special subscription for the church the other day, but she said she couldn't give because she had to buy her winter clothes. The man of the cloth made reply that it wasn't impossible that before winter was over she would be in a place so warm that she wouldn't need winter clothes. Wasn't that nice?

—This great family journal is in receipt of a circular from a gentleman up west who desires to trade a piece of land for a newspaper. This g. f. j. could not think of taking to the growing of pumpkins, and raising ducklings and cabbage and all that, instead of directing the destinies of this large and increasing community. Land is worth more than newspapers, but the editor of this paper is on earth partly for enjoyment, and a fellow can have too much fun with a newspaper to trading it off for something that would bring him nothing but wealth.

STEP BY STEP

Coffee Gets In Its Fine Work

Watch coffee drinkers and observe that practically every one of them has some form of incipient or fixed disease.

Mrs. F. N. Wright, of San Francisco, Cal., tells her experience: "I was 20 years old before I ever knew the taste of coffee, and before I commenced drinking it, I never was troubled in the least with constipation, but after drinking coffee for one year I became constipated to such a degree that I had to resort to drugs to overcome it.

After three years drinking coffee, I had cultivated a chronic state of constipation and other annoying symptoms became manifest. The first thing in the morning, I had a headache come on, a feeling of nausea, and these symptoms would persist until I had drunk a quantity of coffee. At first, I did not associate these symptoms with the habit of coffee drinking. I thought my system must be run down, and I felt glad that coffee, instead of prescribed drugs would relieve the weakness. Like many people, I did not reason from cause to effect.

About this time I had an elderly nurse in my employ, who complained every morning of similar symptoms, and when I suggested mineral water, etc., to her for her biliousness, she said, "Nothing in the world but my coffee will relieve me, when I feel so badly." My husband began to complain, if he did not get his coffee at a certain time, of queer sensations in the stomach and head. I became alarmed at these coincidences, and came to the conclusion that coffee had as strong a hold on us as whiskey has with the veriest drunkard. About this time I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, and the two doctors who attended me told me I would have to stop drinking coffee or remain a cripple, as they could not treat me if I persisted in using a drug stronger than the drug I needed.

My husband and I agreed to try an experiment and commenced the use of Postum Food Coffee. The effect was marvelous and taught us some valuable truths, and now we would not touch a cup of coffee for anything. His business demands the utmost concentration of brain force continuously. He now looks like a new man; he has had no headaches or bilious attacks for some months, and digests all his food without any distress. I feel sure that he would have been a wreck if he had kept on with coffee.

After I began using Postum, I soon recovered from my attack of rheumatism, and in a few weeks I could walk about again. I am no longer troubled with constipation, headaches, nausea or rheumatism. I firmly believe that the continued use of coffee becomes in time as hurtful to the human system as alcoholic stimulants. I know my case and my husband's both demonstrate this clearly."

WON THE PRIZE ROD

The Largest Small Mouthed Bass Caught in Ontario

Mr. Arthur Lang, of the Collegiate Institute staff, Galt, son of Mr. Robt. Lang, Water Street, received the following letter from the Toronto Star referring to the large bass he caught when on his holidays at Rice Lake:

"We desire to say that it only remains to satisfy ourselves that your fish is a 'small mouth' bass to award you the prize rod. It is the largest fish entered in the competition this year. What we wish to propose is that you send the mounted fish to us for a few days to be exhibited with the rod in the Star window on Young street. Of course, if you have any objection to this we do not insist upon it, but we know many of those who took part in the competition would like to see the winning fish, and we would like them to see it and be satisfied. It will be returned to you with care.

"Could you send the fish across at once so that we could place the fish and rod in the window and at once announce the result."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature, either by 'phone or in writing.—[Ed. Times]

—Mr. Wm. Casement, of Lakefield, has returned home after a trip to the Northwest.

—Mr. Wm. Galloo, of Apsley, was in town yesterday and gave The Times a call.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The crops in England, except in the northern counties, are a failure, due to the continuous heavy rains. For a large part of the acreage under cultivation in breadstuffs the yield will scarcely repay the harvesting costs. On the Corn Exchange the most pessimistic views prevail. In London the quantity of wheat in stock is not believed to be more than sufficient for a fortnight's consumption, and many of the granaries are said to be quite empty, or nearly so. Of the condition of the farmers, it is said that large numbers are menaced with bankruptcy, and in the case of those working leaseholds, and who have nothing which can be hypothecated for advances the outlook is gloomy indeed. For the glowing accounts of our Northwest harvest these farmers will be in a receptive mood. We want them here!

"No more at present," is heard from M. Pelletan, the French Minister of Marine, whose "light and airy persiflage" over the coffee and cigars at Bizerta, sweeping imagined foes from the face of the Mediterranean, amazed all Europe for the nonce. He has dropped out of current comment, and it is said the Cabinet will meet Parliament with another naval representative, more accustomed than M. Pelletan to being a Minister, with a due sense of responsibility. He is not like our own and only Tarte, whose sayings, aye, whose very vaporings under pressure of conviviality sets his whole party in a flutter. The "kibosh" being put on M. Pelletan, he is no longer a public peril. Even the Germans, whom he qualified with "barbarism and brutality," have conceded the inoffensiveness of such words in the context of "a champagne speech." England, who was in imagination driven back to the straights and the canal, takes her constructive discomfiture with perfect equanimity. Italy has yet to be heard from, but will presumably follow a like course, so no harm is done.

GERMANY WILL NOT OBEY MONROE DOCTRINE

Trouble Feared Over Germanization in South America

New York, October 2— For many years, Germans have been settling in Patagonia, South America. The climate is salubrious and the persons who leave the Fatherland and build houses in that distant country find that they can toil many hours and not undergo fatigue. Within the past decade, considerable capital has been invested by Germans in Patagonian enterprises. With an idea of eventually establishing a protectorate over the country, the German Government has encouraged emigration.

Announcement was recently made, that the German naval station in the West Indies would, in the future, be dignified by a larger establishment. When we consider that the Imperial Government is striving to colonise Patagonia and to secure a better foothold in the West Indies, we are inclined to believe that Emperor William would give little heed to the Monroe Doctrine if he could populate Patagonia with many thousands of his thrifty subjects. In order to offset Germany's attempt to colonise the great country lying south of the Argentine Republic, the Washington authorities should endeavor to attract attention to the finer opportunities which Patagonia offers speculators.

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

Ottawa, Oct., 2.—Mr. George O'Halloran, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, left for Quebec yesterday afternoon to welcome the Boer delegates who are expected to reach that city on the Lake Champlain this evening. The provisional itinerary which has been mapped out provides that the Boers will proceed up the St. Lawrence on the Lake Champlain to Montreal. After a short stop there they will start for the Maritime Provinces, and will visit in succession the Federal Experimental Farm at Nappan, the Provincial Model Farm at Truro and Wolfville, the centre of the fruit-growing district of Nova Scotia. Crossing the Northumberland Straits by steamer, the Dutch visitors will, if time permits, make a tour of Prince Edward Island, in order to glean information as to its farming, pork-packing, stock-raising, and fruit-growing industries. Returning by way of Point Duchene, the Boers will inspect a few points in New Brunswick, and then go on to the upper Provinces. A brief sojourn at Ottawa will inaugurate their Ontario tour, which will embrace visits to the Niagara Peninsula, and the Agricultural College, Guelph. Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture, is to be communicated with at the earliest possible moment, and he has promised that the Boers shall have a trustworthy guide in their movements throughout his Province. From Toronto the Boers will travel by the Northern Railway to North Bay where they will board the C.P.R. for the west. It is in Manitoba and the Territories that most of their time will be spent. This programme, however, is merely tentative, and depends upon the length of time which the Boers have at their disposal. Should they be pressed for time the eastern part of the programme will be curtailed in order to give them sufficient opportunity to thoroughly grasp the resources and capabilities of the west.

Mirth is an almost infallible sign of good health. A sick woman may force a smile or at times be moved to laughter. But when a woman is bubbling over with mirth and merriment she is surely a well woman.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy, by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength. It establishes regularity and so does away with monthly misery. It dries debilitating drains and so cures the cause of much womanly weakness. It heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures the bearing-down pains, which are such a source of suffering to sick women.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for female weakness," writes Mrs. Susannah Permenter, of Pauls Store, Shelby Co., Texas. "I was troubled with bearing-down pains in my back and hips for six years, and I wrote to Doctor Pierce for advice. I tried his 'Favorite Prescription' and six bottles cured me. I feel like a new person and I thank Dr. Pierce for my health. Life is a burden to any one without health. I have told a great many of my friends about the great medicine I took."

Accept no substitute for "Favorite Prescription." There is nothing "just as good."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 50 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT APPEALS FOR GENERAL PUBLIC, IMMEDIATE RESUMPTION

Calls Upon Operators and Union Officials to Get Together and Resume Coal Mining

Appeals to Their Patriotism and Desire to Prevent People Suffering —Sees the End of the Strike

Washington, Oct. 3—The second step in the President's efforts to effect a settlement between the anthracite coal magnates and the miners was taken to-day. At 11 o'clock every person who had been invited to participate, except President Olyphant of the Delaware and Hudson Road, who sent as his personal representative David Wilcox, Vice-President and general counsel of the road, and President Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania Road was present.

The President, during the conference, was seated in a large invalid chair, his left leg resting upon a cushion. The President most cordially greeted each of his guests as he appeared, then read the following statement:

"I wish to call your attention to the fact that there are three parties affected by the situation in the anthracite trade. The operators, the miners, and the general public. I speak for neither the operators, nor the miners, but for the general public. The question at issue which led to the situation affect immediately the parties concerned—the operators and the miners; but the situation itself

Vitally Affects the Public.

As long as there seemed to be a reasonable hope that these matters could be adjusted between the parties. It did not seem proper for me to intervene in any way. I disclaim any right or duty to intervene in this way upon legal grounds, or upon any official relation that I may bear to the situation; but the urgency, and the terrible nature of the catastrophe impending over a large portion of our people, in the shape of a winter fuel famine, impel me, after much anxious thought to believe that my duty requires me to use whatever influence I personally can to bring to an end a situation which has become literally intolerable. I wish to emphasize the character of the situation, and to say that its gravity is such that I am constrained urgently to insist that each one of you realize the heavy burden of responsibility upon him. We are upon the threshold of winter, with an already existing coal famine, the future terrors of which we can hardly yet appreciate. The evil possibilities are so far-reaching, so appalling, that it seems to me that you are not only justified in sinking, but are required to sink, for the time being, any tenacity as to your respective claims in the matter at issue between you. In my judgement, the situation imperatively requires that you meet upon the common plane of the necessities of the public. With all the earnestness there is in me, I ask that there be an

of operators in the coal mines in some such way as will, without a day's unnecessary delay meet the crying needs of the people.

"I do not invite a discussion of your respective claims and positions, I appeal to your patriotism— to the spirit that sinks personal considerations and makes individual sacrifices for the general good."

Session This Afternoon.

At 11.20 o'clock, when the conference had been in progress but 15 minutes, the railroad representatives left the conference room, and were closeted in a room on the lower floor of the White House. The general supposition was that they either had received a proposition, and had retired to consider it, or had retired to prepare one of their own.

Soon after retiring to their room the railroad representatives left the White House. They refused to say anything except that they were coming back at 3 o'clock for a further conference. President Baer was asked by a number of newspaper men where he could be seen, and he responded:

"Gentlemen, we are trying to get just where we can confer, and where you can not see us."

President Mitchell and his party left the White House soon after the railroad presidents.

It was understood that each party to the conference would formulate some proposition during the interim, based on what the President had said, of that each would be prepared with a reply to present to the President when the conference is resumed at 3 o'clock.

Hopes for Settlement.

At 12.30 o'clock Secretary Root terminated nearly an hour's private conference with the President. The Secretary was in an optimistic mood when he left the White House. He said he could not communicate anything further than that already given to the press, but he did not hesitate to express his individual opinion that the prospects were bright for some satisfactory outcome to the negotiations instituted today.

When Mr. Mitchell and District Presidents Duffy, Nichols and Fahey left the White House, after the conference, they returned to the hotel, where they were closeted during the afternoon. Mr. Mitchell declined to say anything about his purpose in regard to a settlement of the strike.

The representatives of the railroads will each submit a separate statement which they will present to President Roosevelt when the conference re-assembles, and which they will make public as soon as the President has seen it. They declined to discuss the attitude they will take on the ground that it would be discourteous to the President to disclose their intentions or their statement previous to submitting it to him.

President Baer was asked if there was any prospect of a settlement of the strike. He replied that he could not tell as each company would submit a separate statement to the President.

JOHN REDMOND INVITED TO MONTREAL

The United Irish League Wants the Agitator to Come to Canada

Montreal, Oct. 4.—It was definitely decided by the officers and members of the Montreal Branch of the United Irish League that an invitation should be extended to Messrs. John Redmond, M.P., and John Dillon, Ireland's representatives at the annual convention of the United Irish League to be opened in Boston on October 19, to visit Montreal at the close of the convention. The invitation will be made by the officers of the society, who will attend the convention, and from information that has been received, it is expected that the invitations will be accepted.

The Irish delegates will make a short tour of the chief American cities, with a view of obtaining funds to proceed with the work of the United Irish League in Ireland, but owing to the rapid progress made by the local branch and its influence throughout Canada, it is expected that they will make a short visit to this city. Final arrangements for their reception will be made at the meeting of the League, to be held on Thursday next. At this meeting the delegates to the convention will also be appointed.

Wedding Bells

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tedford, in the Township of Harvey, was the scene of a pretty wedding on the evening of Wednesday, the 1st inst., when their second youngest daughter, Miss Jemima, was united in marriage to Mr. Byron Gilbert Westaway, of Fenelon township. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. R. MacKnight, of town. The home was suitably decorated for the occasion, a graceful evergreen arch, sprinkled with blossoms and autumn leaves forming a fitting background to the central group of a large company. The bride's dress was cream silk trimmed with chiffon, with hat to match. The travelling hat was gray mohair. The bride carried a very pretty white bouquet the gift of her brother-in-law, Mr. Hawes. Miss Mary Tedford, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She was handsomely attired in cream lustre, trimmed with cream silk and applique and bore a beautiful boquet of white blossoms. Miss May Hewie, of Fenelon, was maid of honor, and in her lace trimmed cream silk frock, and with her pretty pink boquet looked quite charming. Mr. Robert Hewie, of Fenelon, supported the groom. The marriage service over, the company sat down to a sumptuous tea, after which the evening was given to the customary amusements.

There were several guests from a distance, comprising relatives from Otonabee, Fenelon and Dummer. The array of wedding presents was large, rich and serviceable, not the least worthy of notice being a gold watch and chain from the husband to his newly-wedded wife.

Plenty of Cordwood

While we are face to face with a coal famine in Peterborough, we nevertheless have the satisfaction of knowing that if coal is scarce, cordwood can be made fairly plentiful. If the price of wood keeps going up, as it most assuredly will, the men who have wood lying in the bush will rush it to the railways and get it into the markets. There is an abundance of cordwood in Ontario, and it will soon become visible with high prices in sight. The people of Ontario at least will not freeze.

MR. ROBT. STEWART'S AWFUL DEATH.

HE IS KILLED BY A C. P. R. TRAIN NEAR IRISH CREEK

An Old and Esteemed Former Citizen of Peterboro' Meets Terrible Death—Full Particulars not Yet to Hand

The sad news was received in Peterborough yesterday morning of the death of Mr. Robert Stewart, a drover of Brockville, who formerly resided in Peterborough, and who is widely known throughout the district. It appears that when the seven o'clock train, on which he was travelling, reached Jasper, he got off, presumably thinking it was Smith's Falls, and when he found his mistake he started to walk up the track the intervening five miles. The express going to Brockville at nine o'clock ran him down about halfway between the two places. He was fearfully mangled and instantly killed.

The late Mr. Stewart was about 45 years of age. He came to this country from Ireland when a boy and learned the blacksmithing business, which he conducted for some years at Fraserville. Later on he went into the live stock business in which he was quite successful. About seven years ago he moved to Peterborough, where he continued to reside until two years ago, when he moved to Brockville. He married a Miss Neithercutt, of town, who, together with three sons, are left to mourn his sad demise. The sons are Mr. Bert. Stewart, of Peterborough, and Masters Campbell and Kenneth at home. The deceased was a member of the Woodmen of the World and was widely known throughout this district.

The remains will arrive in Peterborough on the Belleville train this morning, and the funeral will take place at 1.30 this afternoon from the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. Harry Donnelly, No. 721 Bethune street, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

THE LATEST IDIOCY

Two Italian Officers Chop Themselves to Pieces Under New "Code of Honor"

Rome, Oct. 4.—Two lieutenants of horse, Navasquez and Reghini, have added to the duel code a new horror. It is styled the continuous duel and is so called because the parties must fight until one or both are wounded or dead.

Up to the present date five duels have been fought with these results: Each man has only one arm left, one is minus an ear, the other minus the bridge of his nose. The latter man also mourns the loss of a toe.

All Italy is interested in this continuous dismemberment, and many bets are being arranged as to which part of Navasquez and Reghini will go next.

THE WEALTH OF FRANCE

Six Billion Dollars are Invested in Other Countries

London, October 3—The French Ministry of Finance has published some interesting statistics of French wealth invested abroad. The total reached $6,000,000,000, of which $200,000,000 are invested in Great Britain, $1,400,000,000 in Russia, $600,000,000 in Spain, $675,000,000 in Austria-Hungary, $280,000,000 in Italy, $300,000,000 in British South Africa, and $277,200,000 in Egypt. Most of the money is invested in Government loans, but in South Africa it is largely in mines and industrials.

The extent of foreign commitments of French capital, however, is less striking than its distribution. No Government could withstand the combined pressure of the small investor and the great financial houses when they believe their money is in danger. The spectator comments on the "investment of Spain, which makes it absolutely certain that France will be passive when the vital interests of Spain are concerned."

It says a revolution involving the financial ruin of that country will not be allowed again. The $1,400,000,000 lent to Russia will bind France more securely than any formal clauses in a treaty of alliance, while also French investors have $300,000,000 in Egypt, and they will never seriously wish to destroy the magnificent security afforded by British occupation.

THE FUEL SUPPLY

There is Plenty of Coal in Peterborough to Last Till January

The Times was informed yesterday that coal sufficient to last until January or perhaps until Februrary, is on hand, and that there is no occasion to worry. By that time there will be plenty of wood, so that the situation is far from being as desperate as some imagine.

Peterborough may be in a similar position to that of Ottawa, where the greatest excitement prevailed, and which was only abated when the Mayor took action, as will be seen from the following taken from the Citizen: "The action of the Mayor in calling a mass meeting to consider the advisability of taking steps to purchase coal would appear to have forced the hand of the local dealers. The surprising and welcome information was elicited that the dealers have a supply on hand sufficient to last until the middle of January and they agree to furnish citizens with sufficient to keep them going at reasonable prices. This will be good news, as during the past week the dealers had practically closed their doors and anthracite coal could not be purchased at any price. On the strength of this information and assurance immediate action for the laying in of a supply by the city was deemed unnecessary."

THE PEAT PROBLEM BEING CONSIDERED

Two Ottawa Professors Give Some Facts and Figures

AN INEXHAUSTIBLE SUPPLY

Experiments Which Have Been Made To Secure Fuel From the Bogs

The Present Coal Famine is Giving an Impetus to the Development of Peat Fuel—Country Rich in Peat Bogs

Now that the scarcity of anthracite coal has aroused public interest in the fuel question, the possibilities of the use of peat for heating are being actively canvassed. That peat makes a fuel equal, if not superior, to the best anthracite coal, has been amply demonstrated by Mr. A. L. Davis, of town, and those associated with him in the peat works at the head of Balsam Lake.

Lately our esteemed contemporary, the Ottawa Citizen, has been looking into the matter of peat fuel, and has interviewed the geologists connected with the government at Ottawa.

Professor Macoun, of the geological survey, in speaking upon the subject from a natural history standpoint, said; "With regard to the use of peat as fuel I cannot speak, but I can tell you how it is formed. The peat producing bogs have been in formation for ages. They probably began as stagnant ponds that thickened with decaying vegetable matter and gave a surface upon which sphagnum mosses obtained a growth. These mosses in course of time died, sank into the water and decomposed. New crops sprang up from the spores of the old, matured and followed the same course and thus the bogs have been filling through centuries of time. Of these swamps Canada has a liberal supply. In Northern Quebec and Ontario there are large tracts of land that contain an unlimited supply of peat, and the further north one goes the more the bogs increase in area, depth and quality. Hence the supply is practically inexhaustible. The muskeys spoken of by northern travelers are really peat swamps."

MR. MACFARLANE'S VIEWS.

Mr. Thomas Macfarlane, chief Dominion analyst, was also interviewed and gave much valuable information upon the use and preparation of peat for fuel, as it has been carried on in the past. Mr. Macfarlane, who has made a close study of the matter spoke as follows:

"The earliest trials of peat in Canada were made at Chambly and West Farnham in Quebec. A great amount of work was done and peat produced to provide fuel for the Grand Trunk engines. The process employed was Hodge's plan which consisted of excavating the material of the bog by means of machinery placed on a scow. By this machinery the peat mud was cut and conveyed to the adjoining land where it was dried. This turned out to be a very light sort of fuel, too porous and bulky to be economical for locomotives, and the venture did not succeed financially. In my opinion the sponginess was caused by the intermixture of too much of the upper part of the bog, which consists usually of dead moss or what is called in Scotland fozzy peat. If these swamps had first been drained, the upper light moss rejected and fuel made of the black peat only the enterprise would probably have been more successful. In Scotland this process was followed and good fuel is obtained from the lower layers. Some time I visited extensive peat works in Holland which provided the fuel burnt in houses and hotels of Rotterdam. The bog is situated at Helenaveen and is worked most successfully, the upper four feet of its thickness being used for the production of moss litter, large quantities of which are exported for stable bedding purposes. The lower layer of the bog is then cut in the ordinary way, dried in the air and makes an excellent fuel. At Beaverton, Ont., good peat fuel has been prepared by means of a compression process, invented by Mr. Dobson, who resides there. The production of peat as fuel has a great future before it in this country provided always that those engaged in the enterprise will take care to discard the light spongy moss of the upper layers and use the black peat only."

Delighted with the Road

The Toronto Globe, Sept. 23rd, says. Mr. Wm. Robinson, General Travelling Agent, Intercolonial Railway, 10 King street west, Toronto, has received the following letter from Mrs. Cummings, Corresponding Secretary of National Council of Women of Canada, dated Aug. 13, which will no doubt be of interest to anyone contemplating a business or pleasure trip to the Maritime Provinces: "The pressure of a great deal of work following the recent annual meetings has prevented me writing to thank you and through you to thank the officials of the Intercolonial Railway for the very comfortable arrangements that were made for our journey to St. John, N.B., last month. All the delegates were delighted with the road, and with the beauty of the scenery through which we passed, and take pleasure in testifying to the efficient service of the railway and the courteous treatment received."

Beer is reported to be worth a dollar a bottle in Johannesburg. It will not stagger humanity much at that price.

While ordinary people are hunting for coal to mitigate the rigors of the climate this winter, the Toronto Globe pins its faith on coalition to save it from the cold shades of opposition.

Big Comet Now Approaching

Astronomers Have Labelled It "Comet B, 1902"—It Will be Visible to the Naked Eye in In About a Week's Time

A new comet will become visible to the eyes of Peterboronians in the course of a week or less. It is now approaching the earth at the rate of three million miles a day. Its head is twenty times the size of the earth while its tail is millions of miles long. At present it can only be seen through a telescope. In a few days, however, it will become visible to the naked eye.

It is going to be the brightest luminary of its kind that has visited this planet since the big comet of 1882. By the end of October it should be a very conspicuous object in the north-eastern sky, where it has chosen to make its appearance. It will be visible for about a month and a half, dating from the end of the present week, when it enters Cassiopeia.

The comet's technical name is "Comet B, 1902." By this name it will be known to coming generations of astronomers. About the middle of November it will pass in review before the sun. Then it will be lost to sight.

Unlike its noted predecessor of 1882 it has chosen a seasonable hour for its daily visitation and citizens will not have to remain up longer than eleven o'clock to see the visitor. In 1882 people had to tumble out of bed at three and four in the morning in order to have a look at the comet of that year.

WHY NOT CHANGE YOUR MEDICINE ?

If You Have Failed Up to the Present to Banish Rheumatism and Sciatica Try

Paine's Celery Compound

There is but one true and reliable specific remedy for the cure of all forms of rheumatism; it is Paine's Celery Compound. This decided and weighty assertion is fully supported by letters from thousands of cured men and women, and prominent physicians have ably and fearlessly supported the statement.

If your efforts up to the present with other medicines have failed to drive the terrible disease from your system, remain no longer in agony and peril; change your medicine at once. Prudence and wisdom will surely direct you to use Paine's Celery Compound, the medicine that has cured so many of your neighbors.

The prompt and marvellous cure of Mrs E. King, Cedar Hill, Victoria, B.C., who endured the tortures and agonies of rheumatism for almost a lifetime, points unmistakeably and truly to the fact that Paine's Celery Compound is the king of medicines for the cure of rheumatism; she says:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism nearly all my life, and about eight years ago I had a very severe attack, almost losing the use of my right arm. A friend recommended the use of Paine's Celery Compound, and kindly gave me a bottle. I was so much benefitted by that one bottle, that I took three more, and was quite cured. Since then it has been almost my only medicine for all the ailments from which I have suffered, and all my family have found some benefit from it. I am sixty-five years of age; I live on a farm, get up early in the morning and am now equal to a good day's work."

ITEMS OF NEWS BY CABLE AND LETTER

Winnipeg, Man, Oct. 2—Evening papers say George White, of Summerside, P.E.I., is in Manitoba on a peculiar quest. He has traveled from his far eastern home to search for his wife and little five-year-old son. White traced his wife to Winnipeg, where she came on the harvesters' excursion, but here he is baffled. He thinks she has made away with one of their children, a boy about 111, which has been missing since the day she deserted home.

Medical examiners for life insurance societies have added the term "coffee heart" to the regular classification of the functional derangements of that organ, says the London Dietetic and Hygiene Gazette. Its effect is in shortening the long beat of the heart. Coffee topers, they say, are plentiful, and are as much tied to their cups as the whisky toper. The effect of the coffee upon the heart is more lasting, and consequently worse than that of liquor. But exception is made of the coffee drunk out at the average hotel or boarding house. Even a heart bowed down by other forms of dissipation is reasonably immune from that.

PETERBORO INDUSTRIAL FAIR ASSOCIATION

To be Formed, Action Taken at a Representative Meeting Last Night

A meeting was held in the Council Chamber last night for the purpose of forming a new association with the object of carrying on in the Town of Peterborough an Annual Fair.

Mayor Denne was appointed chairman of the proceedings, and there were present amongst others—E. M. Elliott, M. Connors, F. W. Miller, W. G. Howden, M. O'Shea, H. Le Brun, A. Rountree, T. Barrie, T. E. Bradburn, Macfarlane Wilson, W. G. Green, R. H. Kells, R. J. Munro, F. H. Dobbin, J. R. Goodfellow, H. Neill, Wm Collins, R. Leary, J. Brooks, Ald. J. J. Turner, T. A. S. Hay, R. M. Roy, G. Bennett, W. F. Conway.

Mayor Denne, in opening the proceedings, said the object of the meeting was to form, if possible, an Association to be known as the Peterborough Industrial Fair Association, composed of business men of the town and farmers from the country. He had but little knowledge of how agricultural or industrial fairs should be conducted, but he could see no reason why Peterborough should not have a good annual fair. The Directors of the Agricultural Society had of late been considerably handicapped by not having a street railway, but he hoped one would be in operation before another year. Dr. Morrison, R. Fair, and D. Hugh-Charles had sent him letters of regret at their unavoidable absence from the meeting, at the same time expressing their hearty sympathy with the movement.

The New Association.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin here read the following proposition:

Proposal to Form an Association to institute and carry on in the Town of Peterborough an Industrial Fair:

1.—It is desirable than an Association of business men, merchants, farmers, and others be formed with the object of carrying on in the Town of Peterborough, as a convenient central Point an Annual Fair.

2.—That this Association be known as the Peterborough Industrial Fair Association.

3.—That funds to carry on the objects of the Association be derived from the sale of stock.

4.—That the capital stock of the Association be fixed at the sum of $20,000, divided into 800 Shares of $25.00 each.

5.—That calls on the said shares of stock be paid in, subject to arrangements made by the Board of Directors, from time to time, as deemed advisable or necessary.

6.—That a first call be made as soon as possible after organization sufficient in amount to acquire the buildings of the Central Fair, and to provide a fund for expenses connected with the fair to be next held.

7.—That a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and a Board of Directors be elected from among the qualified membership of the association.

8.—That all individuals subscribing to and acquiring stock in the Association shall be eligible to office.

9.—That a membership in the Association carrying with it the right to exhibit at the fair, be had on the payment of a stated fee.

10.—That the Association lease suitable grounds for the objects in view, and that a committee of the directors be appointed with power to deal with this matter in due form as instructed.

11.—That a committee be appointed, whose duty it shall be to solicit subscriptions to the capital stock of the Association, perfect the details of organization, and act in conjuction with the offices and Directors.

12.—That a form of Constitution, and By-laws be prepared, to be submitted at a future meeting for adoption.

In briefly reviving the history of the exhibition during several years past, Mr. Dobbin said that four years ago a heavy snow storm during fair time caused considerable loss. Three years ago the event was a success and the directors were enabled to pay off a large portion of their liabilities. Last year they came out about even. The Agricultural Society's liabilities today total up to between $1,000 and $1,100, and as far as the directors are concerned, it is all important to pay off these liabilities in some way or other. It had been proposed for the new association to take the shape of a joint association to secure the Driving Park, adjoining the exhibition grounds, with its splendid race track, take over the present buildings, stalls, etc., and remove them thereto.

Mr. E. M. Elliott, in referring to the benefits derived from agricultural and industrial fairs, took as an illustration the year 1880, when tenant farming in Great Britain had proved a failure. At that time Sir Charles Tupper suggested that six tenant farmers be brought here at the government's expense. This advice was acted upon and these agriculturalists visited Canada at the time of our fairs. As a result of their visit several hundred British farmers came out to this country and permanently settled here. It would be a pity, he thought, if the fair were allowed to drop; that it would mean a depreciation of 50 per cent in the value of out stock. Mr. Elliott gave figures showing that from 1883 to 1897, Peterborough had some very successful fairs. Good horse races were then on the programme each day, for which $400 or $500 were given in purses, and after a heavy total of expenditure, they usually had three or four hundred dollars to the good. One year they paid off $700 indebtedness. He has no doubt if the townspeople would only take an interest in the matter Peterborough could have one of the most successful fairs in the province.

Ald. J. J. Turner remarked that during the past few years the whole work of the exhibition had fallen to the lot of five or six men who are personally liable for all indebtedness incurred. If the business men and merchants would only put their shoulders to the wheel all present difficulties could be overcome, and the success of future fairs assured. He urged the forming of a joint stock association.

Messrs. H. Le Brun, A. H. Leary, T. Barrie, Wm. Collins, G. Bennett, J. M. Brooks all made speeches favorable to the movement. Mr. W. G. Green having been appointed secretary of the meeting, Mr. George Bennet moved, seconded by Ald. J. J. Turner, that this meeting approves of forming an association to be known as the Peterborough Industrial Fair Association.—Carried.

Ald. J. J. Turner moved, seconded by Mr. Elliott, that the shares be fixed at $10 each.—Carried.

Mr. Tooley moved, seconded by Mr. Leary, that the Presidents of the Board of Trade, the Turf Club, the Agricultural Society and the Farmers' Institute select a committee composed of members of their several Boards, to arrange all details of the new association, with power to act. Mr. F. H. Dobbin to act as chairman.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned to meet early next week.

ANOTHER WAR CLOUD LOOMS UP IN MORROCCO

France is Taking a Stand in Opposition to England on the African Coast, and is Backed by Russia and Spain

Paris, Oct. 4.—There is a growing belief in Paris that the diplomatic battle over Morocco may precipitate a perilous friction between England and France. M. Delcasse, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, declares France will not stand another Fashoda.

Morocco is in a bad way. The people, who are fanatical, fear that the Sultan is about to become a Christian, because he has adopted a few modern improvements. France wants the Sultan's brother put in his place, while England sustains the present Sultan. Spain is being pushed to the front as a buffer state. Ambassador Cambon has scored a point by making a treaty with Spain, and the reason for Jules Cambon, France's greatest diplomat, being sent to Madrid is now obvious.

Russia, France and Spain will work together, while the German Ambassador is watching the situation with keen interest. France is strengthening her Mediterranean forces, and though she may not want to make the Mediterranean a French lake, she will fight to prevent it becoming an English lake. Spain has decided to build a navy quickly, and it is possible this is one of the conditions imposed by the agreement with France. The French Foreign Office denies the existence of this treaty, but the denial is based on different meanings of the word.

One Common Cause of Headache

Perhaps the general cause of headache and pain across the eyes is nasal catarrh. The simplest cure is to inhale the medicated vapor of Catarrhozone which traverses every air cell and air passage of the throat, lungs and nose. It kills myriads of germs at every breath, clears away mucous discharges, preserves and heals the membranes. Catarrhozone is just a splendid remedy for headache, and its action is certain and unfailing in diseases of the Throat and Lungs, Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma and Catarrh. A trial will convince the most sceptical that Catarrhozone is all right. Large size, $1.00; trial size 25c. Druggist or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE CONDITION OF IRELAND

In the Presbyterian of last week we find the following interesting article on the condition of Ireland. The Presbyterian is broad in its views, placing some facts before its readers in a very creditable manner. It says:

"It is generally admitted that the land question is at the root of Ireland's woes. Ireland is essentially an agricultural country, and cannot prosper until relieved from what has been designated as the worst system of land tenure in the world. The unfortunate conditions existing in regard to the land are not only a direct cause of misery and lack of progress, but afford the material necessary for the work of the political agitators, while the consequence of their activity is the application of coercion by the British Government and the intensifying of those feelings of discontent and rebellion which distinguish Ireland from every other part of the Empire. In consequence of the agitation at present carried on under the leadership of the United Irish League, the government have thought it necessary to extend the application of the Crimes Act to the district which includes the city of Dublin. This has been the occasion of vigorous denunciations from the National leaders and some of them have not hesitated to say in public that nothing but hopelessness of success prevents a resort to arms. The land agitation, however, is not confined to the Nationalists, Protestant Unionists like T. W. Russell, M.P., and papers like the Belfast Witness are strong opponents of landlordism, and advocates of compulsory sale. The most hopeful sign upon the horizon is the proposal for a conference between landlords and tenants with a view to the settlement of the land question. In assenting to such a conference, Mr. Russell wrote lately: 'The choice is really between peace and civil war—between a real truce of God and another spell of that hateful coercion which English statesmen have tried all through the 19th century, and which, however necessary to restrain in wrong-doing, is no remedy for wrongs that have all but ruined the country.'"

USE THE RIFLE.

The English people took their victory in the international rifle match at Ottawa, with becoming modesty, and the papers commenting on the result and the return of the victors, have some nice things to say, and some sensible morals to point. The St. James Gazette, for instance, says: "The capture of the Palma trophy at Ottawa on Saturday last by a team representing the National Rifle Association of Great Britain, is a really satisfactory achievement, and the generous enthusiasm of the good citizens of Ottawa for the victory, which was almost better than winning themselves, will be repeated most heartily on this side of the water. The trophy is offered by riflemen of the United States for international competition and this is the first occasion on which it has been won by a British team, who appear to have secured it, against a handicap of points, mainly by slow and steady shooting at the longer ranges. International team competitions of this kind deserve to attract a great deal more public attention in England than they do at present. We should like to see them so representative and so popular that the issue of a contest between the crack shots of Great Britain and the United States (to name no others) was at least as important an event in the ordinary estimation as the Australian cricket matches. Best of all games though cricket may be, and very beneficial on the whole though the national cult of it even by people who cannot play it is, rifle-shooting is something more than a game. We heartily hope that this success of the N.R.A. may not only be repeated, but may succeed in stimulating public interest in a pastime which is as fascinating as it is valuable."

Canadians generally have a better knowledge of the rifle than the old country people. There is a larger proportion of our population who at some period of their lives have done more or less shooting in a sporting way. We have opportunities denied our friends in the United Kingdom, in that there is no penalty attached to the possession of a gun, and there are chances of practice he cannot have. At the same time, there are hundreds who have never taken up marksmanship, and others who have not kept it up. As our London friend says, it is more than a game. The reputation of being a country where the people know how to "shoot straight," and keep well supplied with ammunition, is a country which can depend upon enjoying a large amount of immunity from attack.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

in the very moment of fruition.

He had obeyed instructions to the letter in his treatment of Miss Gray—what he had told her and what he had kept from her; and he was certain that if she did not go obediently through her part on this night before the crowded house out there he would be the scapegoat in the millionaire's eyes.

"All the better if she's fainting," he went on, when Jeffrey was silent, biting his lips. "The horse plays the scene, not Mazeppa."

"By Jove, I haven't the heart for it. It's too steep!" exclaimed the other. "This is going to make a scandal, and you and I won't be the whiter for it, old man."

"You're stage-manager, and it's your place to see that everything goes right," said Wantage, threateningly. "You don't want to make an enemy of Macaire, do you? He would be a bad one."

Jeffrey, who was another man with a past, and a dilapidated present, remembered his wife and children. After all the girl was a fool.

As good women as she had appeared in the sort of costume—or lack of it—which she affected to abhor, and would so appear again. He was even less in Lionel Macaire's confidence than Wantage, being ignorant that the actress and the millionaire had ever met before to-night, and he supposed, in scorn, that the girl had seen fit to faint merely because she did not wish to wear a certain kind of garment. It was her business to do what was required of her, and he would see that it was done, with her will or without it.

The dresser was summoned, and told that Miss Gray must be got ready for the next scene. As she had fainted, and could not help herself, she must be treated as if she were an infant. And no time must be lost, as the next scene was the most important one in the play.

A sovereign was slipped into the dresser's palm, and she promised that, whether Miss Gray woke up or not, she should be ready when she was wanted, so far as clothing was concerned. Then she locked the door, and stolidly set about her task.

For a time Winifred's body was as limp in her hands as if the girl had been dead, but as the work progressed a perceptible shuddering thrilled through the delicate limbs, and the bosom rose and fell with a sobbing breath.

The dresser paused for an instant, looking critically down at the dark line of curled lashes. "She'll be coming to herself before I'm done with this," was her thought. "I wonder what'll happen then?"

As she wondered there was a gentle tap at the door. The woman rose, and opening it an inch or two, peeped out.

"Here's a note for Miss Gray," whispered Mr. Wantage. "Give it to her immediately if she regains her consciousness before it's time for her next scene. In that case there'll be an answer. If she has to go on as she is, you can hand the letter back to me."

He pushed an envelope addressed in pencil through the narrow opening and the dresser took it. Then, turning back to her charge, she saw that the young actress's eyes were wide open.

The girl was lying on a sofa, opposite a long mirror, and upon her own reflection there her gaze was fixed with horror.

"I thought it was a dream—but it's true, after all. What have you—been doing to me?" she gasped.

"There, there, ducky," cooed the old woman, "nothing at all but helping you to get ready for your big scene, because time pressed and you weren't able to do anything for yourself. And here's a letter that's just been sent in to you by some friend outside. Better open it now you're awake again, and maybe there'll be a word of comfort."

"A word of comfort!" the girl echoed bitterly. "There's no such thing for me."

But she took the letter, and with hands that were cold and trembling tore open the envelope.

"My darling," she read, the words hastily scrawled in pencil, "they tell me that you object to go through the scene that is coming—you will know what I mean. If you can care for me at all you will feel free to follow the dictates of your own heart. Then, you will know that I am thinking— Forget that you owe a penny; forget the contract you have signed. The debt shall be cancelled, the contract torn to pieces. What is a miserable hundred pounds of salary, what are the thousands spent upon the revival of this play—what is anything in this world when weighed against a tear or smile of yours?

"If you can care for me, you will be glad that I am thinking this, and there will be nothing on earth that you cannot take from me, or let me do for you. But if you still hate me as you once thought you did, if I am still 'horrible,' and you 'loathe me,' then I know you cannot avoid remembering the money you have accepted, the contract you have signed, and you, being an honorable girl, will feel that you must earn the one and carry out the other.

"Send me a line, or even a word, to make me happy, and the curtain may ring down and the audience be sent away for all I care, though enough money has been spent on scenery, costumes and rent to keep a dozen poor families in comfort for a year. And it has been all for you, to make you a 'star,' though I fear me much that my efforts to advance my love have not yet been appreciated. Still, the world appreciates them at something like their full value. One or two newspapers have got hold of the fact that my money is behind this company, and our friends are saying—which is the truth—that I am doing it all for you. Since this is being said, therefore, why not let me do a thousand times more for you—relieve you of every anxiety both for this evening and all future days?"

The letter was not signed, but well did Winifred know who had written it; and the keen, poisoned dagger-point in every line went home, drawing heart's blood.

Under the velvet glove was the hand of iron, with talons that pinched her very soul. How he reminded her of her obligations, and made it plain that they were all to him. How he dangled temptation before her eyes — escape from the net in which his machinations had first enmeshed her, and his millions for her little fingers to dip into at will. How he emphasized his arguments by his stealthy hint that, since the world knew of his admiration and would at all events believe it reciprocated, there was the less reason to hold back.

One Splendid Indication for the Future.

New York, Oct. 3.—Were continuous troublous times ahead the great interests would not be busy in creating new combinations for introduction to the business world and to Wall street. Their time would be taken up in endeavors to dispose of what already existed as a preparatory putting of their houses in order for lower prices; the great ship combine has at last been made. It will be known as the International Mercantile Marine Company. The Morgan interests have the affairs of the concern in hand. Papers were filed in Trenton last Wednesday which gives the new concern its legal life. Its capital to commence will be $120,000,000. This great company will be a mile post in the annals of the attempts of the American people to regain dominion of the sea and will be a great factor in the struggle for securing the retention of the major portion of the trade of the world. We have taken our place as the leading mercantile nation of the world. The fact of the formation of such a concern plainly indicates what the Morgan party consider to be ahead of our people and our share markets, in addition to this all the great transcontinental railways are building gigantic steamships for the Pacific and Oriental trade. In the next three years our Oriental trade increased more than four fold. Our trans-Atlantic trade will increase greatly also. All these points tend to and will still further increase our wealth and trades with its accompaniment of enhancement in values. Once the feverishness of present speculation is over stocks will again commence to harden and advance. Some issues are higher now than before the recent break, noticeably pressed steel car, which we wrote up some weeks ago and commended to our clients as a good purchase. Conditions are too strongly bullish in this country at present for anything more than temporary setbacks for purely local reasons.

Summary—To-day's market was thoroughly in accord with our direct advices in our letter of Oct. 1st, advising realising when strong, taking back one's stocks when they sell off. After yesterday's concessions, to-day's market made considerable progress in the upward direction with Pacifics the main leaders. C. F. I. and P. R. S. bore out our predictions of higher prices made in last night's letter; the former sold up to 86 1-2 while the latter rose 3 1-2 points more, selling above 63. A sharp and decisive drop came after delivery hour, carrying prices down from 1-2 to 2 1-2 points. This afforded the opportunity to buy again; each advance goes a trifle beyond the last one. The above advice still applies to the market, and is in our opinion good to act upon. Money closed at 5 per cent. Total sales 830,000.

A PASTOR'S WIFE CURED OF PELVIC CATARRH.

She Suffered for Years and Felt Her Case Was Hopeless—Cured by Peruna.

MRS. ANNA B. FLEHARTY, recent Superintendent of the W. C. T. U. headquarters, at Galesburg, Ill., was for ten years one of the leading women there. Her husband, when living, was first President of the Nebraska Wesleyan University, at Lincoln, Neb.

In a letter written from 401 Sixty-seventh street, W., Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Fleharty says the following in regard to Peruna:

"Having lived a very active life as wife and working partner of a busy minister, my health failed me a few years ago. I lost my husband about the same time, and gradually I seemed to lose health and spirit. My daughter is a confirmed invalid, and we both felt great need of an invigorator.

"One of my neighbors advised me to try Peruna. A bottle was immediately secured and a great change took place in my daughter's as well as in my own health. Our appetites improved very greatly, the digestion seemed much helped, and restful sleep soon improved us, so that we seemed like new women.

"I would not be without Peruna for ten times its cost."—Mrs. Anna B. Fleharty.

What used to be called female diseases by the medical profession is now called pelvic catarrh. It has been found by experience that catarrhal diseases of the pelvic organs are the cause of most cases of female diseas

Dr. Hartman was among the first of America's great physicians to make this discovery. For forty years he has been treating diseases peculiar to women, and long ago he reached the conclusion that a woman entirely free from catarrhal affection of these organs would not be subject to female disease. He therefore began using Peruna for these cases and found it so admirably adapted to their permanent cure that Peruna has now become the most famous remedy for female diseases ever known. Everywhere the women are using it and praising it. Peruna is not a palliative simply; it cures by removing the cause of female disease.

Dr. Hartman has probably cured more women of female ailments than any other living physician. He makes these cures simply by using and recommending Peruna.

Mrs. Anna B. Fleharty.

Mrs. E. L. Brown, 229 Elliott street, Memphis, Tenn., writes:

"I suffered for several years with headache brought on by nervous prostration. I was also afflicted with insomnia. I would get up in the morning more weary than when I retired and I used to dread the approach of night. Peruna came into my home as a welcome guest, and within three short months I was like another woman. I have now enjoyed perfect health for over a year, and those who have suffered as I did will know how happy I am."—Mrs. E. L. Brown.

Mrs. Esther M. Milnor, De Graff, Ohio writes:

"I was a terrible sufferer from female weakness and had the headache continuously. I was not able to do my housework for myself and husband. I wrote you and described my condition as near as possible. You recommended Peruna. I took four bottles and was completely cured. I think Peruna a wonderful medicine."—Mrs. Esther M. Milnor.

Congressman Thad. M. Mahon, of Chambersburg, Pa., writes:

"I take pleasure in commending your Peruna as a substantial tonic and a good catarrh remedy."—T. M. Mahon.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Improving the Locks

Mr. Clem. Gordon, government foreman on the Otonabee and Trent waters, is rushing work at several points. A large force of men is employed laying a concrete pier some 350 feet in length, immediately south of the locks. There is another gang building new piers at Healy's Falls and the work of further improving the channel of the river at "Yankee Bennett" has been completed. Mr. Burnet's contract for the new dam at the locks, is progressing satisfactorily.

Fire on Lake Street

At about three o'clock yesterday afternoon fire was discovered in the stables of Mr. Achilles Letellier, 81 Lake street. The alarm was sent in and the brigade quickly responded. However, the flames had made such rapid headway that the structure was consumed, and the attention of the firemen was turned towards preventing the flames spreading to the adjoining buildings. The employees of the Cordage Company did splendid work with their fire extinguishers.

Wedding Bells

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J.H. Steer Manvers, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon when their youngest daughter Miss Louisa Taylor was married to Mr. Robert L. Scott, of Toronto, formerly of Emily.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. E. Isbenson in the presence of about fifty guests, under a handsome arch of flowers and ferns.

The bride was most daintily and becomingly gowned in white mousseline de soie and carried a boquet of white roses. She was given away by her father and attended during the ceremony by her sister, Miss Margaret Steer, who wore a becoming gown of nile green organdie and carried a boquet of pink roses.

Mr. J. A. Wolstenholm, of Peterborough performed the duties of best man. The wedding march was rendered by Miss L. Thorndyke.

A sumptuous wedding supper was served at the conclusion of the ceremony, after which the happy young couple departed on the 5.50 train for Toronto, which is to be their future home.

TRUE ARMOR

Proper Food Defends Against Disease

There is an assayer and chemist in Bonita, Colo., Mr. C. Walston, who shows by every day demonstration that scientific food will make a man young again. He says:—

"The question of proper food which will assimilate and protect the system from loss and waste of brain and muscle becomes a serious one when man advances to my age of past 60. I am continually under a brain and muscle strain which for the last 35 years were upon me seriously. My digestion became impaired and my whole system weak.

I saw Grape-Nuts in a grocery store and bought a box. I tested it in my labratory and found it correct, according to your declaration of its substances in proportion with the phosphates intact.

I made it my principal food and gained in one year eighteen pounds in weight, and had the pleasure of seeing my indigestion leave me entirely. After a year and a half of its use, I feel 20 years younger and am as strong and as supple as I never was before during the last decade. I simply have found the true armor which is defending my body against disease and withering age.

I find it of advantage in field work and when prospecting in the mountains. When I go out upon geodetic expeditions I take a quantity of Grape-Nuts with me. This abolishes cumbersome baggage and food cooking utensils. A little sugar, a can of condensed milk, my Grape-Nuts and I have my food in a closely condensed form, not weighing over 4 pounds to carry and I never get hungry. Concentrated reagents are the most effective in all chemical operations, and Grape-Nuts are the re-agents that keep the body's laboratory (the stomach) in perfect order. Your product is perfect."

The Late Thomas George Choate

There will be widespread regret at this intelligence of the death of Mr. T. G. Choate, in Grace Hospital, Toronto, about eleven o'clock on Thursday night. Early in the summer the late Mr. Choate underwent surgical treatment of one of his legs, and about the first of September a second operation was found necessary. This had been giving fair promise of complete success till a week ago last Wednesday, when, after having already suffered through two operations on his leg, a third one for appendicitis was considered inevitable. Mr. Choate was at first reluctant to undergo this third operation, and, after considerable delay, when the incision was made, it was found that recovery was exceedingly uncertain, though, as a result of Mr. Choate's natural vigor, death was stayed for a few days, its work was completed as above stated.

The deceased was born in Warsaw about seventy-one years ago, being the eldest son of the late Thomas Choate. He was educated at the village school, and later at the Peterborough Grammar School, while the late Rev. Dr. Taylor, was teaching, and still later he was one of the earliest students in attendance at the provincial Normal School, where he took a course of studies that thoroughly qualified him for a business career. At an early age he married Miss Christina Kidd, daughter of the late Alexander Kidd. Soon afterwards Mr. Choate established himself in the milling business, and built the substantial stone mill still extant at Warsaw. Collaterally with this milling business the deceased managed an extensive furniture factory. In the course of his business career at Warsaw Mr. Choate was called into the area of municipal politics, in which he was for several years a prominent figure. He was during that period also appointed a Justice of the Peace. About 1876, retiring from business, Mr. Choate became a citizen of Peterborough and lived here about eight years. After leaving town, the family resided principally at Warsaw till last year, when, nearly all of their children having settled in life, Mr. and Mrs. Choate took up residence in Peterborough.

They had six children, of whom the late Mary Choate, wife of Mr. Barton Earle, and the late George Choate, predeceased their father. The surviving children are Mr. Thomas A. Choate, of Lakefield; Harriet Burnham Choate, wife of the Rev R. MacKnight, B.A., of town; Adelaide Choate, wife of Mr. Wm. Payne, Warsaw and Mr. Arthur P. Choate, of Toronto. The late Mr. Choate was a man of remarkable intelligence and all his life displayed an extraordinary love of music.

Of a genial and kindly disposition, Mr. Choate was respected and greatly beloved by hundreds in Peterborough and surrounding district.

The remains will arrive on the 7.20 C. P.R. train this evening.

The funeral will leave the family residence, Stewart street, on Monday at 10.30 a.m., and proceed to the Warsaw cemetery, for interment.

HON. JAMES SUTHERLAND VISITS PETERBOROUGH

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries Spends a Few Hours Here

The Hon. James Sutherland, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was in town yesterday on business, and was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harris McClellan, Gilmour street.

Mr. McClellan was seen last night by a Times representative, and, in reply to a question, said there was no political motive connected with the Minister's visit He said, however, that we might state in The Times that he expected Mr. Sutherland back to Peterborough soon for a day, when he thought it would be a favorable opportunity for the citizens to urge the necessity that exists for a new drill shed, the dredging of the river, free letter delivery, and the great importance of having contracts let on the canal south of Campbellford. Also the necessity of conserving the waters of the Otonabee river, north of Peterborough In fact there were a number of other matters that need pressing on the attention of the government.

We hope that Mr. McClellan, the Board of Trade and Council will unite in this matter, so that "results" will follow the visit of the Minister.

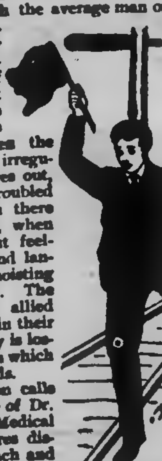
DANGER SIGNALS.



No engineer would be mad enough to run by the flag which signaled danger. What the danger was he might not understand, but he would take no chances. It is different with the average man or woman. They attempt constantly to run by the danger signals of Nature and that attempt costs thousands of lives every year. When the appetite becomes irregular or entirely gives out, when sleep is troubled and broken, when there is a loss of flesh, when there is a constant feeling of dullness and languor, Nature is hoisting the danger signal. The stomach and its allied organs are failing in their work and the body is losing the nutrition on which its strength depends.

Such a condition calls for the prompt use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, purifies and enriches the blood and builds up the body with sound, solid flesh.

"Your kindness to me I can never forget," writes Mrs. Josie E. Clark, of Enterprise, Shelby Co., Mo. "I cannot express half my feelings of gratefulness to you. I had despaired of ever getting well. I had been in bad health for twelve years. Had aches all through me, numb hands, cold feet, and everything I ate distressed me; bowels constipated, was very nervous, depressed and despondent. In fact, I can't express half my bad feelings to you. When I first wrote to you I thought I could never be cured. I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and my health is now good. You have my honest recommendation to all sufferers. I think there is no medicine in the world as good as Dr. Pierce's."

If constipated use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They cure constipation, biliousness and sick headache. They do not produce the "pill habit."

WITH THE WONDERFUL

STAR HEATER

The only heater that is guaranteed to give satisfaction with soft as well as hard coal. As a fuel economizer it is unequalled, producing heat on about one-third the coal used in any other heater in existence.

The Star has a tube behind for the escape of the gas. As anyone who uses soft coal knows, the gas accumulates under the fresh coal, and if there is no escape there will be explosions and puffs of smoke. In the Star this disappears in the gas escape. The Star has a sliding damper and ornamental door of mica.

After being filled, the Star will heat for 48 hours without attention. It will hold fire and give out heat longer than any other stove.

The Star is 25 per cent more economical than any other stove.

MORE THAN 5,000 ARE IN USE IN THE LOWER PROVINCES.

PRICE LIST

No.	Height	Diameter	Price

3	37 1-2 in.	12 in	$19.20
4	41 in.	15 in	$23.00

DIRECTIONS

When filling the stove always shut the draught door at the bottom.

Keep the small opening in the back pipe closed except when cleaning.

Clean the back pipe every two weeks.

COAL CONSUMERS, ATTENTION!

We are using one No. 3 Star stove in our large rooms, where formerly we had four large wood heaters, and get more heat now than before. The wood stoves cost us $4.50 every week for fuel, and the Star stove which we are now using costs us only $1.50, making a saving of $3.00 per week in the price of fuel—which would soon pay for the stove. We can recommend this stove to any person wanting a first-class heater. We would not use any other stove that is made.

ST. PETER'S T.A.S.

M. J. Serro, Chairman Trustees.

We certify that we have in use one No. 3 Star stove in our large pool and billiard room, the size of which is 45x23 ft., with 18 ft. ceiling. We have perfect heat, and the most coal we have used on the coldest day yet has been three scuttles in 24 hours. We are so well pleased with the stove that we would not use any other.

ROCAMORA & CALLAHAN.

I have been using a No. 3 Star stove in the sitting room at the City Hotel for some time past, and it has proved so satisfactory that I have ordered two more to replace two stoves in the upstairs. The Star gives more heat than the other stoves with half the amount of coal.

MARTIN CONNORS.

We have in use in our composing room a No. 3 Star coal stove, and wish to state that it is giving eminent satisfaction. The entire absence of gas by the escape provided, the increase of heat and the saving in coal are special features of the Star, and it requires a minimum of attention.

British Admiralty Delighted With Newfoundland Fishermen as Reserves

St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 6.—The British admiralty is so satisfied with the success of the naval reserve movement among Newfoundland fishermen that it has decided to double the contingent which has enlisted for a six-month cruise this winter in the Caribbean sea. The cruisers Charybdis and Aridane, the latter the flagship on the station, will each take fifty naval reserves. The admiralty has agreed to station the naval reserve training ship Calypso at St. John's, instead of Placentia bay, because of the superior advantages for enrolling volunteers here

QUEEN OF SPAIN WEDS

Count Escosura Is Her Husband by Morganatic Marriage

Madrid, Oct. 6.—A sensational scandal in the royal family is stirring court circles. King Alfonso has discovered that his mother, during her recent journey to Austria was secretly and morganatically married to her master of horse, Count Escosura. The queen years ago plighted her troth with the count and intended to marry him. For state reasons she was compelled to marry Alfonso's father. When the boy king learned of her marriage he became wildly enraged and violently abused her and ordered her to return to the provinces or go abroad. The queen indignantly refused to obey the order.

SERIOUS OUTLOOK FOR STRIKE SETTLEMENT

Roosevelt Failed to Change the Situation, The Conference a Failure

They Refused Offer of Arbitration, Baer, on Behalf of the Othe Operators Would Not Accept Mitchell's Suggestion

Special to The Times.

Washington, Oct. 6.—The conference between President Roosevelt and representative mine operators, which took place at the White House Friday, concluded without anything having been accomplished towards settling the coal strike. Recognition of the miners' union appears to have been the rock upon which the conference came to grief. The miners, through the President of their union, expressed a willingness to submit the difference to the arbitration of a tribunal to be named by the President and to enter into an agreement to abide by the terms fixed by the arbitrators for a period of from one to five years. The employers, through the Presidents of the coal companies and a leading independent mine operator, squarely refused arbitration, denounced the miners' labor organization as a lawless and anarchistic body, with which they could and would have no dealing, and demanded Federal troops to insure complete protection for workers and their families in the mining region, and court proceedings against the miners' union. They offered, if the men returned to work, to submit the grievances at individual collieries to the decision of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas for the District of Pennsylvania, in which the colliery was located. There the matter closed.

WHAT OPERATORS SAY.

The following statement was read by Mr. G. F. Baer, president of the Reading Railroad, as representative of the operators: There are from 15,000 to 20,000 men at work mining and preparing coal. They are abused, assaulted and maltreated by the United Mine Workers. They can only work under the protection of armed guards. Thousands of other workmen are deterred from working by intimidation, violence and crimes inaugurated by the United Mine Workers, over whom John Mitchell, whom you invited to meet you, is chief. I need you not picture the daily crime committed by the members of this organization. The 'domestic tranquility,' which every consitution declares is the chief object of government, does not exist in the coal regions. There is a terrible reign of lawlessness and crime there. Only the lives and property of the secret oath-bound order, which declared that the locals should 'have full power to suspend operations at collieries' until the non-union men joined their order, are safe. Every effort is made to prevent the mining of coal, and when mined, Mitchell's men dynamite bridges and tracks, mob trainmen, and by all manner of violence try to prevent its shipment to relieve the public.

TROOPS NEEDED.

"The constitution of Pennsylvania guarantees protection to life and property. In express terms it declares the right of acquiring, possessing and defending property 'to be alienable.' When rioting and anarchy, too great to be appeased by the civil power, occur, the Governor of Pennsylvania is bound to call out the State troops to suppress it. He must fearlessly use the whole power of the State to protect life and property and to establish peace—not an armed truce, but the peace of the law which protects every man at work and going to and from work. He has sent troops to the coal regions. Gradually the power of the law is asserting itself. Unless encouraged by false hopes order soon will be restored, and then we can mine coal to meet the public wants. If the power of Pennsylvania is insufficient to re-establish the reign of law, the constitution of the United States requires the President, when requested by the Legislature and the Governor, 'to suppress domestic violence.' You see, there is a lawful way to secure coal for the public. The duty of the hour is not to waste time negotiating with the fomenters of this anarchy and insolent defiance of law, but to do as was done in the war of the rebellion, restore the majesty of law, the only guardian of a free people, and to re-establish order and peace at any cost. The Government is a contemptible failure if it can only protect the lives and property and secure the comfort of the people by compromising with the violators of law and and the instigators of violence and crime.

NO ARBITRATION.

"Just now it is more important to teach ignorant men dwelling among us, misled and used as tools by citizens of other States, that at whatever cost and inconvenience to the public, Pennsylvania will use the whole power of Government to protect not only the man who wants to work, but his wife and children while he is at work, and to punish every man who by instigation or by overt acts attempts to deprive any man of his liberty to work. Under these conditions we decline to accept Mr. Mitchell's considerate offer to let our men work on terms he names. He has no right to come from Illinois to dictate terms, on the acceptance of which anarchy and crime shall cease in Pennsylvania. He must stop his people from killing, maiming and abusing Pennsylvania citizens and from destroying property. He must stop it because it is unlawful and not because of any bargain with us. We will add to our offer to continue the wages existing at the time of the strike, and to take up each colliery and adjust any grievance, this further condition: If the employers and employes at any particular colliery cannot reach a satisfactory adjustment of an alleged grievance, it shall be referred to the judges of the Court of Common Pleas of the district in which the colliery is situated for final determination. (Signed) Geo. F. Baer, president Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company, and Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal & Iron Company, and Temple Iron Company."

MINERS' STATEMENT.

To this the official representative of the Miners' Union replied in effect: "Thanks to the generous assistance rendered us by our fellow-workers in this and other lands, thanks to a justice loving American public, whose sympathies are always on the side of right, we are able to continue the struggle indefinitely. But confident of our ability to demonstrate to any impartial tribunal the equity of our demands for higher wages and improved environment, we propose that the issues culminating in this strike shall be referred to you and a tribunal of your own selection, and agree to accept your reward upon all or any of the questions involved. If you will accept this responsibility, and the representatives of the coal operators will signify their willingness to have your decision incorporated in an agreement for not less than one year or more than five years, as may be mutually determined between themselves and the anthracite coal mine workers, and will pay the scale of wages which you and the tribunal appointed by you shall award, we will immediately call a convention and recommend a resumption of work, upon the understanding that the wages which shall be paid are to go into effect from the day upon which work is resumed. Very respectfully yours, John Mitchell, president of the United Miners of America; John Fahey, Thomas Duffy, D. D. Nichols, district presidents."

The President asked Mr. Mitchell if he had anything further to say.

CHANGES DESIRED.

Mr. Mitchell said: "The charge made by the gentlemen, that twenty murders have been committeed in the anthracite coal regions during the present strike, is untrue. If they will name the men and will show that they have committed the murders, I will resign my position. That is a fair proposition. Mr. President, that is a fair example of how our organization and our people are maligned. The truth of thematter is, as far as I know, there have been seven deaths, unfortunately. No one regrets them more than I do. Three of them were committed by the coal and iron police, and no one else has been charged with them. God knows the miners do not escape being charged with everything done there. They speak about burnings. There was a reward offered for burnings. I can bring affadavits of a hundred people if necessary, that the lightning caused one burning that they charged to the United Mine Workers, Mr. President. I have admitted on more than one occasion that there has been some lawlessness, but I will say that a large proportion of such lawlessness has been provoked by criminals who have been brought into the anthracite regions to recruit and coal and iron police. I want to say, Mr. President, that I feel keenly the attacks made upon me and my people, but I came here with the intention of doing nothing and saying nothing that would adversely affect a reconciliation."

PROPOSITION REFUSED.

The President then asked the representatives of the anthracite companies whether they would accept Mr. Mitchell's proposition. They answered, "No.." In response to a further question from the President they stated that they would have no dealings whatever with Mr. Mitchell, looking toward a settlement of the question at issue, and that they had no further proposition to make, save what was contained in the statement of Mr. Baer.

At about 5 o'clock the conference was brought to a close without agreement.

TERRIBLE DOG FIGHT

Wife Cleared the Room for the Sport—Animals Suffer Terribly

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 6.—For some time the Black Country has been free from the unenviable reputation it once possessed for brutal sports, but a case in which the Wolverhampton stipendiary gave his decision calls to mind other days.

John Bellingham, a locksmith, of Banker's Hill Cottage, Bilston, was charged with allowing his cottage to be used for a dog-fight. According to the evidence given at a previous hearing, the affair was one of a horrible character. Bellingham's wife had cleared the bedroom and in it a ring had been formed or orange boxes, the floor had been sanded and scales provided to weigh the dogs. Some twelve or fourteen men came to the cottage on September 1 with two dogs, a brindled and a white bul.dog.

The gate was locked, and in the room the dogs fought for an hour and a half. The police had heard that a fight was contemplated, but they did not arrive until everything was over. They could hear the howling of a dog in pain, but an entrance could not be effected. Ultimately when the wife was found and the door opened Bellingham had fled. The brindled dog was dead, but the white one was still living.

The evidence of a veterinary witness showed that the muscles of the throat and neck of both dogs had been completely bitten away. They had been in perfect condition, having been trained for the fight, and both weighed 26 1-2 pounds. Their sufferings must have been terrible. Bellingham said that he had promised to bury them after the fight was over.

In passing judgment the magistrate said he was sorry he had not power to send the defendant to jail without the option of a fine. He thoroughly deserved such a punishment. Nothing could be said in his favor. He fined him $25 and costs—$30 in all—or one month.

—A general change of time will take effect on the C.P.R. on Sunday, Oct. 12.

—Everybody reads The Times. It costs only 10c. per month delivered at your home.

TWO THOUSAND LIVES BY PELEE'S LAST BURST

Village After Village Destroyed and Inhabitants Flee

The Whole Island of Martinique Believed to be Doomed to Destruction

Fort De France, Martinique, Oct. 6.—Your correspondent has just returned to inspect the villages destroyed by the last eruption of Mount Pelee on August 30. The whole world has been stupefied by the disaster of May 8, no such calamity having been recorded since the days of Herbanum and pompeii, and scientist admitted that Mont Pelee showed greater force of destruction than anything known in history, but the monster had not yet shown its full power. In a supreme convulsion it was to manifest its strength on August 30. More victims were wanted, and, although the number is limited compared to that of the first disaster, it is nevertheless great. More than two thousand sleep now for eternity at Morne Rouge, Ajoupa Bouilon and Carbet, wrapped in the same shroud of ashes and mud.

WARNED BY BLACK CLOUDS.

In Fort De France reports had already been received from the northern villages that the eruptions were constant and increasing, and the inhabitants were in great agony of suspense, awaiting some terrible phenomenon—some said the collapse of the island—when, at half-past eight o'clock in the evening, thick black clouds, red tinted, accompanied by electric sparks and showers of all colors, began to roll over the mountains.

At that hour of the evening the square was filled with citizens and the benches on each side of the promenade were occupied by pretty Creoles, making merry with their gay laughter. At first the spectacle, made beautiful by the electric display, to be compared with that of magnificent fireworks, attracted the attention of all, and the gay laughter ceased, to give place to admiration of the spectacle; but more and more the crowd increased approaching Fort De France, and as the word "eruption" was repeated along the streets the residents began to form groups and express thoughts of anxiety and fear. Some were seen hurrying home, while others asked what was best to be done.

Deep, mournful silence was prevailing when, suddenly, at nine o'clock a terrific report was heard from the mountain, and under some terrific submarine pressure the sea, roaring and foaming, rushed over the wharves and invaded the streets.

The panic can more easily be imagined than told. Men and women ran in all directions, going they knew not where, the most bound to the hills, while a shower of hot ashes and little stones poured from the heaven.

Accustomed to live by the monster, and months having gone by since the destruction of St. Pierre, the inhabitants had discarded all thoughts of Mont Pelee and its very existence had seemed forgotten, but all at once they were called back to reality and the bravest of the brave felt his heart melt within his breast.

THE END.

Had the end come? No one doubted it. The whole sky seemed aflame and the earth began to shake, giving the impression of a ship under full way. The streets were filled with the cries of women and children, who—some loaded with the most precious things, while others in their scare had grabbed only a useless piece of furniture—stood craving help.

In a few minutes the city was abandoned. Inhabitants, in the fear of an immense wave that must destroy Fort De France, sought safety on the higher ground, where many remained until daylight.

The Suchet, having on board Governor Lemaire, once more steamed away for the north at half-past five o'clock the next morning to resume the pitiful work of previous days. She returned twelve hours later, bringing back five hundred wounded persons, most of whom were fatally burned, and reported that more than fifteen hundred had been killed at Morne Rouge, Ajoupa Bouillon and Carbet.

The sad scenes of previous days were again witnessed. Every minute refugees arrived by the mountain roads to the city, helpless, destitute, begging for food and shelter, and the square began to fill with them. From the steamers Ruby and Topaz, which the government had also sent to the north, and which returned with the Suchet, many more refugees were added to the number.

BELIEVES ISLAND DOOMED.

"I have seen dreadful things during these last three months," said an officer of the Suchet to me. "Many a night have I spent sleepless, listening to the roaring of the monster, and many a time have I sent, in spirit, to the dear ones at home in France a last farewell, believing that the end had come. I have witnessed scenes of horror impossible to describe, enough to sadden one's whole life, but never have I understood as much as to-day, since the disaster of August 30, the destructive force of Mont Pelee.

"The whole island is doomed, and unless we are ordered away from here I feel that my grave awaits me under the lava of Mont Pelee. I shall never see the loved ones again."

The man who spoke these words had been promoted for gallantry during the events of May 8 and 10.

Soldiers were sent by the mountain roads, under the command of Lieutenant Renaud, to bury the victims, but little could they do, having been driven back by constant eruptions.

I landed at St. Pierre in the afternoon tried to climb the hill in the Morne Rouge direction, but so intense was the heat and smoke, that I had to withdraw. A stream of lava is running from the crater to the sea along what was once the Rivere Blanche. Large rocks follow the stream and roll with immense noise. Mont Pelee is wrapped with a thick, black cloud, screening the crater from view, and the darkness at times is made more impressive by electric sparks, purple tinted.

I gazed upon the silent city of death a moment before returning to my craft. It seemed more desolate than during my previous visits. The streets are now filled with mud and ashes, burying deep the broken down walls.

Will the inhabitants of the abandoned village ever return? Will the volcano peacefully resume the rest of past centuries after such convulsions? Who can tell? But until perfect calm is restored and the volcano shows no more signs of life the entire north is to be abandoned. Were another terrific eruption to take place I believe the zone of destruction would be still greater than in the previous ones.

KILLED SON WOUNDED WIFE

Terrible Crime of a Man Near Sault Ste. Marie - Son Was Protecting Mother

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 4.—In East Korah yesterday morning Noah Hale shot and killed his son and broke his wife's arm with the same shot. The father two weeks ago had been bound over to keep the peace for threatening his wife. The son had invited his mother to his house, presumably to keep her out of danger. This enraged the old man, who went immediately to his son's home taking a loaded gun with him. He found Mrs. Hale and the son sitting at breakfast with their backs towards the door, through which the desperate man entered. Without a word of warning the old man fired the contents of the gun at the young man, the charge entering the left side over the hip. A portion of the charge struck and broke Mrs. Hale's arm. After being shot, the young man arose and with a cry ran out of the house a few steps and fell unconscious to the ground. The murderer then turned to the wife, clubbing her with the butt end of the gun almost into insensibility, after which he returned to his home, ate breakfast, and then, it is supposed, started for the bush, and has not yet been captured. The victim was 20 years of age and had been married six months.

The following statement was made by Mrs. Hale to Corner McLurg: "Frank and I were at breakfast, when my husband, Noah Hale, opened the door and fired at my son, and then struck me on the head with a gun, when I ran out. My son gave a cry and ran out before I did. I never saw my son again. My son cried 'Oh, dear,' and put his hand to his side. My husband followed me out and struck me several times with the gun and knocked me down. He went away for a while, and then came back andsaid: 'I have killed Frank, and then he struck me again. I lay quiet, and saw him go away. I then got up and walked to Mrs. Panter's, where I now am. My husband is subject to very bad spells for years. I was at my son's home. He asked me to go and live with him, where I have been about two weeks. I never gave my husband any cause to ill-treat me, nor has my son, as I know. I think I will get well."

Fire at a Threshing

Winnipeg, Oct. 2.—While threshing on the farm of Henry Zimmerman, about three and one-half miles north west of Bagot, a sheaf of wheat, which smokestack of the engine, was ins- smokestack of the engine, was inadvertently passed through the separator and instantly fired the whole interior of the machine, after which it passed out and ignited the stack.

In a moment everybody was excitedly trying to save something. The proprietor, Robert Hunt, had his hands and one side of his face badly burned in his efforts to hitch on to the tongue of the separator and remove it to a place of safety, but, although with the assistance of the men in his plucky effort, in ten minutes the machine was a total wreck. The gang worked hard to save the grain, but despite of all they could do about sixty-five bushels were burned.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION

Mr. Whitney Says the Conservatives Have an Even Chance of Winning

Toronto, Oct. 4—Mr. J. P. Whitney, Provincial Conservative leader, is quite optimistic in his views of the prospects of the party in Provincial politics. Speaking to Times' representative, he said the he hoped much from the bye-elections, which must be brought off within a few months before the House meets.

"The party stands a good chance of winning in North Renfrew," he said. "The constituency is a close one, though, and the fight will be a tight one. But no matter how the election trials go, and even if Mr. Ross opens the House with a majority of two or three, the battle will only just have begun," he continued. "The election trials and the by-elections are only the first line of attack."

The political situation throughout the province he described as being very calm. The coming election trials will be the first thing to ruffle the surface of events, and after that the leader looks for matters to warm up, as he expects the house to meet in January or early in February.

Asked about the talk of a coalition government Mr. Whitney referred to the statements he had already made upon the subject, andsaid there was nothing to be added.

Hon. Mr. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, when asked by the Times regarding the outlook, said: The Government is all right, and will stand.

REVOLUTIONARY EFFECT ON ATLANTIC TRAFFIC

Excitement in Hamburg Over Arrangement with Cunard Line--Berber Tribe Give In

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 6.—The announcement of the arrangement between the British Government and the Cunard Line, says a Berlin correspondent, has created some excitement at Hamburg. He states that when the Morgan Shipping Trust was arranged there was a great exhibition of gloating at the thought that the trans-Atlantic trade of Great Britain might be crippled, and that her potential supply of swift cruisers in time of war might be cut short. Hamburg journals now take a different tone. The Jeremiad alludes to the revolutionary effect which the policy of subvention "inaugurated by the British Government," must exercise upon the whole north Atlantic passenger traffic.

ANXIETY AMONG ITALIANS.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 6.—A Rome correspondent says that the irritation manifested in the United Kingdom at the reported intention of Emperor William to receive the Boer Generals, Botha, De Wet, and Delarey, is causing anxiety among Italian diplomats and statesmen, who have been exercised during the last three years by the position arising out of the concentration of British attention on the South African war, and who hoped that at the conclusion of peace Great Britain would return to a more normal international situation. Giornale D'Italia publishes an article, which the correspondent says is "evidently from an authorative pen" in which it is stated that the growing British hostility toward Germany must force the latter power to think of her defense, and to promote a continental league against Anglo-Saxon imperialism. The writer says in the event of serious anti-British rapprochement between the dual and triple alliances, Great Britain would be unable to count on Italy, which state, is forced to choose between hostility to Great Britain and to continental empires, must side with the latter.

SUBMISSION OF BERBER TRIBES.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 6.—A correspondent at Fez cables that he has returned from Mekinez, where a representative of the Berber tribes arrived on Sept 24, and offered absolute submission to the Moroccan Government. They will pay any fine that the Sultan may levy, will return all looted property, will pay damages for villages they have burned, and will accept any further punishment that may be imposed on them. The correspondent interviewed rebel leaders, who expressed their thorough weariness with fighting and their readiness to accept any terms. The authorities of Mekinez entrusted to the correspondent the mission of taking the news of the surrender of the rebels and the terms of the armistice to the Sultan. Immediately after his return at Fez he had an audience with his Majesty.

SLOANE IS NOT GAMBLING

Special to The Times.

Paris, Oct. 6.—"I have had nothing to do with any card schemes in Paris. I do not frequent any of the clubs, where cards are played. I am not connected with any horse-pulling combinations, and never was, and have not profited by any betting scheme, or arrangement whatever, but on the contrary, I have lost nearly all my savings, and am ready and anxious to earn a legitimate living by means of my profession whenever the powers of the turf are pleased to allow me to do so." So spoke Tod Sloane to a correspondent. "Furthermore," continued the former King of Jockeys, "I regret more then I ever regretted anything in my career, this agitation in connection with the Paris turf scandal, as I have been endeavoring for a long time to set myself right with the various jockey clubs and the public, in order that I might rehabilitate myself and benefit by my position."

AGITATION IN SOUTH HUNGARY.

Special to The Times.

London, Oct. 6.—A Vienna correspondent says the Politische Correspondenz publishes an important communication on the pan-Germanic agitation. It states that certain German newspapers continue to resent the conviction of German journalist in South Hungary under the press laws, as affecting the cause of the German people themselves. The communication adds: "In reply to those papers it must frankly be stated that the whole of that part of South Hungary is honeycombed with pan-Germanic intrigue. Pamphlets lampooning Hungary have sown seeds of dissension and hostility between the peaceful elements." The correspondent says there is reason to believe that this pan-Germanic agitation in Hungary has assumed such proportions as to cause concern to the authorities, who seem determined to deal promptly and efficaciously with the promoters of the agitation.

INCREASE OF STUDENTS

Toronto Educational Institutions Report Largest Attendance of Students This Year

Toronto, Oct. 6.—Several of the higher educational institutions of the city opened their doors to-day and began the enrolment of students. At University college 140 registered in the first year, twenty-five over last year, and 90 in each other year. In the medical faculty 110 registered, 85 in the first year. It is expected that this will be increased to 120, slightly in excess of last year.

At Victoria 131 registered in the various years. The near completion of the woman's residence proving a drawing card.

At Knox college Principal Caven delivered an address and announced that no successor to the late Prof. Halliday Douglas had yet been appointed. The committee in charge of the matter has asked for another month.

AMERICAN GENERALS MISTAKEN FOR BOERS

Frankfort Populace Hailed Corbin, Wood and Young as the Heroes of South Africa

Special to The Times.

Berlin, Oct. 6.—The pro-Boer fever is not yet extinct in Germany. This was brought home to the American generals, Corbin, Wood and Young, the guests of the Kaiser at the army manoeuvres in Frankfort, in a very amusing, but peculiarly embarrassing manner. For several days the newspapers had been anticipating the arrival of the Boer generals, DeWet, Delarey and Botha, in this city. So when Generals Corbin, Wood and Young were spied among the royal guests, with their simple khaki uniforms and slouch campaign hats, they were at once mistaken for the Boer leaders.

Whenever they stopped groups of soldiers surrounded them, while camp followers who watched the manoeuvres from a distance cheered the approach of the American generals with cries of "Hoch lebe die Buren!" At Frankfort crowds thronged the hotel at which the alleged Boer generals were stopping, and it required much explanation and gesticulation to correct the false report. Generals Corbin, Wood and Young nevertheless enjoyed their popularity.

AN AMERICAN GANG DRUMMED OUT OF FRANCE

Twelve Chevaliers of Industry Who Posed as Millionaires and Figured in Turf Swindling Exposed

Special to The Times.

Paris, Oct. 6.—The Minister of the Interior has signed an order expelling twelve Americans from France. They are members of a gang that has long been notorious for its dishonest operations on race courses and in Parisian hotels. These fellows pretend to be American millionaires and always stop at prominent hotels patronized by rich Americans. The names of the men will convey no idea of their identity, as they have used many aliases.

The French police quietly seized the men and sent them beyond the frontier. This action followed communications from the London and New York police. So powerful had the gang become that even hotel managers feared to expel them, although they had knowledge of their crookedness.

PEAT FUEL

It is predicted that the next movement in Maine in the direction of economy will be the conversion of peat into merchantable fuel. Peat is now coming to the front as a fuel of high efficiency. Lewiston and Auburn are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars for fuel drawn from distant coal fields, at a time when coal is marked up by the trusts and their warfare, and that, too, when there are limitless resources of peat available. A company has just been organized there to make fuel from peat. The Company's officials, through Professor Randall, make the following statement:

"We have succeeded in manufacturing a fuel which for good reasons we call coal, because it contains the same elements that coal contains. We call it synthetical coal, because it is formed by synthesis. This coal has a heating value slightly superior to soft coal. It will be found that in every state in New England there are almost inexhaustible bogs of peat. Possibly there is no article that has received so little thought and attention from practical men as has this valuable material. For instance, from the Massachusetts report of the Geological Survey I quote:—"In nearly fifty towns of Eastern Massachusetts taken as a fair average of its quantity in other towns and other counties, it would follow that 80,000 acres, or 125 square miles, are covered with peat, having an average thickness of six feet. This area and depth would yield not far from 200,000,000 tons."

As the readers of The Times are aware, extensive peat bogs exist in many places throughout Eastern Ontario, and their development is only a question of a very short time. Costly experiments have been made for the conversion of this substance into fuel, with the result that a system of manufacture has been discovered, which is only waiting capital and energy to develop. In this connection much is due to Mr. A. L. Davis, of town, who, at a great sacrifice of time and money, succeeded in demonstrating beyond question the utility and value of Canadian peat as fuel.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Good time now for citizens to take down their front fences and burn 'em.

Domestic grief is no respecter of persons. Over in the States a farmer's boy was compelled to shoot his father to protect his mother from abuse; while young King Alphonso of Spain, of sad but glorious destiny, would like to horsewhip his mother for marrying the Master of the Royal Horse—which, we suppose, is the imperial way of eloping with the coachman.

Another step toward the final overthrow and elimination of "scabs" has been taken in Gopherland. The young women of the clerk's union of St. Paul have decided to form a league, no member of which shall accept "attentions" from non-union men. The lover must show his union label; and no man destitute of a union card can hear "yes" from any of those unalterably union lips. The plan is meritorious, but there are difficulties in its way. Can all the pretty girls be induced to join the union? And that young rascal, Dan Cupid, who loves to organize unions of two, but wears no tag himself and seems to be an incorrigible independent?

FAST STEAMSHIP LINE

The Cunard Company Arrangements Considered Highly Advantageous

Special to The Times.

New York, Oct. 2— I. N. Ford cables the Tribune from London as follows: The English press continues to discuss the steamship agreements with unimpaired enthusiasm, and with a disposition as the St. James' Gazette remarks to be thankful for small favors. The Cunard Company is admitted to have behaved well, as to have made an excellent bargain. Close reasoners do not perceive anything in the agreement that will prevent the managers from entering into a pooling arrangement with the Morgan combination similar similar to the one which has already made with the German companies.

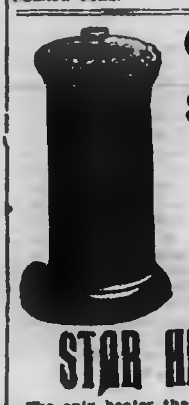
Good for the Company.

The Cunard Company's arrangements for the construction of two steamships of superior speed are considered to be highly advantageous to the company, especially as there are no requirements for a continuous operations of these expensive vessels when their records have been made. Several critics point out that the would have been cheaper for the Admiralty to have built two 24-knot cruisers outright, rather than to have agreed to pay enormous subventions for the sake of beating the German record. On the other hand, English merchants and manufacturers are fully aware of the extensive use made by German exporters of the fact that the fastest ships afloat are under the German flag, and that the general effect of this advertisement on the industries of the Fatherland is worth what is paid in subsidies.

Canadian officials are convinced from the liberal terms offered to the Cunard Company that the British Government will accept the Ottawa proposals for a fast service if satisfactory tenders can be arranged. There never has been any doubt that the Imperial authorities here would pay one-third of the subsidy. The Canadian position has been improved by the conclusion of the two agreements, for the British Government, after negotiating with the Cunard Company and the Morgan combination, cannot reasonably decline to co-operate with the Dominion in establishing a fast mail service on the Atlantic and Pacific.

A Subsidy War.

Shipping experts talk of a war of subsidies as a result of the Cunard deal. It is expected here that the United States and Germany will retaliate. The British Government's action will unquestionably be made the subject of a debate in the House of Commons when Parliament opens. There is a divergance of views on the subject, even among members of the Cobden Club.



COAL $5.00 A TON WITH THE WONDERFUL STAR HEATER

The only heater that is guaranteed to give satisfaction with soft as well as hard coal. As a fuel economizer it is unequalled, producing heat on about one-third the coal used in any other heater in existence.

The Star has a tube behind for the escape of the gas. As anyone who uses soft coal knows, the gas accumulates under the fresh coal, and if there is no escape there will be explosions and puffs of smoke. In the Star this disappears in the gas escape. The Star has a sliding damper and ornamental door of mica.

After being filled, the Star will heat for 48 hours without attention. It will hold fire and give out heat longer than any other stove.

PRICE LIST

When filling the stove always shut the draught door at the bottom.

Keep the small opening in the back pipe closed except when cleaning.

Clean the back pipe every two weeks.

COAL CONSUMERS, ATTENTION!

We are using one No. 3 Star stove in our large rooms, where formerly we had four large wood heaters, and get more heat now than before. The wood stoves cost us $4.50 every week for fuel, and the Star stove which we are now using costs us only $1.50, making a saving of $3.00 per week in the price of fuel—which would soon pay for the stove. We can recommend this stove to any person wanting a first-class heater. We would not use any other stove that is made.

ST. PETER'S T.A.S.
M. J. Serro, Chairman Trustees.

We certify that we have in use one No. 3 Star stove in our large pool and billiard room, the size of which is 45x32 ft., with 15 ft. ceiling. We have perfect heat, and the most coal we have used on the coldest day yet has been three scuttles in 24 hours. We are so well pleased with the stove that we would not use any other.

ROCAMORA & CALLAHAN.

I have been using a No. 3 Star stove in the sitting room at the City Hotel for some time past, and it has proved so satisfactory that I have ordered two more to replace two stoves in the upstairs. The Star gives more heat than the other stoves with half the amount of coal.

MARTIN CONNORS.

We have in use in our composing room a No. 3 Star coal stove, and wish to state that it is giving eminent satisfaction. The entire absence of gas by the escape provided, the increase of heat and the saving in coal are special features of the Star, and it requires a minimum of attention.

THE MOONSTONE SPHINX

By Mrs C N Williamson

Author of The Barn Stormers, 'Fortune's Sport, Miss Nobody, Her Royal Highness Lady Mary of the Dark House, etc.

Only a word, which she could deny afterwards, and those two horrible men, Wantage and Jeffrey, would let her alone. There would be no more torturing persuasion, no more attempts at actual force. He had said that he would "bring her to her knees." Now he almost saw her at his feet.

Winifred felt physically weak. Her eyes traveled again to the mirror, and she shivered from head to foot as she saw herself decked by the old woman's hands for the sacrifice. If she fainted again they would do what they chose with her. She would be carried out, bound on Selim's back, and all those terrible eyes in the audience would see her—like that. And she might faint. She had suffered a very great shock tonight, and besides, for days she had been half-starving herself to make the five guineas last until salary should begin once more. She had had nothing to eat that day but bread and cocoa.

Supposing she sent Lionel Macaire the message he wanted? Somehow she could hide herself afterwards; and she would work hard—oh, so hard, until she could pay back every penny of his money which she had had and spent—a hundred pounds, as he reminded her. Surely if ever it were right to do evil that good might come it would be right now.

"The gentleman said there'd be an answer," suggested the dresser.

"Tell him——" began Winifred; but her voice died away. Then her eyes lightened, and her drooping head was suddenly lifted. "This is my answer!" she exclaimed, and tore the letter into pieces, folding it again, and tearing again, until the tiny white squares fell to the floor in a fluttering shower, like a miniature stage snowstorm. "When you are asked for my answer you can tell them what I did. And now please go away. I shall take off those hateful things that you have put on me, and dress myself to go home. And I would rather be alone to do it."

"Oh, miss, you must play the scene, you know," urged the woman. "And it's so close now. When they sent me in to you, there was but half an hour first, and I worked as fast as I could. Only think, the other ladies and gentlemen are on the stage now. They'll soon be ready for you, and it won't do for me to let you be late. You'd never be allowed to go home; and just think how bad it would be to be sued for breach of contract. They'd make you pay a lot of damages. Hundreds and hundreds of pounds, maybe."

"I couldn't pay," desperately retorted Winifred. "I would have no money."

"Then they could put you in prison," said the old woman, far more intent on persuading her charge to be sensible than upon accuracy of statement. She really did believe what she said, and the girl in her ignorance could offer no contradiction.

They could put her in prison! Perhaps that was what Lionel Macaire had been working for all through. It would surely kill her mother.

At the thought of the dear little loving woman, who was thinking of her now at this very moment, far away in that nursing home in London, it was as if a great hand had grasped Winifred's heart and squeezed it. With a sob she broke into a storm of crying. "Oh, mother, mother!" she sobbed. "Shall I, who love you so, be the one to kill you? Will no one help, will no one save us from this horror?"

CHAPTER XV.

The Great Scene.

Mr. Jeffrey gave Mrs. Purdy, the dresser, as much time as he could conveniently allow, and then he returned to the door. "How do you get on?" he enquired, anxiously. "Is it going to be all right?"

"I get on as well as you might expect, sir," came the old woman's voice in reply. "'Twill be all right. Don't you fear."

"I can't give you longer than five minutes more, I'm afraid," he answered. "Can you manage with that?"

"Needs must, when somebody drives," he could hear an irreverent mumble from within.

Not far away stood the horse, Selim, held by his groom. The animal was used to the wings now and the lights and sounds of loud voices on the adjacent stage, so that he was quiet enough. The strapping-gear was right. Nothing remained but for Mazeppa to be fastened on the beautiful black horse's back, when his skin of jetty satin would make a marvelously effective background for the slim, apparently nude figure thrown across it.

Jeffrey listened eagerly to what was going on upon the stage. They were "working up" with every word now to Mazeppa's thrilling entrance, which was bound to stir the audience, shocking some, pleasing others. It occurred to him as he stood impatiently waiting that this was a much better version than the old one, and, as he had altered it, under advice from Mr. Macaire and Wantage, he was entitled to take some credit to himself. If only all went well with this one scene, prosperous days might come back to him.

Everyone knew that the millionaire was interested in several theatres in London and in the provinces, and he controlled two or three powerful papers as well. Wantage was right; Macaire was a man to be conciliated.

Four minutes passed, and he could remain passive no longer. He went back to the door of the dressing-room, which had Winifred Gray's name printed neatly on a card, tacked on the raised space between the panels.

"Time's up!" he announced, with a warning rap. "I really must have Miss Gray now."

"Dead or alive, eh, sir?" came from the other side.

"Yes—if there was a question of dying. I must have her conscious or unconscious. The stage can't be kept waiting again. They're playing slow now, and, by Jove, if Mazeppa and that horse aren't ready to go on, there'll be some lively faking—which means the play'll be a failure, certain."

"Give me just three minutes longer, can't you?" pleaded Mrs. Purdy. "Them silk tights is the dickens and all to get on another person that's in a dead faint—no more life in her limbs than a doll. But we're 'most' ready. And a real picture she'll be, I do assure you, sir."

"Then, for goodness' sake, don't stick there with your mouth at the door, but go back and finish your 'picture,'" growled Jeffrey, who would have yelled instead if there had not been an audience in the house with ears quick to hear any overloud sounds behind the scenes.

By this time Selim was getting restless, and stamping his iron-shod hoofs,

You Can Buy Shares Now at 30 Cts. Which in Six Months Promise to be worth $5.00

ALMOST SOLID COPPER

One 18 inch vein of 90 per cent copper (almost the solid metal) has been opened up in Copper Queen Extension Claim, one of the six constituting our Montana property, while mining a thirty-foot vein of free milling 18 per cent copper ore, carrying thirty ounces of silver to the ton.

This is so far ahead of our expectations, brilliant as our former prospects were, that we realize the IMMEDIATE building of a mill to handle this magnificent output, equalled in richness only by the Calumet and Hecla mines, is an ABSOLUTE NECESSITY. This will make OUR OWN portion of the stock, as well as THAT ACQUIRED BY THE PUBLIC, for the purposes of this immediate development, worth an immense amount of money in an exceedingly short time.

Help us build a Mill immediately by purchasing our One Dollar Shares, which are offered this week at 30 cents a Share as a Special Inducement to insure the speedy building of the Mill, and we will make your stock yield you an inordinate profit as quickly as the Mill can be put in operation.

We furnish the rich property—you furnish the mill. In a few months it will be in operation—almost before you expect it—and we divide the immense returns.

Montana Consolidated Mining Company

CONSERVATISM

Thursday, September 18th, our up-to-date daily market letter, published in the Chicago Evening Journal postscript edition, and also mailed to our correspondents, Advised Taking Profits. The following day recorded the culmination of the bull movement—a break of from $2.00 to $12.00 a share followed. Wednesday, September 24th, we Advised Purchasing for a Turn, as the drastic liquidation had spent its force. 1 to 7 points advance followed — then Advised Profit Taking.

This is Conservatism. Don't you think it is to your advantage to have an account with a firm that can keep you posted? Out-of-town accounts given special attention. Send for daily letter, it is free.

STOCK MARKETS

Matters Marketwise

New York, October 4.—The last few days' market shows how wise the powers that be are. Transactions are permitted to fall off and the market to become more quiet. This is wise inasmuch as a latent speculation at the time will soothe the money condition, while on the other hand active speculation, which would accompany manipulation for the advance, would aggravate money rates and cause the banks to tighten up the purse strings as a corrective, and stocks would as a result for the time being collapse. Outside the money conditions market factors are so bullish that the manipulation on the up-tack would bring on a host of outside orders, which for a couple of weeks or more is not to be generally desired. Hence there will probably be a short rest period in the market with prices ebbing and flowing alternately within a possible radius of about two to five points. Such markets are excellent ones for traders to make money in such a situation by buying when weak and selling when strong. Many small turns can in this manner be successfully engineered to the advantage of your balance at your brokers. If you will trade in this manner, it is an unusually safe thing to do so; also and almost certain to be productive of profit. Inside of three weeks this state of affairs will more than likely terminate, and the campaign for advancing values again be renewed. As we stated a day or two ago in these letters, there never was a time when the bull cliques and insiders were so much interested in advancing prices as at present. Their assistance is consequently of value, and certain to aid them. They have with them the remarkable bullish condition of business, and of the country at large. You will remember how speedily bullish operations were recommenced after the break of May 9th, 1901. The present break was not a circumstance to that, inasmuch as that one was a regular panic; how much more likely is it therefore for bull operations to go on after the last set back when every condition warrants it so doing. There is to our mind no doubt as to the probable outcome of the present market. We look to see much better prices recorded all along the line, and transaction this fall to excel the best ever made for a day upon the New York Stock Exchange.

Summary—The market opened fever. feverish with small gains for St. Paul and Col. F. & T., the balance of the list showing initial declines with Reading the largest loser. Some two points were lost upon the failure of the meeting at Washington of the coal operators and miners representatives with the President to accomplish anything. Further small losses were recorded in the first hour, then the market improved just prior to issuance of the Bank statement. Pressed steel shares were specially firm; the bank statement appeared a few minutes later, Reserves decreased about a million and one half. Loans decreased two millions, while deposits fell a little over four millions. The market fell away a bit after the announcement.

HAIGHT & FREESE.

The Grain Market

Winnipeg, Oct. 2.—General Superintendent Hanna, of the Canadian Northern Railway, stated yesterday that up to Tuesday night there had been 1,000,000 bushels of wheat marketed on points on the C. N. R. and 1,015 cars have been loaded, over 600,000 bushels of grain delivered at Port Arthur, this quantity being represented by 650 cars. Ninety per cent. of the C. N. R. cars have a capacity of 60,000 pounds, and these have been loaded over 10 per cent. of their capacity, making 1,000 bushels to the car on an average. Mr. Hanna estimated that the quantity of grain delivered by the new road by lake ports is nearly 650,000 bushels.

—On Thursday John Clancy had his foot crushed at the Canal works.

—A general change of time will take effect on the C.P.R. on Sunday, Oct. 12.

—Everybody reads The Times. It cost only 25c. per month delivered at your home.

—A meeting of the Fortnightly Club will be held on Tuesday evening at the Y.M.C.A. Hall for the purpose of re-organization.

—Speaking of peat about the only peat that will be burned in Peterborough for heating purposes this season is our old friend Pete Ransom.

The action for damages brought by Mr. Kindred against the American Cereal Company, and which was to have been tried at the forthcoming Assizes here, has been settled. The company paid $500 to the plaintiff. R. B. Stone for plaintiff, Dennistoun, Peck & Stevenson for the defendants.

Likes the Town

A few days ago a stranger visited the town and agreed to invest $1000 in the stock of one of our industries. Mr. Wm. Fair, the well known broker, drove him around the burg, and the result was that he doubled the investment. He thinks there is a great future for Peterborough.

The Bobcaygeon Fair

Mr. John E. Belcher, County Engineer, went up to the great Bobcaygeon Fair on Friday, and on his return told The Times that it was a stupendous aggregation of agricultural products, intermingled with live stock and arts. Crowds of people, who could hardly be accomodated in the exhibition grounds, were on hand, while the live stock—particularly horses—was exceptionally good. They evidently know how to run a show in Bobcaygeon.

Mr. Letellier's Thanks

Mr. Letellier, whose new barns and outhouses were destroyed by fire on Friday afternoon, desires to publicly express his thanks to Mr. Holmes, superintendent of the Cordage Works, for the prompt assistance he rendered in saving the rest of the property. Mr. Holmes hurried to the fire with Babcock extinguishers, and aided by some of his men, stopped its progress. Mr. Letellier also desires to thank his neighbors for their kind services on his behalf.

Royalty to Visit Canada

London, Oct. 1—It is reported that King Edward's youngest niece, the charming Princess Victoria of Battenburg, has won the King's consent to her long cherished project of visiting the United States and Canada, accompanied by a suite of royal personages, and that her visit will occur next year at the time Sir Thomas Lipton will again try to "lift" the America's cup.

The princess inherits her mother's love of yachting, and a few days ago was unanimously elected the first honorary lady member of the Royal Yacht squadron. Princess Victoria has never fully recovered from the great grief which clouded her childhood, the death of her gallant young father, whose devotion to his little daughter was one of the most pleasing traits in his fine character.

As her name implies, her highness was a god-child of the late sovereign and of the Empress Eugenie.

A GROWING INDUSTRY

The Manufacture of Fertilizers Gradually Developing in the Country

The manufacture of fertilizers in Canada is a growing industry, and one that is bound to develop into large proportions. For many years Canadian farmers have been backward, as compared with the tillers of the soil in the United States and other countries.

In Hamilton large fertilizer works exist, which are now being patronized by thousands of farmers in Western Ontario. In Peterborough similar works are also in operation, through the enterprise and push of Mr. George Stevens. But our farmers are not yet acquainted with the value of high class fertilizers, and the result is that Mr. Stevens is obliged to ship the product of his factory to the United States and other distant points. If our farmers only realized the value of good fertilizers, they would never allow a dollar's worth to be shipped abroad. Mr. Stevens manufactures only the higher grades, and, in order to induce farmers to use it, will sell it to local people slightly under cost.

Mr. Stevens has requested the Times to extend a cordial invitation to the public to visit his establishment, between 7 and 12 o'clock this, (Monday) morning. The factory is situated immediately south of the Roman Catholic cemetery.

THE LATE ROBT. STEWART

The Funeral Took Place on Saturday to the Little Lake Cemetery

The funeral of the late Robert Stewart, who met with the fatal accident on the C.P.R. track, near Smith's Falls, on Thursday last, took place on Saturday, from the residence of the brother-in-law of the deceased, Mr. Harry Donnelly, and was largely attended.

The meagre particulars published in the Times on Saturday is about all that is known of the sad occurrence. His remains arrived in town on Saturday morning from Smith's Falls, where they had been prepared for burial.

A SPLENDID INVESTMENT

The Stock of the Montana Consolidated Mining Company

We call the attention of our readers to the proposition in our financial page, of the Montana Consolidated Mining Company, of which Messrs. M. P. H. Hillyer & Co., bankers, 53 Broadway, New York, are the fiscal agents.

The Company offers its $1 shares for 35c., as a special inducement to ensure the speedy building of the mill, which it is proposed to erect. There is no doubt that the stock will rapidly increase in value, as soon as the mill is running.

Toothache Cured in One Minute

Saturate some batting with Polson's Nerviline and place in the cavity of the tooth. Rub the painful part of the face with Nerviline, bind in a hot flannel, and the toothache will disappear immediately. Nerviline is a splendid household remedy for cramps, indigestion, summer complaint, rheumatism, neuralgia, and toothache. Powerful, penetrating, safe and pleasant for internal and external use. Price 25c. Try Nerviline.

Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for biliousness.

A GOOD SUGGESTION

To the Editor of The Times.

Sir,—I see that an effort is being made to reorganize the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, and a worthy effort it is. There is no earthly reason why Peterborough should not have one of the best agricultural fairs in the Dominion. All that is needed, as The Times aptly puts it, is a good start, and good management.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have a suggestion to make, which I think should be adopted: Let a strong deputation say, of Hon. J. R. Stratton, Senator Cox, R. M. Dennistoun, A. W. Cressman, Robt. Fair, W. H. Robertson, F. H. Dobbin, J. M. Brooks, D. W. Dumble, R. M. Elliott, Mayor Denne, Ald. Turner and a few others wait on Mr. O. McGill and Richard Hall, trustees of the Nicholls estate, and endeavor to get them to provide exhibition grounds and buildings, and lease them to the association at a normal rental. I am sure, Mr. Editor, if the matter was properly brought before the executors, there would be little difficulty in the way.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I am, yours etc.,

PROGRESS.

Nervous and Sleepless

There is just one cure and that is plenty of food for the blood and nerves, which is best supplied in Ferrozone, than which no blood builder, nerve tonic or strength producer is better. Ferrozone promotes healthy digestion, which results in improved nutrition. The blood grows rich and red, furnishes stability to the entire system, and the store of nerve force and energy increases daily. A rebuilding of the constitution, new spirits, health and strength, all come from the use of Ferrozone. This marvellous renovator is sold by druggists for 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50. By mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

Mr. J. E. Middleton of North Monaghan Remembered By His Pupils

On Friday afternoon a number of the parents and friends gathered at the school, No. 1 North Monaghan, and presented their teacher, Mr. J. E. Middleton with a handsome ruby ring, accompanied by the following address:

To Mr. J. E. Middleton:

Dear Teacher,—On the eve of your departure from our midst, we the scholars and people of this school section desire to show our appreciation of the services you have rendered us during the last four years. As a teacher you have endeavored by your kindness and thoughtfulness, as well as by example and precept, to train us for our labors in this field of life. Your interest was not confined to the school alone, but to the whole section you have even proved a willing assistant.

It is needless to say we very much regret your departure from amongst us, but in your future calling we one and all wish you God speed. As a slight token of remembrance we ask you to accept this ring, Emblem of Eternity.

Our echoes roll from soul to soul
And go forever and forever.

Signed on behalf of the school.

ETHEL HATHERLY,
INA SPILSBURY,
ELLA WHITE.

The teacher, although taken entirely by surprise, found words to thank the scholars and friends for their handsome gift and expressed his warm appreciation of the many kindnesses he had received from both scholars and parents. Mr. Middleton has given up his school to attend Royal Dental College, Toronto.

IN A CRYSTAL URN

A Cardinal's Heart Removed From His Body After Death

Special to The Times.

Rome, Oct. 6.—In compliance with the late Cardinal Ledochowski's desire, as expressed in his will, Dr. Pelagallo removed the Cardinal's heart before the body was buried and placed it in a precious urn of rock crystal, which will be deposited in the little church at Gorici, Cardinal Ledochowski's birthplace.

Some days after the funeral the Pope gave an audience to Count Mieclslas Ledochowski, the Cardinal's nephew. The interview was most cordial. Leo XIII. taking again occasion to express his full approval of the campaign which Count Ledochowski had carried on against the practice of duelling, the Count having sacrificed his position to his religious convictions, and having been cashiered from the army because he refused to fight a duel with a brother officer.

The Grain Market

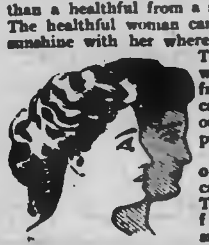
Winnipeg, Oct. 2.—General Superintendent Hanna, of the Canadian Northern Railway, stated yesterday that up to Tuesday night there had been 1,000,000 bushels of wheat marketed on points on the C. N. R. and 1,015 cars have been loaded, over 600,000 bushels of grain delivered at Port Arthur, this quantity being represented by 650 cars. Ninety per cent. of the C. N. R. cars, have a capacity of 60,000 pounds, and these have been loaded over 10 per cent. of their capacity, making 1,000 bushels to the car on an average. Mr. Hanna estimated that the quantity of grain delivered by the new road by lake ports is nearly 650,000 bushels.

Another step toward the final overthrow and elimination of "scabs" has been taken in Gopherland. The young women of the clerk's union of St. Paul have decided to form a league, no member of which shall accept "attentions" from non-union men. The lover must show his union label; and no man destitute of a union card can hear "yes" from any of those unalterably union lips. The plan is meritorious, but there are difficulties in its way. Can all the pretty girls be induced to join the union? And that young rascal, Dan Cupid, who loves to organize unions of two, but wears no tag himself and seems to be an incorrigible independent?

—A meeting of the Fortnightly Club will be held on Tuesday evening at the Y.M.C.A. Hall for the purpose of re-organization.

LIGHT AND DARK,

Day and night, sunshine and shadow are not more different from each other than a healthful from a sickly woman. The healthful woman carries light and sunshine with her wherever she goes.



The woman who suffers from ill-health casts a shadow on her own happiness and the happiness of others. She cannot help it. Those who suffer cannot smile and sing.

Ill-health in woman is generally traceable to disease of the delicate womanly organism. Many women have been restored to happiness by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

"I feel it my duty to inform you that I had been a sufferer for many years from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. O. N. Fisher, of 1861 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine for this or that complaint as my troubles became unbearable. In the spring of 1897 my husband induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and then I did not take any more for several weeks as I felt so much better, but still I was not completely cured. I commenced taking it again and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained about ten pounds in weight and one thousand of comfort, for I am a new woman once more."

The dealer who offers a substitute for "Favorite Prescription" does so to gain the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. His profit is your loss, therefore accept no substitute.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the paper-covered book, or 50 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
